Magistrate—You are a great rogue.

Prisoner—Not such a rogue as your Honor—takes me to be.

Magistrate—Put your words closer together.—Judy.

When She Forgets.

"Miss Bramley is so tender hearted that I don't believe she would injure a flea."

"Say, you ought to see her in a rush for a bargain counter."

Cruelty Sublime.

"Yes," said Miss Passelgh, "I enjoy the society of Mr. Airylad. He keeps me interested. He is always saying something that one never hears from anybody else."

"Really!" rejoined Miss Cayenne. "Has he been proposing to you, too?"—Washington Star.

His Way.

The Suitor—I love your daughter with all the intensity of my nature, sir.

Her Father—Yes—same way you smoke cigarettes.

After that, of course, nothing more could be said.

Plain Truth.

Mrs. Stittles—Tell me, Mary, what is your impression after living in so many families?

Mary—It has always surprised me what curious women men took for wives and what odd creatures women chose for husbands.—Boston Transcript.

He Couldn't Help It.

"Young Airly, the lawyer, seems to have a very high opinion of his calling."

"Why not? His office is on the fourteenth floor."

Malicious.

Miss Lilly, yesterday evening I exchanged thoughts with the famous Prof. Saduka."

"You—with him! No wonder he seemed so uninteresting last night."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Sweet and Innocent.

Miss Passay—I was so embarrassed last night. Mr. Hunkley asked point blank why I had never married.

Miss Cuttyng—I wonder how he came to do that—had he never seen you in the daylight?

Courting Trouble.

Willison—I hear that Anastasia Hardrocks is engaged to a French count who has fought seven duels.

Copley—That fellow is evidently determined to fool around till he gets hurt.

Heartless Wretch.

"Oh, dear," sighed the young mother, "I do wish I knew what to give the baby to keep him quiet."

"Why don't you try arsenic?" growled her bachelor brother, who was trying to read the evening paper.

Divorce Has Its Good Side.

Mrs. Fairleigh—Does your husband ever compare your housekeeping to his mother's?

Mrs. Warwick—Not now. He used to, though.

Mrs. Fairleigh—How did you break him of it?

Mrs. Warwick—I compared his behavior to that of my first husband.

Beginning of Hostilities.

Mr. Perkley—Oh, if you could only learn to cook as my first wife did!

Mrs. Perkley—If you were as smart as my dear first husband was you'd be rich enough to hire the best cook in the land.—Cleveland Leader.

A Sagacious Animal.

"Anything wrong wi' the sow, Johnnie?"

"No. She always shams sick o' fair days!"—London Punch.

Her Objection.

Ella—Young Hinton is such an awful bore.

Hattie—In what respect?

Ella—Oh, in several. He's continually quoting the poets, for one thing.

Hattie—But I thought you were fond of the poets?

Ella—So I am; but I don't care for phonographic reproductions of their works.

Why It Failed to Appear.

Poet—I sent a poem to a morning paper last week, but for some reason it has failed to appear.

Friend—Did you inclose a stamp?

Poet—Of course not.

Friend—Well, there's where you made a mistake. Had you done so it would no doubt have appeared in the mail next morning.

The Advantage of Being Nobody.

Kirkley—I don't believe in workin' so hard as you do. I believe in havin' a good time as you go along. Who cares what people thinks of us after we're dead?

Worthing—It's all right for such fellows as you to talk that way. You're on the safe side. Nobody will think of you till after you are dead.

Illusions of Animals.

All animals appear at times to suffer from illusions, birds and horses notably so. A swan on the Thames was recently observed fighting his own reflection as seen by him in the window of a partly sunken house-boat, which acted as a looking-glass. He had been waging battle some time when he began to have some misgivings as to whether the enemy were real or not, for at intervals he desisted from the attack, and tapped the frame of the window all round with his bill. A bird has been known to made a nest round a golf-ball, under the illusion that it was one of its eggs. Many quadrupeds, such as the horse, brave to face dangers which they can understand, become a prey to a hundred terrors of imagination due to illusions or mistakes as to what they fancy they see. Animals are frequently mistaken in sounds, and are occasionally taken in by the mimicry of a parrot; and a nervous dog, which had a special dread of thunder, has been known to go into a fit when it heard a sack of coals being emptied into the cellar, under the illusion that it was the dreaded thunder.

A serious tangle is often the result of a matrimonial knot.

Spring Is the Time

When Impurities in the Blood Should Be Expelled

America's Greatest Medicine is the Best Spring Medicine.

In winter months the perspiration, so profuse in summer, almost ceases. This throws back into the system the impurities that should have been expelled through the pores of the skin. This and other causes make the blood impure in spring. Boils, pimples, humors and eruptions then appear or some more serious disease may take its start. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy for the blood in all its forms, as proved by its marvelous cures of blood diseases. It is therefore the medicine for you to take in the spring. It expels all humors, and puts the whole system in good condition for warmer weather. Remember Safest Lightning Rods.

Electricians have lately been experimenting on the efficacy of lightning-rods, there being a difference of opinion whether a thin or a thick lightning-rod should be employed. But according to actual observations made on rods during the heavy storms, a stout rod, one having a large diameter of metal, is considered to be the safer. MM. Milde and Grenet, in watching a rod attached to the Tour St. Jacques, in Paris, during a severe thunderstorm, saw it made red hot for a space of eighteen inches by the electrical discharge passing down it. If, then, a rod is thin it may be fused by the current, and leave the building at the mercy of the lightning.

A Cheap Trick.

To manufacture a cheap kalsomine stuck on the wall with glue, claiming it to be the "same thing" or "just as good" as the durable Alabastine or to buy and sell such goods on such representations would seem a cheap trick. Some resort to it. To be safe, buy Alabastine only in packages and properly labeled.

Apparel.

"See here," exclaimed the customs house official as he held up a half dozen black bottles. "I thought you said this trunk contained nothing but wearing apparel?"

"That's what I said," answered the tourist.

"Well, what do you call these?" asked the official.

"Nightcaps," was the calm reply.—Chicago Daily News.

A Remarkable Key.

One of the oldest and most curious samples of the locksmith's art is attached to the door of the Temple Church, Fleet street, London. The key weighs seven pounds, is eighteen inches long, and, unlike other keys, it was not made for the lock. On the contrary, the lock was made for the key.

Sentimental Royal Surnames.

History gives sixty-eight sentimental surnames to emperors and kings whom it chronicles. For instance: Charles VIII. of France had the alias appellation of "the affable," Philippe I. of France that of "the amorous," Alphonse XI. of Leon and Castile "the avenger," Victor Emmanuel "re galantuomo," etc. Many potentates are ranked by history under the same alias. Eight are "good," forty-one are "great," seven are "conquerors," two "cruel," two "fair" and four "fat." But none is surnamed "the happy."

FIBROID TUMOR CONQUERED.

Expelled by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Strong Statement from Mrs. B. A. Lombard.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy, Fibroid Tumor.

The growth of these tumors is so sly that frequently their presence is not suspected until they are far advanced.

So-called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages, or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive menstruation accompanied by unusual pain extending from the ovaries down the groin and thighs.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation; secure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound right away and begin its use.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., will give you her advice free of all charge if you will write her about yourself. Your letter will be seen by women only, and you need have no hesitation about being perfectly frank.

Read what Mrs. B. A. LOMBARD, Box 71, Westdale, Mass., says:

"I have reason to think that I would not be here now if it had not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cured me of a fibroid tumor in my womb. Doctors could do nothing for me, and they could not cure me at the hospital. I will tell you about it. I had been in my usual health, but had worked quite hard. When my monthly period came on I flowed very badly. The doctor gave me medicine, but it did me no good. He said the flow must be stopped if possible, and he must find the cause of my trouble. Upon examination he found there was a fibroid tumor in my womb, and gave me treatment without any benefit whatever. About that time a lady called on me and recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; said she owed her life to it. I said I would try it, and did. Soon after the flow became more natural and regular. I still continued taking the Compound for some time. Then the doctor made an examination again, and found everything all right. The tumor had passed away, and that dull ache was gone."

The Best Novels Of 1897.

At a recent meeting of The New York Library Club a committee was appointed to go carefully over the works of fiction published in 1897, and make a list of those deemed worthy of permanent shelf room in public libraries. The books published were many, but those that came up to the committee's standard were the following: On the Face of the Waters, Mrs. F. A. Steel; St. Ives, by Robert Louis Stevenson; The Gadfly, by E. L. Voynich; School for Saints, by John Oliver Hobbes; Captains Courageous, by Rudyard Kipling; Hugh Wynne, Free Quaker, by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell; and The Choir Invisible, by James Lane Allen. Of these seven first rate novels, three were first published serially; and of the three two—and they much the most notable ones in the entire list, being Kipling's Captains Courageous and Stevenson's St. Ives—were published in McCLURE'S MAGAZINE.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts. per bottle at H. B McCord's Drug Store. 6

OTTO ROSENTINE.

A queer thing has just come to light. The Empire Stock Comprny, a theatrical organization, disbanded at Butler this week. Among other things left by them was a photograph board containing pictures of their stars. An Auburn boy carried away one of these which was labeled Otto Rosentine It is a young man in masquerade costume It doesn't take close inspection to see that it is James Eldridge. The photo is by Hoffman. Just how this traveling theater company got hold of the picture, no one knows. Mr. Eldridge had attended a masquerade here, and had this picture taken with his costume on.

WITHOUT A DOUBT,

Unquestionable Proof that Effect of LaGrippe is Cured by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The number of physical wrecks resulting from the La Grippe is truly alarming. The peculiarity of the disease asserts itself after the attack, by becoming seated in some of the nerve centers, usually the brain. The many remedies and methods of treatment by physicians have little if any benefit. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has proven to be a specific, it cures every case. A recent instance coming to our notice, is that of Joseph Lee, Entrican, Mich., who writes the following under date of Oct. 31st.

"I was prostrated from the effects of La Grippe; during the first six months I was treated constantly by two physicians without benefit. I then changed and was treated by another during the six months following with same result. I continued to grow worse until I could not sleep day or night; my mind was harassed by evil thoughts—I was frantic. In this condition I commenced using Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; after taking one bottle I felt much better; I took two more and was restored to health. I heartily endorse Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; for all forms of nervous disease." Signed Joseph Lee. Nerves are alike in all, you can be cured as Mr. Lee was.

If you have not fully recovered from La Grippe use this valuable medicine at once. Your case is the same as thousands of others cured by it. It cures every case.

WAR TALK.

The government has moved the colored regiment, 25th of the regular infantry from its various posts in the Northwest, to Chattanooga. There a part will go into camp and the rest go south where they will be stationed at Key West in the Gulf. It is the only colored infantry in the regular army.

It is now believed that in case Indiana is called on for but one regiment, that Gen. W. J, McKee will be its colonel, with Col. W. Gunder now of the 4th, as lieutenant-colonel: with Geo H. Pennington, now colonel of the 4th, G. M. Studebaker, colonel of the 3rd and Harry B. Smith of Indianapolis, as majors. Dr. Sivers, of Fort Wayne for surgeon and Rev. G. A. Carstensen of Indianapolis as chaplain.

Work in refitting our older war vessels, the monitors and rams goes on actively. Fortifications all along the coast are being put in shape and new guns mounted. Several good steel merchant ships are being changed into war vessels. The great powder factories, the arsenals, the plants for making cannon, those for making small arms and catridges are working almost night and day. Steps are being taken looking to contracts for food, clothing and medicine.

All the states are putting their trained militia into better condition In certain places volunteer regiments are being raised. And in some cases large numbers of veterans both Union and Confederates are offering their services.

Gen. Lee testifies before congress, that he feels sure the Maine was blown up by Spanish officers in the forts from which wires are laid to connect with the torpedoes in the harbor. He says he has reasons to believe there was great rejoicing among the Spanish officers when the Maine was destroyed. But he does not think the high officers knew anything of it. He thinks some officers friendly to Weyler did the work. But of course the points cannot be proved.

There is a rumor that the Spanish minister at Washington has been recalled, but this has also been denied.

In the meantime Spain is in a good deal of confusion and there has been rioting in several places. Spaniards as in case our people, think their government has been two easy and slow. They want Weyler to go back to Cuba and finish up the rebels, Both the government and people of Spain declare they are ready and willing to fight.

Other nations do not seem to care much who whips. The pope takes a great deal of interest in the quarrel, but all he asks is that there shall be peace not war.

And after all, there may be no war.

DEMOCRATIC CITY CAUCUS.

A Fine Turnout and an Excellent List of Nominations.

The caucus of democratic voters was held in the court room last evening and was called to order by J. F. Aber, one of the committeemen. W. B. Brown was made chairman, and responded in a short speech. D M Link was chosen secretary. A resolution introduced by Mr. Link called out a considerable discussion, the result of which was to show that while all the speakers favored waterworks, there were some who did not think the purchase of the electric light plant was wise. The resolution was finally laid on the table.

Nominations were then declared in order. Wm. Kessler was nominated in the first ward for councilman. In the 3rd ward, Dr. Fitch, W. R. Vann and S. P. Imhoff. In the 4th ward, Dr. Hines and S. U. Tarney, but Dr. Hines declined and said he preferred Mr. Tarney, to himself. Kessler and Tarney, having no opposition, were nominated by acclamation. Then came balloting for member in the 3rd ward. E Griswold for secretary. Nominations being declared in order, John Zimmerman was named for councilman in the first ward; Don. A. Garwood for the third ward, and for the fourth ward, were two names, Samuel Cullers and Mike Douglas.

For clerk, Marion Willis; treasurer, G. W. Lackey; marshal, John W. Brown.

All these were nominated by acclamation except trustee in the fourth ward, in which one ballot was taken.

The vote stood:

Cullers	20
Douglas	61

And Mr. Douglas was declared the nominee. The ticket is a clean one and will no doubt receive the bulk of the republican vote.

SPORTY TERMS.

Games and sports of all kinds seem to have a depressing effect on the purity of langauage. This is true, even of the games with marbles. Notice this from the Churubusco Truth:

The first championship game of marbles for the season was played last Friday morning between Sant Ort and George Hemmick. The game was won by Ort, who succeeded in knocking out three brownies, two whities and one glassy in six shots. The score was too much for George to overcome, he being able to secure only two muddies, one whitie and one glassy. His showing would have been much better had not lost his shooter in the first inning.

A cough which seems to hang on in spite of all the remedies which you have applied certainly needs energetic and sensible treatment. For twenty-five years that standard preparation of cod-liver oil, has proved its effectiveness in curing the trying affections of the throat and lungs, and this is the reason why: the cod-liver oil, partially digested, strengthens and vitalizes the whole system; the hypophosphites act as a tonic to the mind and nerves, and the glycerine soothes and heals the irritation. Can you think of any combination so effective as this?

SCOTT'S EMULSION

SCHOOL WAR AT BUTLER.

It will be remembered that soon after the new principal of the Butler schools was fairly at work, he was favorably impressed with one of the assistant teachers, Miss Hortense Abrams They were married soon afterwards. Now, so far, it was all right and proper but since Miss Abrams became Mrs. Kimmel, there have been complaints that she was needlessly hard to please and seemed somewhat elevated by her new honors. A few days ago this culminated in a disagreement between herself and one of the larger pupils and not being able to settle it to her satisfaction she had the pupil suspended and sent home. The pupil appealed to the school board and after a full hearing the board decided in favor of the pupil who was sent back to school with an order for re instatement. Miss Kimmel refused to obey this order and the pupil was again sent home. Yesterday hearing that an appeal was to be made to Supt. Coe, Mrs Kimmel resigned. A new teacher will be secured by Monday, but there was no school in that department Thursday or Friday.

ASTRAY CHILD PICKED UP.

Goshen Times:—J. J. Bowman, of York township, came to the city yesterday bringing with him his eight year old son. They got seporated during the day and along in the afternoon the little fellow noticed that the rig they had come to town in was gone. He wandered about the streets and at 9 o'clock last night he was picked up by Marshal Rigney and taken care of The little boy did not seem much disappointed or put out but took rather kindly to his new found friends not thinking but that everything would come out all right in the end. But the father who could have so little thought of a child that he could forget him and drive away and leave him to find his way home as best he could, certainly has not a very elevated idea of the duties of a parent to a child. More neglectful things have occurred but hardly anything more inexcusable could happen. The boy will be sent to his home during the day by the marshal.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse, He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.00 6

The Most Favorable Season

To cure catarrh is in the spring. During the winter the patient is likely to take fresh cold and have a set back But if treatment is begun in the spring and continued into the summer, nothing need be feared for the succeeding winter. Of course, it all depends on the medicine. There are a great many catarrh medicines which relieve the most disagreeable symtoms temporarily. Pe-ru-na cures more slowly but also more permanently than this class of medicines. A course of Pe-ru-na during the spring will cure catarrh more quickly than at any other season. Mr. Walter H. Tucker, Concord, N. H., writes Dr. Hartman as follows: "When I began taking your medicines four years ago I was suffering with chronic catarrh. I had taken nearly two dozen bottles of a so-called catarrh cure without much relief. Pe-ru-na cured the night sweats and dizziness; it cured the cough I have had from my cradle; I can say it saved my life."

Stomach Trouble

Stomach trouble is the common name applied to a derangement of the system which is keenly felt but vaguely understood. It may mean inability to retain food or to digest it. It may mean nausea, pain after eating, fullness, inordinate craving for food, or entire lack of appetite. Whatever it means, there's trouble, and it's with the stomach. If you have stomach trouble, you will be interested in this letter from a man who had it and was cured by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For nine years I suffered from stomach trouble. I tried the aid of the best doctors of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and spent large sums of money, all in vain. One day while waiting a train in Bellaire, O., I picked up a paper with a notice of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I got one bottle to try it. It did me so much good that I purchased five more bottles. I took four of them and gained in flesh, my appetite improved, and now I can eat anything. My stomach is all right, thanks to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—CALVIN M. STEVENS, Uniontown, Pa.

THE VOTES

We are asked how the two Houses of Congress voted on the Cuban resolutions. In the House of Representatives 310 voted for it and only 6 against In the senate 42 voted for it and 35 against it. Of those who voted against it in the senate, the most of them did so because it was not strong enough to suit them, and they did not propose to vote for a weak measure. They wanted it should recognize the legality of the present Cuban government, and when this was cut out, they would not vote for the measure. But at least three fourths of the senators are in favor of freeing Cuba.

Postmasters May Enlist.

Goshen Democrat

Postmaster M. A. Cornell secured a circular from the department this morning to the effect that postmasters, letter carriers, railway mail clerks, etc., would be granted the privilege of enlisting in the militia in case of war, they to be granted leave of absence without pay. The positions held by enlisters would be restored to them on their return.

L. S. ROAD THEN AND NOW

Goshen Democrat

Norman Beckley, who entered the service of the Lake Shore road in 1858, states the stock which is now selling at $200 per share then sold at $7 per share. There is one thing that seems a little singular—the passenger business was then heavier than now Just as many trains were run then and there were no empty seats. The business which the Lake Shore then enjoyed is divided now with four competing lines

WAR CONDITIONS

Ex-Governor Flower of New York, who is regarded as one of the most level headed of business men and financiers, returned from a visit to Europe yesterday. He says the English people are universally in sympathy with this country on the Cuban question and he thinks the French are mainly so. When asked what effect a war would have on our financial affairs he said: "No effect worth mentioning for any length of time. Of course, the stock market is uncertain just now. When I left in January there was a 3 to 4 per cent money market. Now 6 per cent securities are selling below par. Of course, that means a stringency. But as soon as a definite policy is decided upon you will see the market brace up. We've discounted all this war scare business and things will be better as soon as our policy is settled. There will be no hard times. You may be sure of that."

LATE WAR NEWS.

Thursday's Daily.

The president has signed the joint resolutions.

Both nations are buying war material and getting their forces in shape.

Agents of Spanish Government are actively buying provisions here. In last ten days five months food went from here to Soldiers and citizens

Herald says, "Spain's answer to ultimatium may take the form of shot and shell.

Arch Bishop Ireland took a very affecting farewell of Polo and left for St. Paul.

The Polish Jews at New York are terrorized. They fear the city will be blown up in war with Spain and on Wednesday ten thousand depositors kept up a run on State Bank refusing to accept silver dollars. Enormous sums of gold dumped on the counter satisfying them to some extent. The run is not entirely off as yet.

At 3 p. m. the cabinet is in session. Spain has refused the President's ultimatium and this means war.

Minister Woodford at Madrid has received his passports and will leave Spain.

Friday's Daily.

Gov. Mount has a communication, to have the state militia held in readiness They may be called in a day or two. If 100,000 men are called out, Indiana's share will be 3442 men. It is likely all will be called to Indianapolis and then such as want to go will volunteer.

The Studebakers at South Bend have received a large order for ambulances.

Naval recruits from Duluth went east over the lake Shore yesterday.

Blanco, captain-general of Cuba has issued a fiery address to Cubans asking them to be loyal to Spain.

The ultimatium sent by the President, did not reach the Spanish cabinet it seems. Mr. Woodford was slow and before he had delivered the message, the Spaniards heard of it and sent him his passports.

The war ships at Fortress Monroe, have been ordered to blockade Havana at once.

Spain has started her fleet across the sea, and we must hurry if we get to Cuba ahead of them. They may blockade some of our Atlantic cities.

Congress is taking action to prevent coal and other supplies being sold to Spanish agents. The provisions, etc, already sold and on board ship as noted in COURIER yesterday will be allowed to go to sea.

The Cruiser Oregon, that is on its way home via Cape Horn, has not yet been heard from. It is feared a Spanish torpedo boat, now at Buenos Ayres may get her.

The Spanish minister at Washington did not go back to Spain. He will locate at Niagara Falls, on the Canada side. The roar there may give him an idea of what is going on at Havana in his absence.

The Queen of Spain had called the "Cortez" or congress together earlier on account of these troubles.

There is a rumor that a Spanish merchant ship has been captured and her crew of 40 made prisoners.

There was but little news sent over the wires today. It seems like the calm before the storm.

Meetings are being held all over the country and steps taken to enlist men. Several colleges have formed companies.

Transportation for Indiana men has been arranged for some days, so that if they go, there will be no delay. The rumor that they go tomorrow is not well founded.

The arsenal at Rock Island is ordered to get ready 75,000 outfits for soldiers at once.

Saturday's Daily.

President McKinley has issued a proclamation as required by the law of nations, to the effect that Cuban ports will be blockaded. All the chief ports on this side of Cuba will be blockaded, and one on the south side. No vessels of any kind will be permitted to enter. And no Spanish vessels will be permitted to leave. But the vessels of all neutral nations, will be given thirty days to get themselves and cargoes out of the harbors and into the high seas.

There is much talk about privateering, but it is not known what will be done by either nation. Privateering means issueing by government, of permits to private individuals to fit out and arm merchant ships and to go to sea snd catch all the merchant vessels of the other nation, they can. It comes near being piracy, but is a very effective way to cripple an adversary who has many vessels at sea.

The bill calling for 100,000 volunteers was passed by Congress yesterday and signed by president.

The first shot and first capture is ours. The U. S man of war Nashville ran across a large Spanish merchant vessel yesterday, with a load of lumber from Mississippi to Rotterdam, fired a black shot for her to stop, and as she did not stop fired solid shot. The Spaniard surrendered, and the ship with twenty prisoners was brought to Key West.

A message from Ft. Wayne at 1;30 to-day said the Ft. Wayne battery had been ordered out and was getting ready to move.

Our Pacific warships have sailed for the Phillipine Islands, that are owned by Spain.

We will not probably land troops on Cuba at first, but maintain a blockade by ships.

It is now believed the captured Spanish vessel had not only a load of lumber, mules and cattle but that she had a lot of coal, which is now contraband.

The latest, at 3:10 p. m. is that the call is made for 125,000 to serve for two years.

The arrangement now is with Captain Lahnam, in case the company gets an order in the night that the Kiblinger factory will blow its whistle about 20 minutes in three different installments. If the call comes in daytime, the captain knows where the men are.

The Pill That Will

Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills will prevent and cure biliousness.

"For years I have thoroughly tested AYER'S PILLS, both as a preventive and cure for biliousness. They are the best medicine for the purpose and do all that is claimed for them." J. E. KOLB, Shark, Ark.

Cure . . . Biliousness

FLAGS FOR CUBA.

Auburn Makes Her First Demonstration.

The first guns of the war rang out in Auburn to-day noon, when the Kiblinger factory raised its two flags. About 9 A. M, some of the boys in the paint department started the idea of putting up a flag. In a few minutes the money was raised and a man sent out to buy one. Then the trimmers over in the south building heard of it, and not to be outdone, started a subscription and soon, they had a flag The painters had engaged the Drum Corps, and now the trimmers sent for the Auburn Band. A flag staff was made and put upno each building and at the hour decided on 12:30, there was quite a crowd ready. The employes had swallowed a hasty dinner and got back. The militia were sent for and a few soon came Ruthie Borst and Helen Vann were chosen to raise the flag for the painters and when they pulled the flag arose, the bands played, the Rifles fired a salute and then people cheered. The flag of the trimmers was sent up in a minute or so after the first, and both demonstrations went off as one. It was Auburn's first move in the drama of war.

Are Saving Money.

As noted yesterday, the town council spent the day in continuous session studying over the various bids on water works and material for the same. As the work progressed, point after point was discovered, when this or that kind of engine, or boiler, or pump, would be to our advantage and the Board only hesitated because it would cost more than the one named in the bid. But they at once began to consult the various bidders and soon found that the most of them were willing to change the bid so as to include these more desirable machines at the same price. Here was a chance to save money, and still get the best to be had. It is believed by good judges that these little changes have resulted at least $1000 to the benefit of the town, It is now certain that we will have the best plant for the size of the town, in the state. It will be all of the very best and up to date. It will be far better than that at Garrett and cost but little more than half as much. We think our people should give the board proper credit for all this, and no doubt they do. They worked last night till midnight and begin again at 8 this morning.

HOW THEY MANAGE,

The interests of Americans in Cuba are left with the British consuls there, and one of our citizens who was arrested has been released by request of the British consul. In Spain the American consuls are all leaving, but they and Minister Woodford leave their property and papers as well as all American interests with the British minister and consuls. The Spanish minister at Washington, left his affairs with the French and Austrian ministers, and at other places, their consuls leave matters with the French or Austrian consuls.

FALSE FIGURES.

Republican papers have for about six months been trying to make their readers believe that our money is increasing very rapidly. One last fall, had an increase of silver coinage that greatly exceeded the coinage under the Bland silver law. And now they tell us money is increasing 12 millions a month, or 144 millions a year. Anyone who will stop to think knows better than this. Some gold is being coined, a little silver, also but not much, and who has heard of any law for making paper money at such a rate?

WATERWORKS BIDS.

There were crowds of Bidders and the Offers were Low.

Last evening the council met to receive bids for the waterworks plant and material, that being the date advertised for the receiving of such bids In substance the bids were to cover the following items:

559 Tons of Cast Iron Pipe.
15 Tons of Special Casting.
72 Hydrants.
41 Valves and Boxes.
2 Pumps of 1,000,000 gallons capacity each.
2 Boilers of 150 H. P. each, or equivalents.
1 Feed Pump.
1 Feed Water Heater.
1 Engine of 250 H. P., or equivalent Twin Engines.
1 Brick Power Station and Chimney

A large number of bidders attended and the bidding was low, as they all knew the pay would be cash down. Some firms bid for the entire plant and some made bids on certain parts, as pumps, or boilers, pipes, etc.

ENTIRE BIDS.

Kruse, Stitt & Stewart of Wabash, Ind., bid on the entire plant, $39,462.

W. T. C. & Harvey M. Brooks of Jackson, Mich., put in three different bids, the difference being on account of different makes of engines, boilers, hydrants, pumps, pipes, fittings etc. These three bids were:

(1) $29,168.72
(2) 30,998.70
(3) 30,198.72

The Phenix Construction Co. of Chicago put in two bids:

(1) $35,600
(2) 34,600

They also bid to put in the entire pipe line ready to run $17,500

John W. Moran of Elkhart, Ind., bid for entire plant $32,627

Charles L. Olds of Ft. Wayne made four bids:

(1) $31,168
(2) 32,168
(3) 33,243
(4) 34,493

Watson, Pulse & Porter, Greensburg Ind., bid for entire plant.... $32,343

Thatcher & Burke of Chicago, bid $32,750

They also put in a bid for the pipe line alone, complete and ready to use, ... $16,000

PARTIAL BIDS.

These were very numerous and some were for one thing and some for another. Some were for engines and boilers of different makes, or for pumps, or hydrants, or pipes etc. etc. The bids are too varied and complicated to give or to be of value to those who have not made a special study of the subject. For example one firm may bid for so much pipe of a certain size and make stating the diameter, length, weight quality etc. There were firms from the following places:

Cincinnati, Cleveland, Brooklyn, N. Y: Anniston, Alabama; Columbus, O.; Detroit, Toledo, Ft. Wayne, Aurora, Ill.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; South Pittsburg, Tenn.; Bessemer, Alabama; and two bids from Auburn. One was from the Pioneer Hardware Co., and one from the Auburn Foundry & Machine Works.

POWER HOUSE BIDS.

There were two bids for the const ruction of the power house, both by home parties. They were:

Picker Brothers $5,215
Sol. Shearer $5,229

The Councilmen are now going over these bids carefully and considering all the points. They spent a good deal of to-day in this and it may take some time to understand all the points presented. They may find they can save money by taking a part of one and part of another. The bidders themselves, say it has been years since they met so many bidders for one job or found such low bids offered, especially in a place the size of Anburn. One bid for piping was for $14 85 a ton or less than three quarters of a cent a pound. And all agreed that the plans and specification were the best and most complete they ever saw. This is quite a compliment to Mr. VanAuken who prepared them.

The Omaha Exposition.

The jinrikisha, Japan's vehicle for passengers, and extensively used in far eastern countries as an easy conveyance for travel, will be among the Japanese exhibits at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition. The jinrikisha is the invention of an American clergyman, who accompanied Commodore Perry of the United States navy, in his expedition to Japan in 1853. A tax of 50 cents per annum, is levied by the Japanese government on these little carts, the sum received from this source forming an important item of the national revenue. The vehicle is used in the imperial parks at Yokohama, and its manfacture and sale has been a great source of profit in the promotion of Bible distribution and other missionary work. In Tokio alone there are not less than half a million of these queer little man-power cars.

Capture of Ship Which, with Cargo, Is Worth a Large Sum.

Flagship Detroit Ran Her Down and Sent Her to Key West—Newspaper Dispatch Boat Lost in the Harbor and Narrowly Escapes Destruction

Spain Opens Fire.

A special from Key West says: The first shot from Spain was fired Sunday night when Morro Castle opened its batteries on the United States fleet. The news was brought here by Capt. Usher of the Ericsson, who says his boat was ordered out early Sunday night on scout duty.

The American fleet was about eight miles off Havana. The lights were out and all hands were ready for action. One little craft scudded swiftly towards the enemy and brought up almost under Morro's guns, being enabled to reach such a close point because for the first time the Morro light was then burning.

At 11 p. m. the Spanish artillery roared out its first welcome to the American fleet, but not a shot struck. The American fleet maintained silence.

Before the firing began, the newspaper dispatch boat, which had lost her bearings, got within three miles of Morro Castle, and before she knew her whereabouts, the boat found Morro Castle firing on her. She got away unharmed.

When the Ericsson left the squadron lay spread in a line eight miles long, maintaining a blockade. According to a proclamation, the ships of neutral powers are allowed to pass.

Ensign Christy, with a crew of sixteen from the Detroit, and four from the flagship, brought into port the captured steamer Catalina, Captain Fano, 3,491 tons, which left Cadiz March 7, and was bound from New Orleans for Barcelona, via Havana, for which port she was making when taken. When the first shot was fired her captain made a desperate effort to escape his pursuer, and the chase was prolonged for eight miles. Finally a solid shot brought her to. She is carrying a cargo of 6,000 tons of staves.

A Spanish Trick.

A special from Biarrite, France, says: In forestalling Gen. Woodford by breaking off diplomatic relations with the United States in advance of the presentation of the American ultimatum by the Minister of the United States, Spain resorted to one of her old devices.

President McKinley's telegram to Gen. Woodford conveying the ultimatum was held by the Madrid telegraph authorities while a copy of it was sent to Premier Sagasta. After the Government had had time to read and discuss the document and consider the course to be taken the message was released and delivered to Gen. Woodford.

Prairie Fires Destroy Thousands of Cattle and Ponies.

Information has been received at St. Paul, Minn., that hundreds, if not thousands, of head of cattle and ponies have been burned to death by a disastrous prairie fire which swept over nearly all the vast area embraced in the Rosebud Indian Reservation, South Dakota. The animals destroyed belonged to the Indians. No Indians are reported to have lost their lives. The fire raged for several days, carried by varying winds, and burned over a region eighty by sixty miles in extent.

Ultimatum of the United States Was Considered a Declaration of War by the Government at Madrid—Handing of Passports to Minister Woodford Definitely Put a Stop to All Peaceful Diplomatic Negotiations—McKinley Signs the Bill Asking for 100,000 Men—Those Willing to Serve Are to Take Up Arms at Once and Aid in Fighting the Spaniards.

Washington correspondence:

If any lingering doubts have remained as to the existence of a state of war between the United States and Spain they may be dismissed. Havana, the capital of the Island of Cuba, is in a state of siege, and our navy has commenced the capture of Spanish boats attempting to enter the harbor. The President Friday afternoon, in compliance with the law of nations, issued a proclamation declaring a blockade of Havana. This proclamation is a notice to the world and stops the vessels of neutral nations from entering the harbor of Havana with merchandise or supplies of any sort. The proclamation applies to all harbors on the north coast of the island and to Cienfuegos on the south.

Captain Sampson, in command of the squadron at Key West, was ordered to Havana Thursday.

On Wednesday, April 20, 1898, about 11 o'clock a. m., the Department of State served notice of the purposes of this Government by delivering to Minister Polo a copy of instructions to Minister Woodford, and also a copy of the resolutions passed by the Congress of the United States on the 19th inst. After the receipt of this notice the Spanish minister forwarded to the State Department a request for his passports, which were furnished to him the same afternoon. The United States minister at Madrid was at the same time instructed to make a like communication to the Government of Spain.

Thursday morning the department received from Gen. Woodford a telegram, showing that the Spanish Government had broken off diplomatic relations with this Government. The Spanish Government, having the text of the ultimatum of the United States from its own sources, did not wait for the United States minister to present the ultimatum, but sent him his passports. This course rendered unnecessary any further diplomatic action on the part of the United States, as Spain's action was considered a virtual declaration of war.

A semi-official note issued from Madrid Thursday afternoon says:

"The Spanish Government, having received the ultimatum of the President of the United States, considers that the document constitutes a declaration of war against Spain and that the proper form to be adopted is not to make any further reply, but to await the expiration of the time mentioned in the ultimatum before opening hostilities. In the meantime the Spanish authorities have placed their possessions in a state of defense and their fleet is already on its way to meet that of the United States."

CAPTAIN SAMPSON.

REFUSE WOMEN NURSES.

Under No Circumstances Will the Gentler Sex Take Part in War.

The Secretary of War and the surgeon general of the army issued an ultimatum which is calculated to create a sensation throughout the country. This is the unalterable decision not only not to employ trained or volunteer women nurses for the care of the sick and wounded in the war with Spain, but not to recognize them in any way whatever. No proffer of their services, however strongly backed by official or other kind of influence, will avail in the slightest degree to alter this decision.

Queen Regent Is Defiant.

The Spanish cortes opened Wednesday afternoon. The queen regent read the speech from the throne. She reviewed the situation and referred to the efforts of the pope for peace. The queen regent announced that she had summoned the cortes to defend Spain's rights. Her majesty appealed to the Spanish people to gather behind her son's throne. The queen regent read the speech with the little king on her right. The whole tone of the address was one of defiance to the pretenses of the United States in the affairs of Cuba, and this sentiment was loudly applauded by the cortes.

ON TO HAVANA!

CALLS UPON EVERY STATE.

President's Proclamation Asks Volunteers from All Sides.

The bill for the creation of a new regular and volunteer army passed both houses of Congress Friday afternoon. The measure was immediately signed by Vice-President Hobart and Speaker Reed and was then sent to the President. An official proclamation was prepared at the War Department calling for 100,000 men to serve in the war against Spain. This was approved by Secretary Alger and sent to the President for his signature. In many respects the proclamation follows the lines of the first call made by President Lincoln of April 15, 1861, when he asked for 75,000 men. Necessarily there are a number of changes, because of the different purpose for which volunteers are asked.

The Senate and House conferees reached an agreement in the morning before Congress convened. The measure was immediately reported and adopted. According to the agreement the Senate receded from its first amendment concerning the time in which the organized militia shall serve, but the time for which all volunteers are to be enlisted is reduced from three years to two. The Warren amendment, authorizing the President to organize independent troops, was retained, but the number was limited to 3,000. The Senate receded from its amendment, making it compulsory for the regiment and company militia officers to receive their commissions from the governors of their respective States, and leaving it optional, as fixed by the House.

The number of men required from each State is to be in the proportion that its population bears to that of the whole country. According to this ratio the several States are called on to furnish men as follows:

Alabama	2,000	New Hampshire	602
Arkansas	1,600	New Jersey	2,370
California	2,590	New York	10,011
Colorado	1,050	N. Carolina	2,067
Connecticut	1,286	N Dakota	369
Delaware	273	Ohio	5,799
Florida	600	Oregon	663
Georgia	2,539	Pennsylvania	8,615
Idaho	186	Rhode Island	568
Illinois	6,439	South Dakota	1,480
Indiana	3,442	S. Carolina	598
Iowa	3,018	Tennessee	2,448
Kansas	2,230	Texas	3,383
Kentucky	2,726	Utah	340
Louisiana	1,552	Vermont	507
Maine	1,005	Virginia	2,230
Maryland	1,554	Washington	942
Massachusetts	3,777	W. Virginia	1,111
Michigan	3,495	Wisconsin	2,615
Minnesota	2,299	Wyoming	185
Mississippi	1,726	Arizona	145
Missouri	4,329	D. of Columbia	359
Montana	419	New Mexico	272
Nebraska	1,927	Oklahoma	114

Oath of Volunteers.

Whether these volunteers consist of National Guardsmen or of simple enlisted men, they will be required to take the following oath:

I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America, and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and the orders of the officers appointed over me according to the articles of war.

This puts the men in the same category as the regular army so far as any foreign service is considered.

Lo! The Dawn of Light is Breaking,
See the Sunbeams from Afar!
Cuba! It is Thy Awakening,
'Tis Thy Glorious Freedom Star!

FIRST SEIZURE OF THE WAR.

Cruiser Nashville Captures a Spanish Merchant Steamer.

The first shot of the war was fired early Friday morning. About daylight the United States cruiser Nashville captured the Spanish ship Buena Ventura, 1,000 tons, having on board a cargo of lumber. She was taken seventeen miles south of Key West. The cruiser fired a six-pounder and the Spaniard surrendered. The Buena Ventura was bound from Pascagoula, Miss., for Rotterdam with lumber. The Nashville fired a blank shot, which the Spaniard ignored. This was followed by a shot from a six-pounder. The Buena Ventura then surrendered, with her crew of twenty men. The Nashville towed her prize into Key West harbor at 11 o'clock, and put a prize crew on board.

The news of the capture of the Spaniard set the people of Key West frantic with enthusiasm. All work was suspended and the people crowded the docks in great numbers.

Second Ship Taken.

The Spanish freighter Pedro, from Antwerp for Pensacola, Fla., was captured by the U. S. cruiser New York Saturday morning. The steamer was sighted about ten miles off Havana by the flagship of Captain Sampson's fleet. The New York sent a shot across the Spaniard's bow. This did not stop her. Then Captain Sampson ordered all steam on, and a stern chase of four miles followed. When the flagship got in better range she sent three more shots after the Spaniard. Then the steamer hove to.

FROM THE FRONT.

"D-r-r-rum! D-r-r-rum! D-r-r-rum, d-r-r-rum, d-r-r-rum!"

The American squadron has sailed from Hong Kong for Manila.

The United States Government has purchased a number of British steam colliers.

The United States military attaches at St. Petersburg and Vienna have been called home.

Gov. Holcomb of Nebraska has received offers from 15,789 individuals, who desire to enlist.

A Havana newspaper calls our handsome battleships Texas and Iowa "damaged barges."

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage has announced his intention of going to the front as an army chaplain.

Spaniards are arriving in New York from abroad in order to evade service in the Spanish army.

Intense patriotism prevails over Kentucky, and twice the number of men allotted could be raised.

The crew for the patrol cruiser Dixie has been selected from the members of the Maryland Naval Battalion.

How Spain grasps at straws may be illustrated by the fact that she pretends to expect aid from Mexico.

The United States Government has established censorship of telegrams at Key West, forbidding the transmission of code messages to or from Havana.

Senor Bruzon, civil governor of Havana, has sent his family to Mexico, in anticipation of a bombardment and capture of the city by United States forces.

Every stanch boat in New York harbor that is over 100 feet long and capable of carrying one or two rapid-fire guns will be impressed into the naval service at once.

Such is the patriotism of American women that the War Department is fairly burdened with offers from women in all walks of life to go to the front as nurses.

Several Chicago firms have notified their clerks that if any of their employes go to the front their salaries will be paid during their absence, their situations will be preserved for them, and if they are killed or disabled they will be pensioned.

RUSHED TO THE FRONT.

Infantry, Cavalry and Artillery Are Hurried Towards Cuba.

On to Chickamauga! On to Mobile! On to New Orleans! On to Tampa! and—On to Havana! For a week 18,000 men in Uncle Sam's army blue have been moving towards points of concentration from which they could be quickly hurled into action.

Not since the close of the civil war has there been such unanimous action among the troops. The startling events of the previous few days prepared the soldiers for the order issued and found every man ready for the march. The President hesitated till the last possible moment before sanctioning the order, for the expense of sending the army to the South has been enormous.

The four points to which the army has been moving are Chickamauga battlefield, Tampa, New Orleans and Mobile. As soon as reaching those places the troops go into camp. Advance agents of the department preceded the troops and made all necessary arrangements for their comfort and convenience. The soldiers carry thirty days' rations and a number of rounds of ammunition.

Orders were issued from the War Department Tuesday placing the light batteries of artillery on a strictly war footing. Telegrams were sent to the commanding officers of these batteries in all parts of the country, directing them to increase each battery from four to six guns and to increase the horses for each gun from four to six.

There is no lack of volunteers. Uncle Sam can have enough soldiers to eat up the Spaniards. The spirit of Paul Revere is riding through the land. It is knocking at the doors of the rich and the hovels of the poor. It is awaking alike the residents of the mansions in cities and the occupants of humble huts nestling in the valleys of the Shenandoah and Mississippi or perched far up in the white-bearded Rockies. Wherever it passes with its warning men are springing up; they are responding each in his own way, but the individual responses all blending into the one inspiring strain, "We are coming, Uncle Samuel, ten hundred thousand strong."

There is no diminution in offers of volunteers. They are falling upon the War Department like leaves from trees before the first strong wind of autumn. So great is the eagerness of patriots for the honor of defending the flag that during the past few days not a few letters have been received at the department from young men who state that, rather than not have a chance of going to the front when the war begins, they are willing to enlist in the regular army. Among men of all creeds, nationalities and politics there is an expressed intention and desire to uphold the honor and the integrity of the flag of the republic.

As far as practicable the State organizations entering the volunteer service will remain intact, the Governors of the various States being permitted, as they were in 1861, to designate the regimental officers, which will include those of the grades of second lieutenants to colonels. The President will reserve to himself the right to appoint the staff and field officers. The total strength of the National Guard as reported to the War Department is 113,764 men.

GARY LEAVES THE CABINET.

President McKinley's Postmaster-General Resigns His Portfolio.

Postmaster General Gary resigned Thursday, and Charles Emory Smith was immediately nominated to succeed him. A Washington correspondent states that it is generally understood that Gary resigned because he opposed war and does not care to be connected with an administration that conducts it.

The official explanation is: "Postmaster General Gary's resignation had absolutely nothing whatever to do with our present foreign complications. It was owing entirely to the condition of Mr. Gary's health. He has suffered a great deal of late from a general breaking down of the system, which has continued to progress until finally Mr. Gary reluctantly reached the conclusion that he was unable longer to carry the burden of his office."

TRICKED BY SPAIN.

McKinley's Ultimatum to Woodford Held Until Discussion Is Had.

In forestalling Gen. Woodford by breaking off diplomatic relations with the United States in advance of the presentation of the American ultimatum by the minister of the United States Spain resorted to one of her old devices. President McKinley's telegram to Gen. Woodford conveying the ultimatum was held by the Madrid telegraph authorities while a copy of it was sent to Premier Sagasta.

"The First Gun Is Fired."

The first gun is fired!
Its echoes thrill the land,
And the bounding hearts of the patriot throng
Now firmly take their stand;
We will bow no more to the tyrant king,
Who scorns our long forbearing,
But with Columbia's stars and stripes
We'll quench their Spanish daring.

CHORUS.

Arise! Arise! Arise!
And gird ye for the fight,
And let our watchword ever be:
May God protect the right.

The first gun is fired!
Oh, heed the signal well,
And the thunder tone as it rolls along
Shall sound oppression's knell;
For the arm of Freedom is mighty still,
Its strength shall fail us never,
That strength we'll give to our righteous cause
And our glorious land forever.

M'KINLEY'S ULTIMATUM IN FULL

Woodford, Minister, Madrid:

You have been furnished with the text of a joint resolution voted by the Congress of the United States on the 19th inst. (approved to-day) in relation to the pacification of the island of Cuba. In obedience to that act, the President directs you to immediately communicate to the government of Spain said resolution, with the formal demand of the government of the United States that the government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

In taking this step the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island, except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people, under such free and independent government as they may establish.

If by the hour of noon on Saturday next, the 23d day of April, inst., there be not communicated to this government by that of Spain a full and satisfactory response to this demand and resolution, whereby the ends of peace in Cuba shall be assured, the President will proceed, without further notice, to use the power and authority enjoined and conferred upon him by the said joint resolution to such extent as may be necessary to carry the same into effect. SHERMAN.

Sherman, Washington:

Early this (Thursday) morning, immediately after the receipt of your open telegram, and before I had communicated same to Spanish government, Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs notified me that diplomatic relations are broken between the two countries and that all official communication between their respective representatives has ceased. I accordingly asked for safe passports. Turn legation over to British embassy and leave for Paris this afternoon. Have notified consuls WOODFORD.

DONS IN A PEN.

They Face Ships on One Side, Insurgents on the Other.

The blockade of Cuban ports is very significant when the map of Cuba is studied in connection with the President's proclamation. The President declares that he has "instituted and will maintain a blockade of the north coast of Cuba, including ports on said coast between Cardenas and Bahia Honda, and the port of Cienfuegos on the south coast of Cuba."

Cardenas is about twenty-five miles east of Matanzas, and Bahia Honda is about fifty miles west of Havana. The coast on the north blockaded is not more than 150 miles in extent, and includes Havana, Matanbas and two or three smaller ports.

With the North Atlantic squadron blockading the coast controlled by the Spanish troops and leaving open all the coast from Cardenas east and around to Cienfuegos, a coast line of at least 1,000 miles, with numerous ports held by only a few hundred Spanish soldiers, the way is clear for the insurgents to extend their control to the coast and communicate with the United States gunboats. If they control five-sixths of the island, as is claimed, and have an army of 50,000 men in the field, which can be increased to 75,000 men when they have arms and ammunition, they can drive Spain out of Cuba.

The Comic Side of The News

The Spanish would better look out for a rainy season at home.

These are the days Spain wishes she had kept up her credit at the coal dealer's.

The Spanish battle cry is "To-morrow!" and the American slogan is "To Morro!"

The cruiser Diogenes might appropriately greet the Spanish foe with Greek fire.

When a warship puts on her powder she is supposed to be all ready for the ball.

If Spain is anxious to do something religious, Sagasta might comply by passing the hat.

Havana never has been regarded as a first-class health resort, but a great many Americans probably will spend the summer there in the interest of Cuba's health.

Where's that man with the bullet-proof coat? Can't he be induced to come from under the bed?

"I will flee away from the heat of war," warbles a San Francisco poetess. Going to the Klondike?

To-day Spain has two very valuable West Indian possessions, but to-morrow she may not Havana.

In the meantime Gen. Gomez evinces a lively inclination to shoot a few holes through that armistice.

Some of our Congressmen may not care about fighting Spain, but they certainly fight each other beautifully.

Senor Polo thinks war is a horrible thing. How does he know? He says there has been no war in Cuba.

A cablegram from Madrid says "the weather is becoming quite hot." That makes the matter unanimous, then.

Those who believe that "the office should seek the man" will probably make an exception of the recruiting office.

Probably Blanco declined to bid farewell to General Fitzhugh Lee because he didn't want to invite him to "call again."

Ire of Patriots Aroused.

A riot occurred a few miles west of Tipton, in which one man came near being hanged. A ditch is being dug in Jefferson township, and about 100 men are employed on the job. A tramp came along and wanted work. When asked his nationality he said that he was a Spaniard and was proud of it. He said that in event of war between the United States and Spain he would fight for his native country. Some of the ditchers became so enraged at this remark that they jumped out of the ditch, procured a rope and but for the intervention of Samuel Watson, the contractor, they would have hanged him.

Wheels His Wife's Corpse.

A man giving the name of William Jones, late of Paulding County, Ohio, passed through Gaston and Eaton, pushing a hand-cart containing the dead body of his wife, with a 20-months-old child sitting in the cart beside the corpse and a 3-year-old walking with its father. The story is to the effect that the man has been residing near the Illinois State line in the western part of the State and that the family started on foot for their former home in Ohio. The wife is said to have died of heart disease, and the husband being anxious to get the remains back home, wrapped them in a sheet and continued his overland journey without stopping for sleep.

Poisoned by Matches.

Three-year-old Willie McCammack, Anderson's "match-eating boy," is no more. He succumbed to his diet after loading up on twenty parlor matches. He achieved notoriety and reputation in his three brief years on earth because of his fond desire for match heads. Ice cream, candy and other delicacies were sidetracked when he got his eye on a match. He wet the head and sucked off the "red" stuff as though it was so much taffy on a stick.

Dying Boy Accuses Another.

Joseph Miller, a Terre Haute boy of 12 years, who is dying from a wound inflicted by a youth named Clifford Gage with a rifle several weeks ago, has admitted it was not an accident, and a warrant has been issued for the arrest of Gage. Miller says Gage became enraged at him and shot him at short range, the bullet passing through one of his lungs.

Dr. Griffith Shot in the Back.

A serious fight occurred at Cory, in which several unknown men played an active part. Dr. Griffith of that place got mixed up in the quarrel, and some one in the crowd opened fire on him with a revolver. He started for home on the run, and some one in the crowd fired a shotgun at him, several shot hitting him in the back.

Fishermen Lost in the Lake.

Charles Lind, Henry Slatter and Chas. Harradon, Michigan City fishermen, went out to lift their nets. Their boat capsized, and, being heavily loaded, sank to the bottom. The three men clung to the net poles for several hours. Then Lind and Slatter, becoming exhausted, were drowned. Harradon was saved.

The Governor says that the gamblers must be driven out of Rohy and any part of Indiana soil that they are polluting. He says that it is the fault of the officials if they allow it; that they have plenty of law on their side to drive the gamblers out, and if they do not do this they are liable to impeachment.

Fay Tucker, the little girl who narrowly escaped cremation at the hands of her insane mother at New London some weeks ago, still lingers between life and death, with little hope for recovery. An effort is being made to graft new skin on the burned portions of her body. The entire class of the high school to which she belonged volunteered contributions, and fifteen boys and girls bared their arms and submitted to the surgeon's knife for her benefit. Joseph Tucker, an uncle, also furnished twenty separate grafts.

Just Like a Woman.

Vi Bamford had gone home to die. Her half-sister, Ellice Stormont, sat at her bedside holding one of her white, emaciated hands.

"Guy Charter has broken your heart, Vi," she said, "and I will make it the one object of my life to be revenged upon him for your sake!"

"Hush, Ellice, dear!" replied the dying girl, in a whisper. "Vengeance is not ours. He will be surely and rapidly repaid without human aid. Don't make your life miserable by harboring such thoughts. It was my own fault for giving my heart to such a man."

But Ellice sat with a determined face, and presently, when all was over, she stood solemnly looking down upon her dead sister.

"I swear to search for Guy Charter," she cried, holding her hand upward, "and to wreak vengeance upon him! I will break his heart as he has broken hers!"

It was a rash vow, and, if not a senseless, a wicked one, but the best of people do rash and senseless—aye, and wicked things at times, and Ellice Stormont was no exception.

She had never seen Guy Charter, and knew little about him, except that he was a nephew of the wealthy Sir Kenelm Charter of diamond mine notoriety. The last that poor Vi had heard of him was that he was in Paris, and, in performance of her vow, Ellice, who was her own mistress and had a considerable fortune, started for the French capital.

She soon found that Guy Charter had left the gay city, and that he was supposed to be at Monte Carlo. So she journeyed on to the gambling principality; but there she heard rumors of his marriage with a pretty flower girl who had taken his fancy. She could, however, obtain no direct confirmation of this; but it appeared certain that he had returned to England.

Undismayed, she hastened home again, and, putting secret agencies to work, she was presently rewarded by hearing that Guy Charter was staying at the famed west coast watering place, Shoreport, and that he was centainly not married.

Immediately she went with a traveling companion to Shoreport, and put up at the Hotel Metropole, where, among the names inscribed in the visitors' book she saw that of "Guy Charter."

Ellice was naturally inclined to be of rather a severe temperament, and, carrying her disposition into her dress, she generally wore plain habits. Her companion, therefore, was somewhat startled when she appeared at table d'hote clad in a superb style that was quite unusual to her. Could this beautiful, queenly girl be the heretofore rather plain-looking Miss Stormont with whom she had been traveling? It hardly seemed possible. But the reason was soon apparent.

Guy Charter proved to be a good-looking, manly, open-faced fellow of about 30—quite the last man, one would have thought from his appearance, to trifle with a woman's affections. Having been much abroad, his conversation was much sought after by his fellow guests.

An introduction took place between him and Miss Stormont in due course, and it soon became evident that she had found favor in his eyes.

It was noticeable that whenever opportunity afforded he was next to her at dinner, and he was, by some strange coincidence, constantly running across her path out of doors.

At first Ellice was frigidly polite. Then, little by little, she allowed her manner toward him to thaw until the intimacy got to be quite cordial, and, before many weeks, she had the satisfaction of seeing him hover around her like a moth round the flame of a candle.

She was acting a part, and a most consummate actress she proved. But Cupid's darts are sharp, and there is an old proverb that it is dangerous to play with edged tools. Alas! she found the truth of it but too well, for what had at first been pretense became reality. Not only had she entangled the amiable, good-looking Guy Charter in the meshes of the net she had spread for him, but, in doing so, she had herself got as fast fixed as her prey. She had fallen hopelessly in love with the man upon whom she had sworn to wreak her vengeance!

Yet her purpose never faltered for an instant. She had started the game for revenge, and revenge she would have—even at the cost of her own life's happiness.

Then Guy declared his love.

"Wait till Monday next," she answered in a sweet way, that was intended to convey assent without expressing it. "I have to go on a short visit, and I will then give you my answer."

The next morning Miss Stormont and companion left Shoreport; but Guy felt assured of success, and for the few days that intervened he walked on velvet and saw through rose-colored spectacles. But there came a rude awakening.

When Monday arrived Ellice did not return, but a letter came:

"I know you spoke the truth when you said you loved me. I meant that you should love me; and, as you broke the heart of my sister, Vi Bamford, I hope I have broken yours. I shall never marry.

"ELLICE STORMONT."

The blow was indeed a severe one for Guy Charter. Ellice's work had proved only too successful. For a day or two he was too broken down to do anything, but then he sought her. He wrote to her, but his letter was returned through the post. He traveled after her, and went to every place where she would be likely to have been seen or known of, but in vain. She had disappeared, no one knew where.

Guy little knew the bitter tears she shed, or the broken heart she herself carried. Had he done so he could not have endeavored more eagerly to trace her.

After a while, when all his efforts had proved unavailing, he went abroad.

Some twelve months afterward, among a band of ladies working in the slums of the east end of London, visiting the sick poor and doing what they could to relieve the suffering around them, one, "Sister Ellice," was the most devoted and toilsome of them all. The clergy and her fellow workers warned her that her health would give way under the unremitting exertion, but she paid no heed to them. In her secret heart she wished to die.

One day she was informed of a fresh case of distress. A poor woman lay sick of low fever, brought on by hardship, want of food and the drunkenness and neglect of her husband.

Taking with her some nourishing food, Sister Ellice wended her way up the three or four flights of naked, dirty stairs to the attic in which the woman lived, and she was soon listening to the dismal tale of the poor creature's life.

Then the husband came in. He commenced to grumble before he had reached the door, but when he saw the visitor his tone altered.

The man bore traces of better things. Beneath his rags and his dissipation there was something that told of gentler birth, but it was a mere shadow, as it were, which was almost totally eclipsed by the reality of his present vice and wretchedness.

Throwing himself on a broken-backed chair, he at once started telling his woes in a maudlin way.

"Poor Bessie!" he cried hypocritically, for he cared naught for her. "She's very ill, and I've no money to get her proper nourishment. If you can help us a little, ma'am, I shall be very grateful."

But Sister Ellice had grown to know the ways of such as he. If she had given money it would have immediately been turned into drink, and she took not the slightest notice of him.

So he went on.

"Ah! I've seen better days. To think that a nephew of Sir Kenelm Charter should come to this. He's worth millions, and yet he won't help me. He's cast me off in my misfortunes."

"Sir Kenelm Charter?" she said inquiringly.

"Yes," he replied; "Sir Kenelm Charter. 'Do you know him, ma'am.?'"

"No; but I've heard of him," she said.

"Well, I'm his nephew. My name's Guy Charter."

Ellice looked searchingly at the man to see if it could possibly be her Guy. But there was no need. There was not the trace of a resemblance. What could it mean? Were there two Guy Charters? Two nephews of Sir Kenelm Charter, both of the same name? As the idea occured to her, the room and everything in it seemed to whirl around her, and she would have fainted but that by a mighty effort she rose from her seat and walked about the apartment.

"Has Sir Kenelm Charter two nephews named Guy, then?" she asked quietly, as she resumed her seat.

"Yes," replied the man savagely. "There's a prig of a fellow, a cousin of mine, who calls himself Guy. I'm the son of Sir Kenelm's elder brother, and he's only the son of a younger one. But he's the favored one now, and he'll get all the money, while I am left to starve. I've met with misfortune and the old hunks has cast me off!"

He did not say how generous and kind his old uncle had been to him, and what a base return he had made.

Sister Ellice finished attending to her patient; and as she left the room she beckoned to the husband to follow her.

"Tell me," she said sternly, when they had got outside the door, "did you know a Miss Bamford?"

The fellow, dirty and degraded as he was, blushed and hung his head.

"Poor Vi!" he murmured. "Yes, I knew her."

Ellice made for the stairs, but he followed her. The chance of getting a shilling to buy whisky with was too good to be lost.

"Can you spare me a shilling?" he asked.

And, to be rid of him, she gave him one.

This, then was the offender. This was the Guy Charter who had mortally murdered her sister! Truly vengeance had followed upon him quickly, and without human aid, as Vi had said it would. And Ellice, in pursuing her rash vow, had wrecked an innocent man's happiness, and her own, too.

She never knew how she managed to reach the "Sisters' Home;" but when she got there she was put to bed, stricken with brain fever.

In three months' time the doctors ordered Ellice to the seaside.

She chose Shoreport. She hardly knew why; but she felt a desire to return to the place where her happiness had been shattered.

There she gradually gained strength, and as warmer days came on she was able to wander on the beach that reminded her of her great mistake.

One morning she ventured a little further than usual, and finding herself out of sight of the parade and the people, she sat down upon a bowlder to think.

Presently she bowed her head and wept.

"Oh, Guy, Guy!" she sobbed aloud. "I might have known that it could not have been you. You were too noble for such a thing; but I was blind. Oh, Guy, Guy, where are you?"

She had not been aware of a soft step on the sands, but she felt a hand laid gently upon her shoulder, and she heard the voice of him she loved.

"I am here, Ellice, my darling. It was a sad mistake; but I have found you at last!"

Happiness had returned to her; but she had paid dearly during those weary months for her rash vow.—Spare Moments.

RUSHING TO THE FRONT.

An Exciting and Suggestive Episode of the Year 1861.

Twenty days after the fall of Sumter, in 1861, President Lincoln issued his second call for volunteers—that of 42,000—three-year men (the first being for 75,000; ninety-day men, made April 15, 1861), two days after Sumter. The response was more like the passage of the $50,000,000 appropriation recently in Congress than anything recalled at this time. The Government was not prepared to meet the exigencies of the situation, especially in the matter of transportation.

Later, Thomas A. Scott of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, was made Assistant Secretary of War and given the direction of all matters relating to railroad transportation. Order and system soon came out of confusion, and troops were moved with the regularity of mail trains in times of peace.

It was during the confusion days, and in answer to the call for 42,000 three-year volunteers, that a Wisconsin Colonel reached Corning, N. Y., en route to Washington with his regiment of nearly 1,100 men.

By some miscalculation, no way had been prepared to forward these men to the front—beyond this point.

The Colonel kept the wires hot in appeals for further transportation. He was told that he could not be moved for possibly a week. He replied that he was not in the field and how was he to subsist his men. The reply was equivalent to quien sabe.

Here was a dilemma which could not have been met save by an American officer, in command of Americans and on American soil. He ordered his regiment into line and called for volunteers for special service: "All experienced telegraph operators, particularly those familiar with railroad work, step three paces to the front." The same order for railroad engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, switchmen and blacksmiths.

To everybody's surprise, he had enough experts of each kind to man a dozen trains. At once they were ordered to make-up the necessary trains from cars standing idle in the yard, take engines from the roundhouse and get ready to move the regiment with the greatest despatch.

Then the telegraph operators were ordered to notify every office along the line, the general office in New York (Erie), that of the Northern Central at Philadelphia, and the Erie and Pennsylvania Central that Colonel —— and his regiment of 1,100 men were going to the front, that they had the right of way, or "by the Great Jehovah they would take it." All trains were ordered sidetracked, and if "Uncle Sam complains about the detention of his mail for a few hours refer him to the undersigned, bound for Dixie."

Everything kept out of the way, and when the Colonel reached Harrisburg he found a full complement of cars ready to take him through to Baltimore and Washington, and it was said, "shove him across the long bridge into Virginia before he quarters his men in the Senate chamber or bivouacs on the grounds of the White House."

Two Things the Kaiser Does Not Like.

The Kaiser is a military man from crown to foot. His numerous wardrobes contain only five suits of mufti, mostly made in Vienna. Like most German officers, he never looks well in them. He never wears an evening dress suit. He has a particular abneigung against the swallow tail, which reminds him of the somber surroundings of a funeral. This unconquerable objection is accountable for an imperial regulation ordaining that wherever possible courtiers and guests shall wear the frock coat a l'Anglais, otherwise the newly introduced court dress is de riguer. The black swallow tail is thus fast being forced out of German court circles. Umbrellas are his pet aversion—he never possessed one in his life—and as to sticks, they are usually the cheapest he can buy. His rifles are under the special care of the leibjager, and kept in a special cupboard. A remarkable feature of this collection is the hunting sticks which His Majesty has cut with his own hand while out hunting, or received as presents during is expeditions from gentry and peasantry alike.

The Kaiser's wardrobes occupy a suite of five rooms in the old castle at Berlin. They are massive and of oak. In the middle of one of the rooms is a large table for spreading out the uniforms. There is a sixth room in which small repairs are undertaken. Here a tailor is permanently employed, for Kaiser Welhelm does not throw away clothes until they are well worn. He keeps about eighteen pairs of white military gloves in use. These are cleaned and repaired from time to time. The glover receives a small yearly sum for his services. Each pair is supposed to have a certain "life." Should the leather show any defect, it is returned to the unluckly glover with a preemptory demand for an explanation.

When a suit is ordered, woe be to the tailor should it not fit like a glove, though a "try on" is never permitted. Directly a suit has been taken off, it is returned to the wardrobe and there subjected to the closest scrutiny. The orders and decorations are kept in an iron safe, and represent in value about one and a half million marks.—Pall Mall Gazette.

HAVANA.

Gay and Picturesque Cuban Capital Has a Famous History.

HAVANA, the capital of Cuba, is a world-city, known wherever the fame of cities has reached, and deserving of its fame, too, for like all great cities of industry and art, it is unique. Cuba's capital is coeval with the Mediterranese conquest of the Western hemisphere. The name of the city is characteristic of the religious Latin races, for when Diego de Velasquez laid its foundations, in 1515, he christened it San Cristobal de la Habana—St. Christopher of the haven or harbor—in honor of Columbus, the discoverer of the island. This name, bestowed upon the city by the conqueror of the island, has remained unchanged, and it is still officially so called. But its popular name has been shortened to Habana in Spanish and Havana in other tongues. The city has a population of about 200,000.

Havana is sited on the west side of the bay of its own name—one of the most beautiful bodies of water of its kind found anywhere. The city stands on a sort of peninsula that is formed on one side by the waters of the bay, and on the other by those of the gulf. In olden times it was one of the strongest of the places of the civilized world. When ships of war were of wood and carried a few guns whose bullets were repelled by granite masonry, Havana was impregnable. But the "oak leviathans" and the "rock-built cities" of Lord Byron are now historical. On the one hand the recent destruction of the Maine indicates the cause why granite walls are no longer needed, and on the other it is seen how the submarine mine and torpedo have developed gun powder, which enables a ship to stand miles without a harbor and land shells in a city's heart.

Yet if it were not for Spanish poverty and decline, Havana to-day might have been as relatively strong as when, in 1585, it drove the fierce Sir Francis Drake away from its coasts. The fact is that the Spaniards have not kept step with the march of progress. The insanity of attempting to defend Havana with the same implements and methods of warfare that were successful three centuries ago is in perfect keeping with Spain's anachronism in civilization.

The town, as has already been said, is unique. It is not Spanish, it is not Oriental, it is not European, nor does it at all resemble anything in the United States. It is Cuban. The bay, ordinarily, is one of the most vividly beautiful sights to be seen anywhere. Humboldt's description of the approaches to Havana fails to do it justice, and that distinguished traveler admits that the picture is indescribable.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF HAVANA.

Cuba and Havana have ways and wards that are all their own.

Slaves to Precedent.

Havana is a mystery to the European and the American. The question, "Why do you this and do you that?" is always answered with, "We have always done so; what else would you have us do?" Why the farmers use a crooked stick to plow with, why ladies sit in their carriages while the dry goods clerks bring out rolls of cloth for them to inspect; why dark women and even black women powder their faces until they look as if they had been daubed with flour; why houses are built to a line within two feet of the curbing, so that pedestrians cannot walk two abreast; why the houses are all painted in whatever vivid color pleases the owner most; why an unearthly clangor of bells drives sleep from the city at daybreak; why no one ever keeps an appointment (and never apologizes for the offense), are questions that Havanese and Cubans do not explain or attempt to explain.

The almost equatorial sun beats down upon the streets with terrific heat during the day, and none but business people and "low people" are seen during the early and middle day. When the sun sinks, however, the lazy inhabitants turn out, and the life of the night is the lively life of Havana. The city has not been very businesslike under Spanish rule. Most of the men are worthless and dissipated. They lounge in cafes and look only to pleasure such as the Spaniard delights in—gambling, cock fighting, bull baiting. No thought of the morrow is taken, and the result is that a more improvident population can be found nowhere. Sunday is Havana's holiday.

As for the churches, thousands of women religiously attend. In Cuba the church and her children are a woman's life. She soon loses her husband as her companion in the home. She does not read. She never heard of a new woman. She has her little circle of friends like herself, and some day dies. But she has been faithful to the church, and the most striking thing about a service in the great cathedral is the presence of the women of Havana and the absence of the men. It is said here that most men go to church but three times in their life—when baptised, when about to be married and when dead—and the church is as rigid in its requirement of the first two visits as the departed is to be received there at last.

BLANCO'S PALACE.

The cathedral is really one of the finest edifices in Havana. It is built to last for ages. In it are the remains of Christopher Columbus—that is, the tomb is there, beside the altar and the inscription. It is also duly authenticated that the remains are there, too, but even Spaniards nod doubtfully when asked, "Is it true?"

HOTEL INGLATERRA, RESORT OF FOREIGNERS.

The lottery is the curse of Havana. One of the first cries heard on the street in the morning is the schrill voice of a Cuban yelling that he has lottery tickets for sale. It is often the last sound heard at night. It would seem that all Cuba must gamble to support so formidable a company of fakers.

All the storekeepers are courteous and unobtrusive. A visitor experiences great difficulty in purchasing anything characteristically Cuban in the stores, but that is because Cuba produces only two things, sugar and tobacco, and buys everything she uses—even buys back her sugar refined.

The easiest thing to buy is cigars, and they cost astonishingly less than in the States. There is an experience in buying them, because the great cigar factories of Havana, producing brands that are known to smokers all over the world, are interesting institutions. They occupy buildings so nearly resembling the ordinary dwelling house that they would be mistaken for them by a stranger except for the odor.

Quaint Cuban Houses.

The Cuban house of the better class is of the ordinary, typical construction. It is enormously heavy, built of adobe or soft stone, to withstand earthquakes and to resist heat. The rooms are enormous, with ceiling from fifteen to twenty or twenty-five feet high, all floors, even in the bedrooms, being of stone, and the windows covered with great iron bars.

The houses of the lower class look no different from without, but are awful within, and there the cause of Havana's scourges of yellow fever is at once apparent. The city is badly drained. The bay, with no free course of water, and comparatively little tide, is a reservoir, uncleansed, of the city's offal. It breeds disease, and in squalor where personal uncleanliness is added to the perils incurred by municipal neglect, the houses of the poor have become the incubators of pestilence. Havana has many beautiful parks, squares and public places. The squares are all ornamented with royal palms and here and there an orange or banana tree, and here and there an Indian laurel.

No city in the world is furnished with such an abundance and variety of foods as is Havana, with the possible exception of San Francisco. The earth and the sea give to its people all the best of their fruits. The great market of Havana is without an equal, surpassing, as it does, the famed French market of New Orleans. This market covers an area equal to that of an American block, and it is all under a single roof. There are numberless booths in which are exposed for sale all the fruits of the tropics, sea fish, fresh water fish, meats, game, leather goods, jewelry and such curios as only a seaport visited by the commerce of the world can pick up. There are seen men, women and children of every nationality upon the earth. The wonder is how so small a town can gather to itself such a wide range of humanity.

The population of Havana is mixed and its morale is very low. The condition of the women remind a widely traveled man of the women of the Orient. They are close-kept and live in tropical idleness. Miscegeneration is common, and it is no rare matter to find a Cuban family of very good social position and of considerable wealth composed of persons that would be classed as quadroons in America. Havana is a city of grand surprises for the foreign visitor. A political mite as it is in comparison with London, there are slums in Havana that cannot be matched in the metropolis of the world.

As Place of Residence.

Havana has infinite charms as a place of residence. Its climate, its vegetation, the cheap rate at which one can buy all the delicacies of the table, the romance in the very air, the ease with which a little labor will yield a large return, the proximity of the sea, its middle distance between the invigorating north and the tropical countries of the southern continent, the profusion of its fruits and flowers—all these things make it a most desirable place to live, and there is no doubt that thousands of Americans had been there long ago were it not for the blighting and repressing rule of Spain—a rule that tends to ruin commerce and enterprise wherever it has sway.

In 1550 the seat of Spanish officialdom in Cuba was transferred from Santiago de Cuba to Havana, an early recognition of the city's importance. One year later pirates under the leadership of the notorious Jacob Sores attacked the town, sacked its church and the dwellings of the wealthy and compelled the commander of the fortress to surrender. Sores soon grew tired of the place and withdrew. But his example was frequently followed, and numerous attempts were made by buccaneers to capture the city and loot it. Notable among these efforts was that of the English buccaneer, Sir Francis Drake, who assaulted Havana in 1585, but was compelled to retire. The first scourge of yellow fever appeared in the shipping during the summer of 1761. In 1762 Admiral Pocock, with an English squadron, attacked Havana and forced it to capitulate. For two months the city put up a brave defense. In 1763 Havana was restored to the Spanish by the treaty of Paris.

The first newspaper published in Havana was La Gaceta de la Habana, which appeared in 1782. In 1789 the Jesuits were expelled from the city, and their church was converted into the cathedral of the diocese. This is the church in which it is said the ashes of Columbus were deposited in the year 1806. In 1818 Havana was opened to the commerce of the world.

HIS MINE BLEW UP THE MAINE.

English Electrician Who Declares He Sold Engine of Death to Spain.

This is J. P. Gibbins, the English electrical and mining engineer, who declares he sold a submarine engine of death to Spain. He says Spain has had no submarine mines since 1886-'87, except those manufactured under his patents, and that in 1896 the Spanish Government ordered a fresh supply of him. Mr. Gibbins also says:

"In direct contradiction of the assertion of the secretary of the Spanish legation at Washington and Gen. Weyler that there are no submarine mines in Havana harbor I absolutely affirm that I shipped the above mines for Havana and Ferrol in a Spanish ship, the property of the Spanish Government and officered by Spanish naval officers, with two captains, at the West India dock, London. My mines are in electrican connection with the shore, and it is quite impossible that they could be exploded except by design. I am convinced also that the explosion of the mine which destroyed the Maine was the work of one or two men." And he gives his reasons in detail.

JOSEPH PAUELL GIBBINS.

Spring onions are very good for you, but dreadful for the man who sits next to you.

WEALTHY MAN'S HOME IDEA.

One Household Has Combined Hotel and Private Comforts.

"I saw something in the newspapers the other day," remarked a well-dressed, comfortable-looking man, "about Vanderbilt giving up that great house of his down there at Asheville, and I wonder that he has worried with it as long as he has, not to mention the tremendous amount of money he has spent on it. Now, I am not so rich as Mr. Vanderbilt, but I have something for a rainy day, and I have more for that purpose by not spending it all on a palace. I presume I might have put as much as $250,000 into a home for myself and family, but instead of doing that I bought a tract of land finely located in New York State, for which I gave $10,000. There was quite a lake on it and some pretty sharp hills, which made it cheap land, and I got plenty for my money, but it was what I wanted. It was conveniently located within three hours of the city and was not far from two or three good country towns and a mile from the railroad.

"Here I built what you might call a summer hotel. It was a house of frame, costing, furnished in a plain, substantial way, $25,000, and had forty rooms in it, including office, ballroom and the usual similitudes of summer hotels in all their appointments, with electric light, water, sewerage, etc. On the lake I put a small launch and a lot of small boats; I built and equipped a stable accommodating a dozen horses and vehicles and I added bowling alley, tennis court, golf links and all that sort. Then I secured a good small hotel manager and a force of servants sufficient to run my hotel in a pleasant and comfortable way, without any frills, and my family and I moved in.

"My wife lived exactly as if she were in a hotel, except that the manager conferred with her when she wished any changes, and she took none of the worry of housekeeping upon herself. My sons and daughters had their apartments as in any other hotel, and I made no exactions except that the entire family should dine together every day when we were all at home. Of course we entertained and still entertain our friends, but there isn't any worry about them. We all live together as in one hotel, and everything we have is for them as much as for us, and the manager in charge of us all.

"It is the ideal way of living, and on an outlay of$5,000 for the place and an expense of less than $10,000 a year we live better and have ten times as much good out of life as most of our rich contemporaries get out of $100,000 a year or more. I may add that in winter the force is cut down and we live in town, but the house is always ready for any of us who may want to go there."—Washington Star.

navy yard, says the Boston Herald. He has never received any certified commission from the Navy Department, yet he says he is the "captain of the captain's launch." He is the son of Captain Picking, and is 8 years old. "Sherd," as he says his short name is, goes to school every day and returns on board with great dignity every afternoon. Besides being a dignified and popular ship's mascot, he is a born naval fighter.

Shakspeare's Knowledge.

It is not for a moment to be denied that Shakspeare's plays show an extraordinary wealth of varied knowledge. The writer was one of the keenest observers that ever lived. In the woodland or on the farm, in the printing shop or the ale house, or up and down the street, not the smallest detail escaped him. Microscopic accuracy, curious interest in all things, unlimited power of assimilating knowledge, are everywhere shown in the plays. These are some of the marks of what we call genius, something that we are far from comprehending, but which experience has shown that books and universities cannot impart. All the colleges on earth could not by combined effort make the kind of a man we call a genius, but such a man may at any moment be born into the world, and it is as likely to be in a peasant's cottage as anywhere.

There is nothing in which men differ more widely than in the capacity for imbibing and assimilating knowledge. The capacity is often exercised unconsciously. When my eldest son, at the age of 6, was in the course of a few weeks of daily instruction taught to read, it was suddenly discovered that his 4-year-old brother also could read. Nobody could tell how it happened. Of course the younger boy must have taken keen notice of what the elder one was doing, but the process went on without attracting attention until the result appeared.—Atlantic.

THE SOLDIERS' SOCIAL

Auburn W. R. C. and Their Lady Friends Give Co. K. a Farewell Social

Monday's Daily.

It has been many years since a farewell social was given to our departing soldiers and the one Saturday evening recalls vividly, the stirring events of the great rebellion. When Co. K. went to preserve order and the honor of the state, in the days of the Roby troubles, and later in the great strike of '94, they went quietly away, but in the latter case, were given a royal welcome and banquet in honor of their return after successfully accomplishing their mission. In the present instance the conditions are of more solemn moment, and it was indeed most fitting that they should be given this token of our esteem and appreciation.

It was all a voluntary matter suddenly taken up by our patriotic ladies, and rapidly carried to successful conclusion At 8:30 the basement of Presbyterian church was well filled with loaded tables and soon, came the regular tramp of the neatly attired and military looking young men, who with wives and sweethearts filled the long tables, which were found not equal to seating all. Prayer was offered, a most patriotic and reverent one, by Hon. E. D. Hartman, himself an ex-soldier. Then there was a brief period of silence and attention to the business before them. Then came, the second table, to accommodate those not seated at the first, and with them also, the G. A. R. who were present to do honor to the young soldiers, as others had done to them in the 60's. At the close of the second table, a speech of thanks was made by Maj. Kuhlman, a fine, manly address, such as he always makes. It was very much in place, and alluded feelingly to his early connection with Co K. which he had organized. He spoke of their past honorable service and his abiding faith in their no less honorable future. He was followed by Mr. Hartman, who had been chosen to respond. This was a most feeling and natural talk. He called up for the benefit of the young soldiers, his own experience of thirty-six years ago, when as a young and raw soldier he went to the front, called up also some of his experiences, gave the boys some valuable advice and ended with word of highest hope for their success, and the good record he was sure they would make. Capt. Lahnum was then called on for remarks. He surprised many, by making a bright little speech proving that he could talk as well as fight. He alluded to the sorrow that all felt at parting especially from wives and families. But he knew the loyalty of our people, would see that these dear ones were cared for while those on whom they leaned for support were in distant fields carrying the starry flag high aloft in the cause of humanity and human freedom. All the speakers were loudly cheered. As the company filed out, the lady entertainers, shook hands with them, bade them good by and an earnest "God speed."

The scene was quite dramatic, for all believed the governor's call would come before morning.

BLADDER TROUBLES

The bladder was created for one purpose, namely, a receptacle for the urine, and as such it is not liable to any form of disease except by one of two ways The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys. The second way is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

SAMPLE SENT FREE.

Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief of cause of bladder troubles. It is comforting to know that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root fulfills every wish in quickly curing bladder and urinary troubles. It corrects frequent call, inability to hold urine and scalding or stinging pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample, bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail on receipt of three 2-cent stamps. Mention Auburn COURIER and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

THE RUGMAN ASSAULT.

Monday's Daily.

When people read Saturday evening the detailed account in the COURIER of this brutal assault, they became aware for the first time that a great crime had been committed in the limits of the town and on a well known citizen. We now give additional particulars. It appears that Mr. Rugman and several other men had spent the first half of the evening about town and soon after twelve o'c ock, Nightwatch Baker, saw him with several others, leave the Hollister House, going south. At the Swineford House, the men separated, This is the last seen of Rugman. It is known to several, that the men had been drinking, but though they showed some effects, none were drunk. All walked as well as usual. It is likely that Mr. Rugman soon after separating from the others, came back up to Seventh street and went west. It appears he must have been assaulted in front of Caruth's for there was a print of his hand on the sidewalk, as if he had been trying to get up. He was not found as stated by us Saturday, but must have got up himself, as he reached his home about 3 in the morning. All the rest of the story is as we had it Saturday. His hurts are more serious than at first supposed.

Today, Monday, Mr. Rugman's son was in town. His father seems easier and they are trying to save the eye, but it is very doubtful. Rugman can give no further account of how it happened. It appears that Dall Gibson and others near there heard two shots at about the time the assault must have taken place. Dall got up, went to the window, but could see or hear nothing more. But it does not seem that the wounds were made by a bullet.

OUR ARMY.

(South Bend Times.)

There are one or two points regarding the strength of the United States army for purposes of invasion that the people should bear in mind, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says. The regular army consists of about 26,000, counting in the parts of the two new artillery regiments which have been enlisted. A few men are likely to be left at each of the numerous inland posts in this country which will be temporarily abandoned, and 6,000 or 8,000 will have to be left at the fortifications at the important points on the coast—New York, Charleston, New Orleans, San Francisco and the others. At the outside probably 18,000 men are all that could be spared out of the regular army for the invasion of Cuba. It will be necessary, of course, to supplement this force by a good many thousand militia or volunteers, and these can be quickly secured.

Low Journalism

A few days ago the COURIER gave a short account of the school trouble at Butler. It was given us direct from one who resides in that place, and is probably in the main correct. Now comes the Butler Record, and gets down to a level of the Garrett Clipper, by calling the editor of the paper "Mother" Barns This is not only low and indecent journalism but a plane to which any respectable man would refuse to descend. Then the Record goes on to give an account of the affair, which is substantially as we gave it. So no further comment on that point is needed. If "Prof." Kimmel desires to get up a quarrel with the editor of this paper over the publication of a mere matter of news, in which the editor has no interest, he can do so. But he will do well to choose a more decent and respectable method of conducting the fight. If he is of the caliber this sort of borrowed defense would indicate he will not long remain a teacher in DeKalb county.

IN JAIL.

Readers will remember the court report in the COURIER last winter in regard to the trouble between Louis Hoffmeyer, up in Fairfield, and Mr. Burtendorff the mail carier, about some corn and other crops. Mr. Hoffmeyer was worsted into that suit and thrown into the costs As he failed to pay these court expenses, the judgment and costs, amounting to near $200, the sheriff, early last week went up there and levied on his team, wagon, catite, binder, etc, and took possession of them. But soon after the sheriff left, Hoffmeyer concluded he had a right to go on and use the team to put in his oats. So he took the team out of the stable and went to work. This being illegal, when the sheriff found it out, he went up their Thursday and arrested Hoffmeyer and lodged him in jail where he now is. Hoffmeyer begins to think the law is a queer thing.

Bay VanAuken Arrested.

Monday's Daily.

Just before noon today, deputy Sheriff Platter arrested Bay VanAuken, on suspicion that he was the man who assaulted Rugman. It is claimed he had no money the day before, and had plenty the next day, and it is said it can be proved that he got a $10 bill changed. But he claims he got this bill by beating Dan Lung at the Junction at a game of poker. But Lung denies this. It has also come to be known, that when the three men parted near the Zeigler building, as told by Night-watch Baker, one he did not recognize, went to the Swineford, and the other went west on Ninth street, and was plainly seen to be Bay VanAuken. If he is the guilty one, he must have gone west, then turned north and got to Caruth's as Rugman came along. At least it was this and the money, that led to suspicion, and his arrest. He is in jail.

First Blood for Spain.

There came near being a serious accident at the M. E. church Sunday evening. There were many flags to decorate the room suitably and one fell in such a way that the brass eagle on the staff, struck Rev. Mr Grimes, the lecturer, squarely on the head, making an ugly gash and causing blood to flow He was taken from the church and Dr. Baxter dressed his wound. Though he is 91 years old, he says he will lecture to-night at the M. E. church It was the first American blood shed in this war.

BEATEN AND ROBBED.

Charlie Rugman Knocked Over by Footpads Last Night.

Chas. Rugman was found lying in a pool of blood near D. C. Caruth's residence at about 3 o'clock this morning. He could give no account of what had happened and after being taken home. Dr. Hines was sent for and dressed his wounds. The robbers had evidently used a sharp instrument in cutting and beating him. His right eye was put out the ball being punctured. His nose was nearly cut from his face, a bone was taken from it by Dr. Hines. The right side of his head and face was cut and pounded into a pulp He will be disfigured but his condition is not considered dangerous. The robbers took all his money, $15. He is in such a dazed condition he can give no account of how it happened.

TWO FLAGS RAISED

As announced before, there were two flags raisings Saturday. At 4:30 the employes of the Body factory, raised theirs. There was quite a gathering to witness the ceremony. The Auburn Drum Corps played and a detachment from Co. K. fired a salute. Then there was an appropriate and patriotic speech by Mr. Hoyt, pastor of the Baptist church.

As soon as this was over, all adjourned to the Zimmerman factory where another fine flag was raised, though one had been informally displayed for a day or two. Marie Weamer raised the stars and stripes to the top of the flagstaff and Mr. Guild made an eloquent address. The salute was also given by Co. K. and the drum corps. Both events were marked with great interest and enthusiasm.

OUR NAVY.

It is comforting to be assured from reliable sources that this country now has a navy that no nation save Great Britain can equal. Uncle Sam is well prepared for war. He has 75 war vessels of the latest approved designs. The skill of American gunners has been amply demonstrated at target practice. Spain has one modern battleship like ours. Her best vessels are in the armored cruiser class, and there is where we are particularly strong Preparation on sea and shore are such as to make the war end quickly and satisfactorily. That's what the people want. A great country like ours can't afford to "play" long with a decaying nation like Spain. The Dons must be licked neatly and expeditiously. Making a good job of it will have a wholesome effect on "the powers" of Europe. And just now that is a matter of considerable importance to us.

COST OF PAVEMENT.

(Hicksville News.)

Our enterprising contractor, Clemmer & Johnson, have completed their estimates and figures on pavement for Smith street and we give them here to show how greatly the expense is misunderstood by some residents of that and other streets, The air has been filled with talk of from $3 to $3 50 per square yard as the price, when in reality it will only cost $1.60. In other words a party holding a lot with fifty foot frontage will have to pay but $106.66. This is complete and includes filling and parking the sides, curbing and all the expense of the job. These figures are based on a 24 foot pavement which is plenty wide for a strictly residence street It is usually arranged in such cases that the payment is extended over a period of ten or more years. At ten a man would have to pay but $6.07 per year additional taxes. Of course those who desire could cash up at once and save interest.

ANGOLA SENDS 101

Special to the Courier.

ANGOLA, IND., April 26, 1898:—Angola and the surrounding country is completely excited this morning About 4 o'clock a. m., the bells and steam whistles sounded the signals that the militia had received the call to go on the morning train. The town was all astir by sun up, and the crowds increased to see the boys off. The militia of 101 men were escorted to the train by the Angola band, drum corps, Woman's Relief Corps, old veterans and the two companies of college militia, 125 strong. The scene was exciting and impressive. All business houses were closed. Amid the tumult and din of excitement, the boys proudly marched to the train with "Old Glory" floating over them. Fully 4,000 people gathered at the depot to bid the boys good by and wish them success and victory in the cause of Cuban liberty. Long live the Cubans.

JOHN T. HAYDEN DEAD.

Mr. Hayden who had been getting worse for several days, died Sunday at 2:30 p. m He had been sick about six months. He will be taken to Hillsdale on special train and buried in a vault in the cemetery there. No relatives except his wife and the family of Mr. Holmes were present at his death.

OVER 100 NOW.

Yesterday new recruits for Co. K. kept coming in and by this morning there are over 100 in the list. Of course some have no uniforms but will be provided at Indianapolis. With old members and the new, there will be no better company in the state.

LATE WAR NEWS.

All sorts of rumors are going over the wires, and it is difficult to separate the true from the false.

The Helena, U. S. Cruiser, captured a Spanish ship Sunday 100 miles west of Havana loaded with staves and cotton.

The U. S. Cruiser Detroit captured a large vessel 12 miles from Havana, loaded with chickens, beef, staves and cotton after a long chase.

The rumor of the capture by Spaniards of the City of Paris, coming from England and the Shenandoah in the Pacific is unfounded. Also as to the Man-of-war Oregon. Any of them may yet be taken, though.

Friday, the Cruiser New York at Havana, fired on and captured two merchant ships. One was let go, as she was a German vessel.

When the state militia go they will camp on the state fair grounds now being prepared for them.

There was r great deal of excitement at Havana when they saw the American fleet coming.

The blockade of Havana is intended to cut off supplies from reaching the Spanish garrison or any Spanish soldiers.

The torpedo boat Porter, has captured the Spanish ship Mathilde.

No truth in the rumor that Hawaii had been seized by us.

Spanish big guns on Morro Castle, outside Havana harbor fired at our fleet Saturday, so a probable rumor has it. Our vessels do not reply Let Spain waste her powder. She will hardly get any more into Havana.

Both nations will probably declare war today.

Governors will likely call troops tonight or tomorrow.

Tuesday's Daily.

Our ships have up to last accounts received, captured nine merchant vessels belonging to Spanish ports. The Spaniards have not taken one from us.

About every company that reaches Indianapolis today, will have extra men, without arms or uniforms. The state will not have enough to furnish them all and if they are kept in the companies, they must wait till the United States can supply them.

It takes a day or two to get correct news from Cuba, so we know that some things have been done yesterday and today, that we have not yet heard.

It is believed there will be a decisive naval battle near Havana, when the Spanish fleet gets there which may be in a week or so.

Indiana is called on for four full regiments and two batteries.

The Zollinger battery left Fort Wayne early this morning.

All the Spanish ships that have tried to get into Havana since the blockade, have been captured.

England has proclaimed her neutrality and has requested that all war ships of the United States and Spain leave her harbors.

Wednesday's Daily.

Co. K. got into camp last evening and got fixed up in fair shape.

The United States are still in the market to buy either war ships or such merchant vessels as can be turned into armed ships.

Spain says our taking the Spanish ship Ventura, is piracy. But it makes no difference what Spain says. We are now seeking her isles, not her smiles.

It is now believed that the American merchant ship, Shenandoah has been seen at sea and is safe.

We have captured a Spanish army officer, who was trying to return to his family in Spain. He is the first soldier taken.

Gomez, the Cuban leader, now thinks he will soon win. It is expected we will send him plenty of arms and ammunition, and with our people on one side and Gomez on the other, the Spanish army will be in bad shape.

Monday evening, one of our lively little ships, the Mangrove, one of the smallest of the vessels assisting in the blockade of Havana, chased, and after several shots, captured a Spanish cruiser Panama, very much stronger than herself, and with heavier guns. It was not an ironclad cruiser, but one of those big merchant ships that both countries are arming. The Mangrove had not men enough to put a crew abroad the prize to carry it to port. But the big cruiser Indiana came and furnished the men.

We have taken three other ships besides the Panama, since last reports

Spanish cruisers are hurrying across the ocean, and soon there may be real fighting.

We are getting ready to help the Cuban insurgents with men, money and arms.

From all over the union comes news of militia being rapidly called out and going into camp.

It looks now as if we are to have a big naval battle near Havana soon.

RECORDS STOLEN.

Butler is a great place for politics. While Auburn has almost forgotten that we have an election, owing to sending 100 armed soldiers to the front, Butler is all torn up over the village election. Now, one party, apparently to keep some matter secret, has stolen the council records including tax receipt books, financial records and council proceedings. Last evening the council met and appointed a committee of six to wait on the taxpayers and get duplicates of their tax receipts.

THE RUGMAN CASE.

Tuesday's Daily.

People still look to the COURIER to give them important details. Mr. Caruth has a reasonable theory as to how the attack was made. He believes that as Rugman was walking home he was overtaken near Caruth's gate and struck from behind with some yielding club like a rubber hose filled with shot or sand, for there are several bruised streaks on his head that must have been made in just that way. He thinks the blow stunned him so that he fell, striking his head and face against the sharp points of the iron picket tops, cutting the nose, and punching into the eye. The fence is bent at that point and a picket top knocked off. There was indication of something like bruised flesh on the pickets and blood at the foot and across the walk, as if he might have been torn from the fence or torn himself free and then he probably tried to defend himself for he is not the man to give up without a fight. And he would be a hard man to handle. But it is supposed that the first blows so stunned him that he knew nothing of what he did after that. No doubt he was beaten to the ground, his money taken and he was rolled into the gutter which is clean and dry and grown with grass. There he lay till semi-consciousness returned and he finally struggled to his feet and in the same dazed state went to his home.

His eye is no doubt ruined, but they hope to be able to keep its appearance.

THREE BURGLARIES.

Three Auburn homes were entered last night probably after midnight. When C. C. Shaffer arose this morning and went to put on his clothes he found only his pants. His coat and vest were gone. He began to look about and soon found a window open and a table that stood in front of the window had been turned around, so that a person coming in would not have to climb over it. Outside the window was a red chair with no back. It would seem they brought this chair with them and after raising the window, they reached in and took out a 2-gallon bread jar that stood on the table, on top of the jar being a plate of eggs. Mr. Shaffer's loss is the coat and vest in the latter being $8 in cash, and a watch that belonged to his first wife, which of course he prized very highly.

Chas. Eckhart's house was entered and though they appear to have gone all over the house, but little was taken except about $1 50 cash.

At S. C. Snyder's they got his watch but nothing else as far as known.

Seventy Feet High

Dr. Swarts never does things by halves. He has beaten all others in the matter of flag raising, as anyone can see by the handsome hickory pole he put up yesterday with four flags on it. At about five p. m. when they had finished putting up the flag at the Thomas Sawmill and the boys of Co. K. came marching up, quite a crowd of people gathered to help at the work and in a few minutes, the pole, a nice 70-foot hickory sapling, was pointing skyward. At the top were three small flags, arranged in the shape of Neptune's trident, for we all know that the main fight is to be at sea, on the domain of father Neptune. The large flag was then run up by the usual halliards and soon floated in the breeze. As the starry folds shook out, the soldiers fired two volleys, and the crowd cheered. Then Rev. Hoyt made a short, but stirring speech, and then there was more cheering, and the company dispersed. And we who occupy the block are proud of the ornament on the corner.

THE THOMAS MILL.

At the Thomas sawmill in Stametstown, was the first flag raising of the afternoon. Here they had the drum corps and a squad of the Rifles, and quite a crowd of people. Speeches were made by W. H. McIntosh and Rev. Keller.

AT THE GREENLER FACTORY.

The Greenler boys put up an immense pole 108 feet in height and run up a beautiful flag, 10 by 18 feet in size This did not take place till after dark, as there was delay in getting the big pole ready. The Rifles were not present, but the Drum Corps, was and Rev. Stringfellow made a stirring speech.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR SHERIFF.

The citizens of Newville township will present the name of Geo. W. Bleeks, and ask his nomination for sheriff at the hands of the democratic county convention.

OFF TO THE WAR.

As predicted by the COURIE last evening, Co. K. received orders last night, or rather this morning. The signal as already stated, was to be the blowing of the big whistle on the Kiblinger factory, and at 3:25 the shrill sounds rang out and all who were not sound sleep rs, sprang out of bed. At once the streets were astir. Soldiers began to appear and non-commissioned officers hurried around, each to get his squad out. Teams went for the boys in the country, and in a short time came back loaded with boys in blue singing,

"The Union forever
Hurra! boys, Hurra!
Down with the Spaniards,
Up with the star
And we'll rally round the flag,
Boys, rally once again,
Shouting the Battle Cry of Freedom."

And all the morning, there was hurrying to and fro, and excited groups of citizens and blue coats talking, getting ready, and bidding farewell.

At 10:20, with a big crowd at the Lake Shore Station, a special with the companies from Angola and Waterloo, took them on and they went to Ft. Wayne, where the companies from that place joined them. Then on to Muncie, where they changed cars for Indianapolis, and by this time they are probably in their tents at the State fair ground, now to be called "Camp Mount."

There were several thousand people to see the boys off, and in some instances there were sad partings. But all in all, the crowd was cheerful, and gave them only words of cheer. The cars came rather late and were already crowded, but the hundred or more men were jammed in, and then they slowly steamed south, toward the seat of war, and,

"Many are the hearts that are sad to-night," in Auburn homes, for Co. K. has many high-souled and noble young men. And many prayers will go up from Auburn homes to-night for their safe and victorious return.

And every "boy" had a testament. A good thing to have.

The Hayden Funeral.

The funeral of Mr. Hayden, was at a little after 11, to day. When the special train of two cars came, with officials and friends on board, all came off, to where services were held at the residence of Mr. Holmes. Here were gathered, the sons and daughteas of the deceased, and the railroad officers who had come to do honor to the memory of their late associate. A prayer was offered by Mr. Guild, and the pall bearers, W. H. McIntosh, S. U. Tarney, E. Zimmerman, Wm. Elson, Joseph Stafford and Sherman Hollister, took charge under direction of G. S. McCord, and all moved to the train. Several from here, invited to go, and were added to the sad group that followed Mr. Hayden to his final resting place, in the beautiful Cemetery at the north of Hillsdale.

NO PAY—NO CURE

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Chills and Malaria. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price 50c. For sale by H. B. & McCord.

MORE EXCITEMENT.

At 2:30 yesterday afternoon Main Street was a scene of great excitement as a glaring light was seen coming from one of the leading business houses which was at first supposed to be fire, but upon investigation it was discovered that the alarm was false, as it was found to be the ruddy glow of the Beautiful Millinery display in TRENTMAN SISTER'S window. All ladies invited to call.

ONE VOICE FOR PEACE.

Mid the bustle of preparation and the crash of resounding arms and the general cry for "war," it may soothe the ruffled brow of Uncle Sam to know that "The Immortal J. N." has a large voice for peace. J. N, rends a telegram like this:

"TO WM. MCKINLEY, PRESIDENT.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

For God's sake have armistice. Let reason control the people.

J. N.

With full name sacrificed for truth."

For Mothers!

THE discomforts and dangers of child-birth can be almost entirely avoided. Wine of Cardui relieves expectant mothers. It helps a woman bear strong healthy children.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

has also brought happiness to thousands of homes barren for years. A few doses often brings joy to loving hearts that long for a darling baby. No woman should neglect to try it for this trouble. It cures nine cases out of ten. All druggists sell Wine of Cardui. $1.00 per bottle.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

MRS. LOUISA HALE, of Jefferson, Ga., says: "When I first took Wine of Cardui we had been married three years, but could not have any children. Nine months later I had a fine girl baby."

—Some one asked Dr. Swarts why he got a hickory pole for a flagstaff, and he answered: "There's no politics in this Cuban business. We're all one party now, and the hickory is good stuff for a flagstaff, good enough for me." More than that she won't know whether it was "Yanks" or "Johnnies" that hung her hide up on the fence.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Thayer Hayden was born in Northampton, Mass. November 4th, 1826. In young manhood he moved to Syracuse, N. Y. and was employed with his brother Elijah, as a cabinet maker. Subsequently he moved to Milwaukee, Wis., and remained there and vicinity for several years, a part of the time acting as secretary of an insurance company. He entered the service of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. in 1860 as agent at Adrian, Mich. This was the beginning of a successful railroad business life. From Adrian he went to Hillsdale remaining nearly 12 years, thence to Kalamazoo two years, from which place he went to Cleveland, Ohio and was given the position of traveling Auditor, which position he filled with ability and acceptability till failing health made it necessary to resign his position which he did about the first of February last. Desiring a quiet place to spend the closing days of his life, his wife having relatives in Auburn, Ind., they moved there and took up temporary residence with Mr. Holmes, a brother-in-law, at which place he died Sabbath afternoon April 24 1898.

He was married to Caroline Nolton of Syracuse, New York about 1845. Six children were born to this household, three having passed beyond before him. Two sons, Chas. S. and Frank N. reside in Chicago, one daughter, Gertrude now Mrs. S. M. Bond of Cleveland, Ohio, survive him. This union was broken by the death of Mrs. Hayden, Feb. 29, 1891.

He was subsequently married to Mrs. Chas. Putnam with whom he lived and whose joys he shared till death came and bereft her.

Mr. Hayden accepted the principles of Jesus Christ and in early life was connected with the Baptist church, and his many acts of kindness, his devotion to the cause of righteousness, his calm and thoughtful preparation for death, his words of positive assurance that all was well, give the mourning friends good basis of hope for blissful and eternal life.

Autonomist Government

Spain thinks she is doing a fine thing by offering to give Cuba an "autonomist government." That is, she offers to give them a government something like that of Canada. But there are disagreeable features. In Canada, the Queen appoints a governor-general over all the Canadian states. Then each state sends members of parliament as we do members of Congress. But these are members of the "House of Commons" only, a body like our House of Representatives Then they have a senate, but it is different from ours. The senators are not elected, but are appointed by the prime minister or premier, and hold office for life. Here is where the trouble comes in. The "conservatives" were in power for eighteen years, and of course the premier was a conservative, and appointed only members of that faith. And his appontees, added to those appointed by previous conservative premiers finally constituted all of 78 members, but twelve. So when the "liberals" came into power in 1896," though they had a good majority in the Commons, the senate was strong against them and they could pass no laws. And even now, they have but 20 out of the 78, for these senators are a healthy lot, and but few die and none resign. So there is a dead lock. Before 1896, the conservatives had only to get a bill through the commons, and the senate passed it in a jiffy. They were solid for the man who had appointed them.

DODGING DOG TAX.

Young America and Old America Both in Business.

It was predicted all along that there would be some ingenious dog-tax-dodging when the new law goes into effect. When the assessor comes around to do the ordinary assessing, the owner of the dog must pay the tax directly to him. It is cash up and no grumbling. Hence the many dodges. H. C. Shull is the lucky discoverer of a new phase of it. He was out to his farm day before yesterday, and while there some boys happened along, and in talking with one another, he heard one lad call out with animation, "Well, I've found 'em anyway." And then, they went to discussing the situation, when it turned out that a hollow stump some distance away, contained the family of pups belonging to the family dog. The pups, two in number, had been deposited in the stump and could not get out. Here the mother dog visited them as often as she thought nature demanded, and of course, she was there when the assessor came around. And when it was suggested that she ought not to be allowed to run outside of the stump, the boy said. "Oh she's safe. The assessor came to our house several days ago." And of course the pups are safe unless the assessor gets up on a chunk, and peeps over into a certain hollow stump near the Morningstar bridge.

Adam Wyrick and John Hovarter, of Fairfield, were callers today.

—Geo. Bishop and Ed. Rommeis went with the soldiers. They are members of the state signal service corps.

—T. S. Murray of Murray Bros. at Spencerville was here today and as usual made us a call. Always glad to see him.

Special to the Daily Courier

ANGOLA, IND., April 26, 1898:—Lewis A. Hendry, proprietor of the Hendry Hotel and prominent capitalist of Angola, was indicted by the grand jury of the Steuben Circuit Court this week, charged with forgery. He was arrested, brought into court this morning and entered a plea of "Not Guilty." His case goes over to the September term of court. He is charged with altering a wheat receipt in a deal with William Patterson, a competitor. On account of his financial standing, the case has created intense interest.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

INCOME TAX REVIVING.

A new terror rises up to deepen the dismay of the abject bondmongers. It is that if war comes there will be another tax agitation for income tax. One of their organs remarks with bated breath: "If the income tax is impossible under the constitution as it stands, there would certainly be a movement to amend the constitution in that particular." This is dreadful to think of. Such a peril is quite enough to put all thoughts of preserving the national honor and dignity out of mind. If the fool people are likely to get at the incomes of those who run the government as a business enterprise for their own profit, and make them pay for their privileges, what is the use of living?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Democratic Gains.

The spring elections continue to result favorably. The disreputable performances of the Republican Congressmen at Washington, the vacillation of President McKinley, and the prospect that Banker Gage, with Grosvenor, Dingley, and the rest, will hatch up some national bank finance schedule which will rob the people by means of taxes and bank issues to pay interest on large sums of borrowed money, have disheartened the Republican masses. Everywhere there is Democratic gain. Chicago has been swept as by a tornado, and the reform element there has encountered a defeat similar to that which it experienced here in New York. The group of Ohio cities has gone back on the Republicans. Cincinnati, which gave nearly 20,000 majority for McKinley, has been carried by the Democrats by 2,000 majority. The same change is to be found in the returns from Columbus, Cleveland, Dayton and Toledo. Milwaukee is to have a silver Democratic Mayor. The general disappointment at the non-arrival of the promised McKinley era of prosperity has disgusted the people, and has started them upon the road of reversing the fraud of 1896.—New York News.

Let the People Buy Bonds.

A New York bank president is quoted as saying that the government could readily obtain from the great financial interests of the country all the funds it needed if bonds were issued. This is true, no doubt. But the biggest financial interests of this continent are the interests of the masses of American citizens who create the wealth of the nation. They are the ones who should first be considered if bonds are put on the market. If these Government securities, backed by the superb credit of the United States, are excellent investments for the bankers, they are equally good investments for the wage earners and the farmers. It is the people who fight the battles and pay the taxes of the Government. They are entitled to the foremost chance when bonds are to be sold.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Taxation to Make Up Deficit.

Whether we have war or peace with Spain we shall have to pay the cost of getting ready for war, and suggestions for internal taxes are heard here and there. But it is misleading, in the present condition of the national income, to call these proposed taxes war taxes. Why should not the ruling political party in Congress face the fact that its revenue laws do not bring in enough income to meet the expenditures of the Government on a peace footing? There should be no humbug about increasing taxation because of making war or making ready for war. What the treasury demands is more revenue than Dingleyism produces whether for war or for peace.—Boston Post.

Too Much of a Stale Fiction.

Let us be done once and forever with the stale fiction of Spain's honor being involved in the preservation of her territorial integrity. It has been said—her public men still say—she cannot relinquish Cuba without compromising her honor. Was her honor, then, compromised when she relinquished Mexico? And Guatemala? And ten or a dozen colonies in South America? And when she receded Louisiana to France? And when she ransomed Cuba by giving up Florida? And when, after regaining Florida, she once more and finally relinquished it for cash, under fear of military compulsion?—New York Tribune.

Dingley Wisely Keeps Silent.

The Dingley bill isn't such a howling success that its author is howling about it loud enough to be heard. Dingley isn't saying a word in these exciting times. Dingley isn't defying the galleries, like the fearless Johnson of Indiana. He is sitting timidly watching his monumental deficit bill and waiting for the opportunity to amend it to get more revenue, when the stress of war may be pleaded as an excuse, instead of an absolute failure of the bill itself.—Utica Observer.

The Maine Count Remains.

The Maine disaster is the main count in our indictment against Spain. It is our supreme justification for driving Spain from Cuba. It is the high and conclusive reason upon which the nations expect us to act, and they will justly lose respect for us, as we will lose respect for ourselves, if we do not act.—New York World.

Favorite Son of Old Glory.

Fitzhugh Lee returns from his long and difficult experience at Havana to find that the whole nation honors and loves him. Few public servants have been more promptly rewarded for distinguished services. Not long ago he was the favorite son of old Virginia. Now he is a favorite son of old glory.—New York Sun.

Trusts Number 200 Now.

An expert who has canvassed the growth of trusts finds that fully 200 such organizations are now in existence, with a total capital in stocks and bonds of $3,662,000,000. This does not include many business and manufacturing combinations in process of formation, for there is scarcely a week that the announcement of a new pool or trust of gigantic proportions is not made. The capitalization claimed for existing trusts is equal to 56 per cent of the aggregate capital credited to all manufactures in the United States by the census of 1890.—New York Journal of Commerce.

Big Standing Army Not Wanted.

It would be hardly possible to state a plainer proposition than that the genius of the people of the United States is opposed to the creation of a considerable standing army. President Jackson, who had had in his character more of the military spirit than any of our Presidents, never asked for it. President Taylor, another military hero, looked with abhorrence upon the thought. President Grant never took a step in that direction. These men all had experience of what standing armies were.—Boston Herald.

What Plain People Think.

The plain everyday people of the United States hold that a nation is like a man; when it has received an insult and a blow it is high time to fight. Furthermore, people unhampered by books feel that for a nation like this to sit idly by and watch cowardly barbarians like the Spaniards torture and starve wretched noncombatants, almost within cannot shot of its boundaries, would amount to a national compounding of crime.—Kansas City Times.

What Grosvenor Didn't Explain.

Mr. Grosvenor has not explained how Wall street came to know of the postponement of the President's message before Congress knew of it and while that body, as a matter of fact, was waiting for the message. But Mr. Grosvenor is not expected to explain. Like the gentleman who held a prominent position on a certain front porch in Canton some time ago, he has, for obvious reasons, "nothing to say."—Columbus Press Post.

McKinley a Tenderfoot.

President McKinley resorted to diplomacy with a nation skilled in its arts by centuries of practice, while he had but his own inexperience, the aid of his Canton lawyer, and that of an old man in his dotage. When a tenderfoot sits in a game with an expert he is pretty apt to get the worst of it. Sagasta was not slow to take the advantage of him.—St. Paul Globe.

Republicans Growing Scarcer.

While Grosvenor valiantly protests against the injection of politics into the discussion of the Spanish question, at the same time he boasts that if there is a war "it will be a Republican war." Judging by the results of last Tuesday's municipal elections, there are not now enough Republicans in the country, outside of Rhode Island, to make a very formidable army.—St. Louis Republic.

Patriotism Bounded by Pelf.

"Trust us to preserve the honor of the nation!" shouts the broker. "We will keep that honor secure—for a consideration." "War is hell!" shouts the excited dealer in options, and in an undertone he adds: "It depreciates the price of my securities." The patriotism that is confined to pelf seems to be in the saddle now. But it is riding for a fall.—Omaha World-Herald.

McKinley Can't Cut Loose.

If President McKinley could but muster up the courage to cut loose from Hanna and his stock-gambling friends it would perhaps be possible yet for him to regain in some measure the confidence of the people. But with Hanna he is like Sinbad with the old man of the sea astride his neck.—Kansas City Star.

Rhode Island to Brag About.

Having lost everything worth fighting for in last Tuesday's elections, the Republicans are boasting mightily over their "sweeping victory" in Rhode Island. When the Republicans lose Rhode Island Spain will be a civilized nation.—St. Louis Republic.

Makes Even a Republican Gag.

Gen. Grosvenor was right in his defense of the President and his denunciation of the yellow demagogues of the House, but he went too far when he said that it would be a Republican war.—Indianapolis Journal.

Political Paragraphs.

Whenever anything can be got worth having it is natural that Mark Hanna should be in favor of a piece at any price.—Columbus Press-Post.

After the army and navy have evicted Spain from Cuba, why not employ them to evict Hanna from the cabinet meetings?—Chicago Dispatch.

Just how an act of war, such as the blowing up of the Maine, can be arbitrated is hard to undertsand.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

A circus manager has offered the Government the services of twenty-five patriotic elephants. But with Hanna on its hands the Government hesitates.—Exchange.

The thievery and jobbery, the bad faith and chicanery which have brought the Republican State machine into bad odor are sufficient to bring a heritage of defeat.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

It would take old Grover and Olney about three minutes to decide whether we should have peace or war with Spain, and in view of the way they cut J. Bull's comb three years ago there is not much doubt about which they would choose.—Memphis Scimitar.

If you wish to get thin eat plenty of chopped meat without any potatoes. Drink as little as possible of any fluid. Exercise a great deal without drinking, and if possible eat no bread, butter or sweets. Lemonade, acid drinks of any kind, a little strong tea and saline mineral waters will assist you, but of these take only as little as possible. Start the morning by drinking a glass of clear water.

THE GUARDSMAN

My brother Jim, he's in the regiment, an' he says he's goin' down to fight
Soon as the soldiers ever start, an' gee!
Maybe they'll go tonight!
He's got a suit just like a p'liceman, too
An' soldier cap an' sash.
He says they'll show the folks what they can do,
He thinks it'll be fun!

But ma, she says she don't want him to go,
'Cause she's afraid, I guess.
An' so, las' night she was a-cryin' so
When Jim said that unless
She'd want to have a coward for a son
He'd have to go an' fight,
That seemed just like she never would get done
But cried an' cried all night.

An' sis told Jim that if they went away
She thought it was a shame,
An' cried when Jim said 'twas a lucky day
To show that we are game;
Sis liked Jim in his suit an' cap an' so
I thought she wouldn't care,
But she took on an' cried just like as though
He's goin' to die down there!

But pa, you know, he never said a word,
Just like he couldn't talk,
But just shook hands with Jim, like this, real hard
An' went to take a walk;
An' bimeby I went out to try an' meet
The kids, you know, an' do
Something, an' pa was walkin' up the street
An' he was crying too!

WHERE WATER IS SCARCE.

A Disastrous Drouth Is Devastating South Africa.

A most disastrous drought is devastating South Africa, the worst known for many generations. Stock is perishing in such vast numbers that farmers are being ruined wholesale. The illustration shows the process of boring for water. At a little expense the Cape government provides an apparatus for the use of the farming community and drilling operations are in progress in nearly all parts of the country. It is generally believed that there is abundance of water at a depth of from fifty to a hundred feet, but the finds are few and weak. Unlike Australia there are no subterranean rivers to tap. The hope of the farmer lies in the conservation of the rainfall, which, if not stored in dams, quickly runs off into the "sluits" and "spruits," and leaves the parched earth but little refreshed. In many places the drinking supplies regularly fail short and the farmers are reduced to the thick, opaque contents of a dam. In the remoter districts the Boers experience this acutely. A Boer recently called at an Englishman's house while on a journey and asked for a drink. The Englishman had a good supply and gave him a sparkling draught. The Dutchman was greatly surprised and in his kitchen "taal" expressed himself highly delighted with such a sweet drink, as he observed, "it had neither taste nor smell."

BORING FOR WATER.

MESSAGE THAT MEANT DEATH.

The Famous "No Rent" Poster Which Landed Many Irishmen in Prison.

Here is a relic of a time made exciting by "agitation" in Ireland. It is the famous "No Rent" poster, which was one of the features of the movement of 1881 that landed so many ardent Irishmen in prison.

The National League of Ireland, the executive committee of which issued and signed this remarkable document, was opposing landlordism by coercing the tenantry into not paying rent. Such tenants as were known to intend to defy the National League and to pay had these "no rent" posters nailed to the doors. In the corners were certain terrifying sentences. "Your fate is certain if you pay rent.—Capt. Moonlight," was the sentiment in one, while the other showed a coffin bearing beneath it the cheering inscription, "This is your coffin.—Rory of the Hills." The men who issued the posters were imprisoned for their offenses, but the country was placarded as daringly during their imprisonment as before. Now a copy of one of these posters is as scarce as hen's teeth, and, though not a bit artistic, they are treasured by poster collectors as if they were printed in letters of gold after a design by some master draughtsman.

Precious Document.

A good story is told at the expense of the custodian of the foreign documents department of the French National Library. The New York Times is authority for the anecdote.

During the visit of King Chulalongkorn, of Siam, a highly prized paper that no one had been able to decipher satisfactorily, because of the mixture of Siamese and Chinese characters, was unearthed and shown to the Siamese visitor.

The King glanced at the precious paper and then laughed heartily, after which he went on to explain that this carefully guarded and highly prized document was merely a fire insurance policy drawn up for a Chinese company by some Siamese firm, and that his own signature, which it bore, was such as all similar documents contain. It was, moreover, written by one of his secretaries detailed for that work.

That document is not so highly prized as it was.

HOUSE WITH A HISTORY.

Structure Which Has More than Common Interest for Masons.

In Canton, N. Y., stands a house which has more than a common interest for the masons of the country. It shows, in the first place, "the royal arch," which seems to be a shape of mystic meaning to the order. And in the second place, it was built to flaunt the principles of its builder, Paul Boynton, in the faces of his enemies, the anti-Masons.

Boynton came to Canton in 1831 and was prominently identified with the Masonic order. About that time a crusade against the organization started; there were pamphlets published on "Masonry Exposed" and the like. In the excitement one prominent opponent of the Masons disappeared and his comrades alleged foul play. Boynton's house was burned in the trouble that followed.

Boynton forthwith built another house. It is the "royal arch house," which is still standing. Along the cornice over each arch there are characters carved unknown to any but royal arch Masons.

BOYNTON'S ROYAL ARCH HOUSE.

Art of Hog Driving.

The difficulty of driving a single hog was well illustrated at the foot of 9th street the other afternoon at about train time. Some men were driving a herd of swine to Amherst, and as they approached the bridge one of the animals became obstreperous and bolted toward the city, becoming thereby separated from the rest of the drove.

The three or four men, assisted by volunteers, placed themselves between the city and the rebellious hog in a semi-circle, while one of their number advanced cautiously and began to tickle the hog's nose with a pine brush. This would make the animal turn round, and each time he did so he would move a few steps toward the bridge and the rest of the drove. The maneuvers were watched with a great deal of interest by a large crowd of spectators, and when finally the wayward one returned to the bosom of the drove a very audible murmur of admiration went up from the crowd.—Lynchburg News.

Advertisers Are Immortal.

Great advertisers live in the history of the city and the prosperity of their firms long after they themselves have "shuffled off this mortal coil;" their announcements in the newspapers continue to bear fruit after the advertisers are dead. On the other hand, the non-advertising business man is dead to the community long before he leaves this life; and his business is more than apt to die with him.—Savannah News.

AN ERRATIC PRINCESS.

Louise, Daughter of Belgium's King, Who Eloped with an Army Officer.

Princess Louise of Belgium, who some time ago left her husband, Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg, a nephew of Queen Victoria, for a lieutenant of the Austrian Hussars, and her new lover are being much talked about. This eccentric daughter of Belgium's dissipated monarch, King Leopold, has two grown children, one of whom, Princess Maria Dorothea, is shortly to be married. She is over 40 years of age and is certainly old enough to know better.

LT. KEGLEVITCH.

Princess Louise and Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg were married at Brussels Feb. 4, 1875. Their married life was a stormy one from the first. For years she has figured in scandal after scandal, and has kept her husband busy fighting duels on her account. She has long cut a wide swath in the gay life of European capitals, but her last escapade set the tongues of two continents a-wagging. This was her elopement with Lieut. Mattachich Keglevitch of Austria.

It had been known for some time previous to the elopement that the lieutenant was a favorite of the Princess. Their conduct reached such a stage that Prince Philip challenged Lieut. Keglevitch to a duel. They met in the latter part of last December. Pistols were first used, and after a harmless volley the combatants had recourse to swords. The Prince to-day carries a small scar on his right arm which he received from the Lieutenant's sword in this encounter. Not long after Princess Louise and Lieut. Keglevitch left for Paris. From there they went to Nice, where they rented an elegant villa. The Princess then tried her luck at Monte Carlo. Her winnings at first were the talk of the place, but luck at length changed and she lost all. To-day she is a bankrupt princess, with an impecunious lover and a host of clamoring creditors.

PRINCESS LOUISE.

Prince Philip himself has not been all that a dutiful husband should be. He will apply for a divorce, it is said, after the marriage of his daughter, Princess Maria Dorothea, to the youngest brother of the German Emperor.

GOAT HUNTING IN ALASKA.

Novel Way to Bring Wild Goats Into Rifle Range.

"They have a queer way of hunting mountain goats up in the mountains back of Skaguay," said D. J. McKinney, the "Mayor of Skaguay," at the Hotel Northern. "The boys at one of my camps told me one day that they had seen some goats up in the hills and they asked me if I wanted to go along to hunt them. Of course I did, and we were soon climbing high up on the mountains, away above the altitude that I thought any living creature would live. Still up and up we went. The boys were trying to get above a place where they had seen the goats a few days before. When they had located the proper point, they selected a huge boulder and got me to help them tip it over. It took the combined strength of three of us to get the rock started. When it did get to going the havoc it caused on its way down to the valley was something fearful. Then the boys told me to get ready for a surprise. We all got our rifles ready and waited. It was only a short time until we saw emerging from the scrub-by growth below us three fine goats. They came toward us, bounding from crag to crag and apparently heedless of the danger they were running into. They came to within sixty yards of us and we brought down all three.

"I learned then that the goat always tries to get above rolling rocks, and that that is a favorite way of hunting them."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Frontier Currency.

A Western paper tells a story of an epoch in the history of the Montana mining camps when there was no money or lawful currency of any kind in the camps, nor any credit to base a private circulation on, but when the extremely high price of eatables suggested and at the same time supplied the want of a circulating medium.

One man who continues to live in that region tells of the time when he bought a box of matches with a watermelon, and received as change two muskmelons. Another paid for a pair of suspenders in turnips, and got a couple of carrots back with his purchase.

At one time the first man accepted an invitation to visit a friend and go to a party with him. After seeing his friend go through the unusual preparation of blacking his boots and putting on a collar—for it was to be a very "high-toned" affair—he was surprised to see him go to a potato-bin and carefully select a dozen nice potatoes and put them into his pocket.

No sooner had the two men arrived at the hall where the party was to take place than his host handed over his potatoes for an entrance ticket; and what was still more surprising, the doorkeeper, after the close of the party, gave him two onions as "change," to take home!

Too Quick.

When a man is peculiarly quick to see a possible advantage, and uses his clear-sightedness solely for his own benefit, other men are apt to be afraid of him. That was how it was with Ralph Bernal, a print connoisseur. He was so quick to see a valuable thing, and appropriate it before anybody else realized its worth, that dealers got frightened when he entered their shops.

"What do you want for that?" he one day asked, as his eye fell on a certain sheet in a portfolio of odd prints. It was a good copy of Hogarth's "Midnight Modern Conversation."

"Three guineas," was the reply.

"I'll take it," said the connoisseur.

"Shall I send it to you, Mr. Bernal?"

"No," replied his customer, quickly. "I will carry it home myself."

And he was not quite at ease until it was in his hand. At the first glance he had seen that modern was spelled moddern. The addition of that "d" made all the difference in the value. It proved that he had fallen upon the rarest of the Hogarth impressions, and for this proof the British Museum had to pay £81.

It was no wonder that dealers felt uneasy when he appeared. But on one occasion he proved himself too sharp. He entered the shop of a well-known print-seller, and found the shopkeeper's wife in charge. As he came in he noticed that she hastily put something away in a drawer. The instincts of the collector were instantly awakened.

"What have you got there, Mrs. Town?" he asked. "Let me see it."

"Oh, no, sir, it is nothing you would care about," she replied.

"Come, come," said Bernal, "I know it is something good."

Whereupon the blushing lady displayed to the eager eyes of the virtuoso a pair of her husband's old socks, which she had been industriously darning when her inquisitive customer entered the shop.

THE DANGERS OF HEALTH.

French Scientist Fears that Population Will Increase Too Fast.

The Marquis de Nadaillac, a French scientist, tolerably well known here through his work on "Prehistoric America," has been recently engaged in calculations that are curiously suggestive. They concern the dangers of health. Since the memory of man runs not to the contrary, or, more definitely, since the late Jeremy Bentham inaugurated the doctrine of the greatest good of the greatest number, there has been an effort, tentative yet perceptible, to get things ship-shape, to provide through arbitration against war, to improve sanitation, to fell disease, to foster matrimony and simplify existence.

One does not need to be prophetic to assume that ultimately the effort will succeed. But consider the result. What with universal peace, universal sanitation, the fanging of the microbe and continuous matrimony, in no time at all—in two centuries at most—De Nadaillac declares that the earth will be overpopulated and that there won't be enough food to go around. If he is right, then, indeed, the struggle for life will begin in earnest, and not of individual with individual, but of nation with nation, a struggle such as history has never known and which will result in the survival of the fittest—providing always survival there be. It will be the clash and clatter of empires and republics contending, not for principles, but for bread; a gigantic upheaval in which whole races will disappear, and all because humanity is in love with an ideal that is not in love with it, because peace is not a blessing and because the microbe is a boon.—Collier's Weekly.

Reasonable women are about as rare as peaches without fuzz.

A girl's idea of a man's revenge is to fall in love with the chaperon.

The trouble in love is that the women insist on cutting it on the bias.

A woman's real troubles never worry her half as much as the ones she gets up clubs about.

There are some ideas which a woman can never express properly except with her mouth full of hairpins.

No girl has any idea how much she cares for a man till she begins to have an idea how little he cares for her.

When a man has curious little dents in his shirt-bosom they were generally made by the round ends of hairpins.

A woman never cries so hard when her little child is lost that she hasn't strength left to spank it when it's found.

A woman's opinions on politics are just about as pronounced and reliable as her opinions on the women her husband knows that she doesn't.

The average woman can do more with a hairpin than a man can with a box of tools and less with a box of tools than a man can with a hairpin.

A woman is pretty sure to see that the whole family hears her when she tells her husband he ought to be ashamed to talk so to her before the children.

Monster Railway Station.

Among the monster railway stations of the world that of St. Louis is the largest. It has an area of 424,200 feet, thirty-one tracks, and twenty-four roads running into it. Its capacity is almost double that of the Boston and Maine Station, at Boston, the second largest in the world. Two hundred and sixty trains pass in and out of the Union Station every day, 130 each way. They average 100 passengers to a train. This means that a total of 26,000 passengers pass through the station every day. Taking the daily average of 26,000 passengers as the basis of this calculation, 780,000 travelers pass through Union Station in a month, which is more than the entire population of West Virginia. The yearly average is 9,360,000, and this sum is equal to the combined population of the States of New York and Illinois.

Loyal Denial.

The literal person is sure to furnish amusement so long as he inhabits this "terrestrial ball;" and that, it is safe to say, will be while the human race exists.

Mr. W. M. Shoemaker says, in his account of a voyage in southern seas, that one night, after leaving a harbor, one of the passengers, an Englishman, remarked on the fact that the vessel had listed materially to the port side.

"Oh," said a mischievous American, "that's because we have got rid of all those heavy English newspapers."

The loyal subject of the crown protested.

"Oh, I say, now," he cried, "they don't weigh any more than the New York Herald, don't you know!"

We want it understood right now that we never count ourselves among "the friends of the family who want to see the remains."

When you begin to go over your day's work in your sleep, it is time to take a rest. It is the surest sign of overwork.

ONE STAGE TRICK.

How the Blindfolded Juggler Performs Seemingly Marvelous Tricks.

The next time you see a blindfolded juggler tossing knives and razors with unerring skill and keeping half a dozen eggs unbroken in the air at at once, do not let your wonder and admiration overpower you. You have seen his assistant blindfold him with a handkerchief. Then you have seen a bag of heavy burlaps adjusted over his head and shoulders to exclude even the light. And yet not one egg ever fails. Not one knife ever escapes him.

As a matter of fact, the coarse burlap bag has threads drawn out in that part which comes before his face, and in the adjusting of it the assistant simply slides the handkerchief up or down a little. In taking the bag off again he returns the handkerchief to its place. The next time the blindfolded juggler offers to perform for you assure him that a blindfolding with a handkerchief is quite enough, and that you could not think of having him smothered by a bag. Then you can have heaps of fun listening to him lie about the trick.

WOMEN IN STOCKS.

How the Chinese Deal with Women Who Need Correction.

Punishment by the "stocks" is mostly confined to the women placed in the prisons of the Celestial empire. Some idea of how the women appear who are treated in this manner will be gained from the illustration, which is taken from a photograph. The stocks are fastened from behind; and although there is just room to move the head it is absolutely impossible for any person to get out of the stocks without assistance. After a time the punishment is terrible, for the head being forced to occupy one position—as if it were in a vice—makes the women prostrate in most cases. This is a great deal worse when three or four are yoked together.

The men, while in "durance vile," are treated a great deal better than the women, although they are tried and dealt with in a much more summary manner. A Chinese prisoner is put to death for the slightest offense, and there is no doubt that if he could save his life by so doing he would gladly beat the punishment meted out to the ladies of the Flowery Land who come under the ban of the law.

ALTON'S EXPENSIVE BOY.

Taxpayers Put Up Nearly $1,200 a Year for His Schooling.

It costs the public of Alton, Ill., $1,186.08 annually to educate one black boy. This is the largest sum ever expended by the public on the education of one simple individual. His name is Arthur Odey. For him a teacher is employed at $270 per annum, for him a principal is engaged at $315 per annum, to keep his school-rooms in order a janitor is kept at a yearly expenditure of $135, and to prevent Arthur from getting cold $50 is expended on fuel. The interest on the $5,944 that it cost to build the handsome two-story brick schoolhouse in which he is taught amounts to $416.08. Thus the total cost of the schooling of this one child is $1,186.08.

ARTHUR ODEY.

Arthur is a quiet little chap of 8 years, as black as the fabled Egyptian darkness, with big round eyes that look out upon the world without the least sign of astonishment or concern at the extravagance of his education. That he drinks in knowledge at the public expense at the rate of $30.41 per week, or $6.08 per day, is no cause of wonder to him. It has not been charged that his teachers quarrel over which shall instruct him, but it is a known fact that he has to furnish the excitement for the school, because he is the only scholar in the new Lovejoy school, erected solely for the colored children.

Absorbing.

"I hope you found that book I gave you of absorbing interest," said Willie Washington.

"I do," replied Miss Cayenne. "It was very fortunate that you had it printed on that very expensive soft paper. I keep it on my writing table all the time. Whenever I need a blotter I tear out a leaf."—Washington Star.

UMBRELLA CAUSED IT.

A Judgment Which Is of Interest to Railway Travelers.

A judgment of the greatest importance and interest to railway travelers was delivered recently in England. A gentleman traveling from London to Hastings had occasion to leave the carriage at Tunbridge Wells, and took the ordinary precaution of reserving his seat with his umbrella and newspapers. While he was absent another pasenger seized his place and refused to vacate it until forcibly ejected. As a result an action for damages was brought against the original owner of the seat by the intruder, and a counterclaim for similar damages was entered by the other side as well. The judgment delivered was one which will commend itself to ninety-nine out of every hundred travelers. The claim for damages for ejectment was dismissed and the counterclaim allowed.

For the future, therefore, the cantankerous individual who persists in disturbing the comfort and convenience of travelers in the manner indicated will know how he stands, and that if the owner of the seat thinks fit to bundle him out neck and crop the latter will not only have the sympathy of the public but the law as well on his side. There can be no question whatever that the universal mode of retaining a seat in a railway carriage is a most reasonable and convenient one. Not the least important point in his judgment is the Judge's assertion that the holder of a seat was entitled to use reasonable force to eject an intruder.

Present Day Barbarians.

A grewsome account of the conduct of the French expedition which has just made its way to the Nile is given by one of its members in a private letter. He says they impressed all their native porters and other help by force, in brief, seized and made slaves of them. Then, if any of them tried to escape, they shot or hanged them. When they came upon a village and found it deserted they set it afire, whereupon the inhabitants, who were hiding near by, would come back and try to extinguish the flames, thus giving the French an opportunity to seize some of them to replenish their slave train. The French would seize the chief and tie him up until he furnished the required number of slaves. If they did not succeed in calling any of the natives within reach by incendiarism or other means they simply looted the village. At night they kept as close a watch upon the slaves as possible, "but they would now and then all run away together, and it was not easy to kill the whole lot."

His Action Suspicious.

"Now, Mr. Beefy," coldly said the handsome young widow, who was doing her own marketing, "while I am fully conscious of the honor you wish to confer upon me, I must tell you that I have no present intention of marrying again, and am, therefore, compelled to refuse the handsome offer."

"Bub-bub-but. Mum—Mrs. Hooks," stammered the astonished butcher, "I have never offered you my hand, and—ah!—"

"Then, why are you trying to weigh it on the scales with the roast, sir?"—Puck.

Fabulous Wealth.

The "mineral wealth" of newly found mining regions largely run by syndicates is in too many instances a fable. The products nearer home are surer and promise more rewards. No one will go unrewarded in the matter of improved health who use regularly Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for malaria and dyspepsia.

Figures that Stagger the Mind.

It requires four years and four months for a ray of light to reach us from the nearest star, and yet light travels at the rate of 186,330 miles a second. At this rate a first-class express train, running at the speed of 37 miles an hour, would require a continuous run of 75,000,000 years to reach Alpha Centauri. It would take 250,000,000 years for a cannon ball traveling at the usual speed of such projectiles to reach the same point, which is our nearest star neighbor.

ALL FLUFF AND FUSS

LIGHT AND AIRY BODICE CREATIONS FOR SPRING.

Puffs and Frills, Shirring and Smocking, Are Used with Great Profuseness on This Season's Swellest Waists—Some Very Pretty Popular Models.

What Is Fashionable in Gotham.

New York correspondence:

JUST about half sham are some of the ingenious affairs that are classified as bodices in the newest fashions. Little capelets are shown, for instance, that are nothing more than an elaborated collar. At the back with only a point appearing from the throat to between the shoulders, said point widening to the shoulders, nothing but a collar is pretended. In front a pair of long tabs sloped and fitted in to the waist, and revers showing at the neck at each side of the vest effect that may be either a part of the capelet or what is allowed to show of the under bodice. The whole gives quite the appearance of a close-fitting coat. Sleeves of the under bodice show, with perhaps a shoulder frill added that belongs to the capelet.

You see, a bodice really suitable only for house wear will, if it be high-necked, suit street or outdoor use under such a fraud of an overcovering, and a few yards of material is quite enough to make the capelet. This one was far richer and more elaborate than an equally pretty copy of it needs to be.

BLUEBIRDS THAT ANNOUNCE SPRING.

Its tabs and collar were of delicately embroidered green satin, real lace trimed it, and the pleated vest effect, which was really part of the bodice—a fact made clear by the sleeves matching it—was orange silk. The economical copier whose taste is sound need not fear that her reproduction will be patchy even if its parts are left-overs that have already done service.

Such a covering is just the thing to put on over one of the new gauze bodices that, with all their simplicity of cut, have the look of being so elaborate. It is a wonder how much trimming can be accomplished in a small space now that shirring, smocking and puffing have reached such a point of profuseness. The entire space between throat or yoke line and belt often extending straight across the sleeves to below the bust line, is worried into a series of puffs and tiny frills of the most lacy and charming delicacy. Three or four rows of tiny pinched up puffs, then a conventional design followed by a tiny gauzy frill or by narrow lace made just as full as it can be, or by baby ribbon frilled first and then set along the lines of the design. Then come rows of puffs, another row of frilled pattern, and so on to the belt. The result is delicious. As a rule the puffs are picked up of the material of the bodice—that is, they are real puffs, but sometimes little puffs or frills of colored gauze are set on the white or black gauze foundation. In the bodice of this type that appears at the left in to-day's large picture, the material was white silk gauze, and the trimming, all of which was of the set-on sort, consisted of puffs and black silk muslin. The black satin belt had sash ends, but these were not fringed, a fact that goes to show that fringing for sashes is waning. Above the yoke line of this bodice the skin showed through the gauze, and in many such the arm shows all the way to the shoulder.

As the companion model to this indicates, it is sometimes the yoke portion of the gauze bodice that is made elaborate by dainty lines of smocking or shirring, below the yoke the bodice being simply a maze of smocking. Wonderful effects are gotten now by the use of cross threads, and material comes by the yard pleated into the most elaborate smocked effects, but beware! If you should be caught in the rain, or even stand around in the damp, all this pressing will come out and the beauty of your bodice be gone forever. Orange silk gauze that had cross threads of white was used here, the whole body being smocked, puffed white chiffon gave the yoke, and sleeves and belt were orange silk. High neck and long sleeves are the rule for this sort of garment, and so made, though neck and arms may show through the gauze, the garment is admissible for house, theater or garden wear. So such a bodice is a good investment just now, because of the many uses to which it may be put.

Because of their perishability these bodices are not so attractive to women who must practice economy as were other sorts that Dame Fashion has brought. As yet they are susceptible of being twisted to that everlasting question of saving. Think a moment; will not these pretty transparent bodices make charming covering for a silk bodice of a past season Silk does split, alas! especially the taffeta that has been so much worn for the past few seasons, and which makers have vied with each other in making inexpensive. Now, no matter how much split a silk bodice is, it can be mended and serve very nicely under a shirred gauze waist. And especially since the bare arm under the gauze is admitted, this scheme can be charmingly carried out. The gauze waist is not supposed to fit closely, and it is often made on a foundation of very fine lawn or net, so that it can be slipped on over various foundations. The next bodice is a good one to keep in mind in this kind of contriving. It was white chiffon over turquoise blue silk, sleeves shirred to the puff, and collar and belt of the blue silk.

OF SILK GAUZE, BUT THAT'S NOT HALF THE STORY.

In all but her headgear the tailor-made girl of this springtime builds her faith on severity of finish. She may be correct—indeed, may not otherwise be very stylish—in millinery that is more fanciful than anything she would have dared to wear for several seasons. But below her chin all outward show is not showy. Yet this very same manly young woman delights in surprising her observers, knows full well that she can do it in no more thorough way than by suddenly flashing a touch of dainty femininity upon them, and does it in just that way whenever she can. Now, bodices like those of the last three pictured models may be worn with plain tailor skirts and concealed by equally plain jackets. A woman may know from evidence about the throat the nature of what is within, but male admirers are all unsuspecting. So when she throws back the jacket and discloses the inner elaborateness and fluff, he is at once subdued to just the point she wants to keep him. With this idea in view, she will choose for her spring suit a serge or something plainly utilitarian in a stylish shade, so that the association with the delicate bodice may be all the more striking a contrast.

HERE THE FLUFF WAS CHIFFON.

Plain skirts and jackets like those in the concluding cut are usually accompanied by some form of inner layer that permits the use of starched linen. These two suits were blue; the left one a bluet shade, the jacket with box front, fitted back and trimming of stitching; the other on the turquoise order, the blazer trimmed with bias folds of the goods and disclosing a waistcoat of canary cloth.

A young woman who has a position as assistant librarian at one of the largest public libraries in Pennsylvania, says that she has a keen sympathy for the ticket agents at railway stations—a sympathy born of kindred woes.

One day two well-dressed young women approached the desk. One of them took a memorandum from her pocket-book.

"Can you tell me how many yards—oh! that's the wrong list!" she said, hastily bringing forth another slip of paper. "Here it is. Will you please tell me who is Rudyard Kipling's favorite author?"

"I am unable to tell you, never having heard that he had one," I admitted.

"Dear me!" said the young woman, irritably. "It's one of the questions for our next club meeting. Well, which one of Thackeray's books brought him in the largest income?"

"That you can probably find out by consulting a book the number of which I will give you," I said, turning to one of my reference drawers as I spoke.

"Oh, I can't stop to look it up," she said, hurriedly. "I thought you could tell me at once. Well, there's one more thing; Bessie Cumnock (my cousin in St. Louis), had a splendid book when I was there last year, for anecdotes of famous people. I can't remember the name of it, or who wrote it, but it was about so big" (illustrating with one finger on the desk), "and it had a dark green cover. Now can you tell me what it is? Some day when I have time, I'd like to get it out. Of course you must have it in the library."

For the third time I was obliged to confess my inability to give her direct information. She looked at me with a piercing gaze, and turned away, saying audibly to her companion, "There! That just shows what all this talk about their being examined for positions in public libraries amounts to! Three perfectly simple questions, all on literary subjects, and she couldn't answer one of them!"

Women Strong Partisans.

With respect to last year's election in New Zealand Sir Robert Stout, in the Australasian Review of Reviews, says that the prediction that party zeal and partisan feeling would not blind women to the defects of the character of candidates has not been fulfilled and that the women were carried away just as much by party cries as the men were and party dominated them.

MRS. PINKHAM TALKS ABOUT "CHANGE OF LIFE."

Women are Urged to Prepare for this Wonderful Revolution in the Economy of Their Life Blood—Mrs. Watson Tells How She Was Helped.

At no time is woman more liable to physical and mental dangers with hours of suffering than at the "Turn of Life."

The great want in woman's system is ability to properly adjust itself to the new conditions. The outlet, monthly, of blood is now being diminished and carried into the body for the supply food of its later years.

Daughters, you can now to some extent repay your mother's early care. She must be spared every possible exertion. You must help her bear her burdens and anxieties. This critical time safely over, she will return to renewed health and happiness. That so many women fail to anticipate this change thus happily, is owing not merely to lack of care, but to ignorance. There is, however, no excuse for ignorance when experienced advice can be yours free of all cost. Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., she has helped great numbers of women successfully through the Change of Life, and she will help you.

AN OLD ENGINEER.

Run an Engine on the New York Central Forty-Three Years Ago—Cured by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

GREENVILLE, MICH.—E. A. Smith, engineer for F. N. Wright & Co., this city, ran a locomotive on the N. Y. C. & H. R. Ry., 43 years ago. He can tell many amusing incidents of the rail in the early days; but prefers to speak of his recent experience with rheumatism, and relief secured from use of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. Mr. Smith is well advanced in years and his trouble had been so serious and of long standing that it became constitutional. He doctored and took all the different kinds of medicine suggested for the trouble, without any benefit. Recently he was advised to take Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer; a nerve preparation which has been received with much favor in Montcalm County, and which has performed many remarkable cures. The effect of its use was highly satisfactory, not only in relieving his rheumatic pains, but also in correcting symptoms of kidney trouble which existed. It certainly is to be hoped that a knowledge of Mr. Smith's experience may lead other sufferers to use this valuable preparation.

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has many virtues not possessed by any other form of treatment. It is entirely free from morphine, opium, cocaine, and the stimulating drug, kola, which is so persistently advertised. Such drugs are ruinous and should be avoided as pernicious.

That Fish Law.

(Kendallville Sun.)

E. E. Earle if Lafayette, deputy fish commissioner' has been doing some pretty effective work among the violators of the fish law in this vicinity lately. Five men pleaded guilty to unlawful fishing at Albion, and paid fines and costs ranging from $15 to $30 each. One man in this city settled for $5 and costs and submitted to the destruction of his net, and another performed a similar act in Esquire Adolph Adams' court yesterday. Several parties at South Milford "have troubles on their minds." Mr. Earle left town today, but is burning bridges behind him and may return soon. He does not seem anxious to unnecessarily worry anyone but is willing to perform his sworn duty. He is liable to "bob up" in Kosciusko county before many moons.

GREEN GOODS

The Sharpers Keep Up Their Usual Game

But The Suckers Are Getting Few and Far Between

Parties over the country are again receiving circular letters from the "green goods" men It is an ingenious way of getting counterfeit paper money into circulation and although this form is a little different, it amounts to the same thing. They say they will sell you "goods" of the "sizes of ones, twos, fives, etc." The following is the regular circular:

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

FRIEND:—I send you this in confidence and would not have done so if I did not think you could make money handling a class of goods I deal in, and do with absolute safety to yourself. If I have made a mistake please destroy this letter, and think no more of it, but don't abuse the confidence I have placed in you, as no insult is intended, it is the offer and chance of your life to make money, and plenty of it, handling my class of goods, and if you let it pass, you will have no one to blame but yourself. These goods come in sizes of one's, five's and ten's, and cannot be excelled and are printed on exactly the same paper as the Government uses. This has been the great drawback for years with me—to secure silk fibre paper—but I am pleased now to be able to tell my customers that I have at last succeeded. These are not counterfeits as you might suppose, but just only what the Government calls them—"Duplicate Bills"—and as the Government claims, the most dangerous that have ever come out, and impossible of detection, even by the best Government experts, and then only when they arrive at the Treasury at Washington, which is not in years, and after passing throug so many hands that it is impossible to trace them. Now, as this is a secret business, I have some rules for you to follow, and by so doing we will be able to deal.

Never write a letter to the enclosed address, for I will not receive it, and if you do will go to the Dead Letter Office and there be opened and read, and might cause trouble, and trouble is not what we want.

Enclosed in this letter is a copy of a telegram, which must be sent just as it reads, or I will not be able to tell who it comes from, and on the receipt of it, I will send you a sample of any goods, also a price-list and full particulars. Send your telegrams over the Western Union lines. Your telegram may be sent from any town as long as it is worded and numbered as the enclosed slip.

Be sure and sign the initials of your name to the telegram.

All letters from me will be sent to the same address as this one, except you notify me differently.

Yours in Confidence,

Then comes a second little slip enclosed in the same envelop and intended to show you how you can order goods by telegraph and not get caught. It reads.

KEEP THIS FOR REFERENCE.

This is the copy of telegram you are to send:

M. T. BELMONT,
ALLENTOWN,
PENNSYLVANIA.
Mr. Mackey lives at No 687 same street.

Send the above telegram just as it reads or I will not know who it is from. Sign your initials or your full name to telegram. Should you not receive an answer from me in a reasonable time with my price list of goods and sample of same, telegraph again. Use Western Union Co.'s line only. All telegrams must be prepaid to insure delivery.

DUNKARD POOR FARM.

(Goshen Daily Times.)

Much has been written and said about the industry, enterprise and sturdiness of the religious sect known as the German Baptists or Dunkards, but very little notice has been given to their charitable traits. It is not often that persons of this faith have to call on their brethren for assistance, yet there are a few of them. That these unfortunates may not have to rely on the general public or be thrown out into the world, the Dunkards have established a home, or rather an infirmary, for them. This is a large home-like place, situated between Middletown and Honey Creek, southwest of Indianapolis. It has several huudred inmates. This home is the refuge for all the poor and indigent members al over the world. Calvin Hook is president of the institution. The inmates fare much better than those of the state and county asylums. Their food is more elaborate and their clothing is better. In fact a stranger casually meeting one of these inmates, would never suspect that he was confronted by a dependent on an infirmary for existence. The inmates are a happy lot of people, arrangements having been made for their comfort. Most of them are elderly people and are bereft of their near relatives. No persom ever goes to this place if near relatives, such as father and mother, son or daughter, or even aunt and uncle, are living.

PERRY FAIR.

People keep talking about Perry Fair and when he will be tried. Our belief is, he will never be tried, at least not on the endictment on which he was arrested. True, the case has been in court and is still in court but it now looks as if it was kept on the docket for a time merely to keep up appearances. There is no doubt he was one of those who got away with the money in the treasury and should be punished for that. But this indictment was for forging the two orders that were turned over by him to the bondsmen and by them turned over to Mrs. Archie Smith of Waterloo. No doubt Perry forged them, but he did not pass them off. It was the bondsmen who did the "passing." A man cannot be hurt for forging unless he passes the forged paper. Perry soon after got the orders back from Mrs. Smith by paying her the cash for them. But he had a right to buy up anything he wanted to. So we are of opinion he will never be tried on this count, and it is not likely the proper crime will ever be brought up against him When this case gets old, it will likely be dropped.

SCROFULA.

One of America's most famous physicians says: "Scrofula is external consumption." Scrofulous children are often beautiful children, but they lack nerve force, strong bones, stout muscles and power to resist disease. For delicate children there is no remedy equal to of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It fills out the skin by putting good flesh beneath it. It makes the cheeks red by making rich blood. It creates an appetite for food and gives the body power enough to digest it. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

—Plum trees are masses of white blossoms now, and sprayers are being put into use on them.

—Frank Depew has moved back to Auburn, from Concord. He will continue in the business of buying junk —In our writeup of the fusion deal the other day we forgot the office of representative. The democrats get that too.

—The resignation of Mr. Gary, postmaster-general was caused by failing health His successor, Charles Emory Smith of Philadelphia, takes his place at once. He is editor of the "Press" of that city.

—A. K. Grubb of Decatur has gone insane. He is the author of the late infamous "Grubb libel law" so long the terror of Indiana editors. Grubb never did know much and now he goe to the asylum.

—Albert Robbins has received a letter from Guy Plumb. It says he is doing well. He writes of the many changes he has learned in the list of old citizens of Auburn since he left fourteen years ago.

—The Clipper does not seem able to write any articles but such as teem with gross abuse of all classes of its fellow citizens. It evidently does not have quite room enough for all this stuff it would like to say. Better enlarge the paper to fit its needs.

—P. V. Hoffman, has returned from Chicago, where he has been located for some time in the practice of law. He is now looking for a house, and as soon as he finds one will settle in Auburn and resume his law practice here. Since leaving Auburn several years ago, he was located for a time in Ligonier, going from there to Chicago.

—A rat was seen gnawing the hoof of a horse in Columbia City the other day and the horse did not seem to object. Two things appear from this: the Columbia City horses are very patient and the Columbia City rats very hungry. Auburn rats are noted for their firmness and daring, but so far have not tackled our horses.

—The Clipper has been bevoting the most of its space to scurrilous abuse of those who favor fusion. This fact probably accounts for the practically unanimous vote for it. Only three out of forty odd, voted against it.

—Frank Borst at Michigan City has been sick as shown by a recent letter to Mrs. Borst.

—F. G. Romaine who was Elkhart county's treasurer before Holderman, is also short. Expert Myler of Chicago reports it at $6,339.74. Mr. Ernst had told them that Romaine was short.

A man at Princeton, Ind., has invented a necktie holder. Up this way, we have necks to support these useful and very red devices. Missionaries should be sent to southern Indiana, to show them the uses of the flaming necktie.

—Wm. McIntyre sat up to-day for about half an hour, but it is not certain that he is really better.

—Several business houses have their flags raised and at Hoff's grocery, the three ships lately turned into men of war, are shown in big pictures adorned with bunting.

—Two boxes of goods have been sent to Shawneetown sufferers from Auburn this week, and several had been sent before.

A Narrow Escape

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Reguler size 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

STATE NEWS

Where and How the Best and Latest Can be Had.

We call attention, with some degree of pride, to the very full and complete account of the military condition of our own loved state of Indiana, that was found in the Sentinel of yesterday, the big, full sized daily that is given away each evening with the DAILY COURIER. One item alone in yesterday's Sentinel overshadows in interest and value to our people, all else published in all the various dailies. We refer the article headed, "To Mobilize the Militia." It tells, when each company will start, over what route they will go, and when reach Indianapolis. No such complete summary of the elaborate arrangements necessary to move scattered bodies of troops was ever before published in any country. And this is only a small part of the timely matter in the Sentinel. Then when we realize that this costs our patrons nothing, the reason can be seen why they are so well suited. The DAILY COURIER alone, stands at the head of all the small dailies in North Indiana, as can be seen by the continuous copying and clipping from it in our exchanges, both weekly and daily. The DAILY COURIER is free from abuse, calls no names, does not try to conduct the papers of our contemporaries, and gives the news of the town in a chatty and readable shape. Mention these things when you speak to your neighbor about it. Our list is growing and for this we are grateful. And if merit counts we expect to increase still more as people have a chance to judge of us.

WEDDED

The wedding of Mr. Jacob Grevier to Mrs. Matilda M. Cakins occurred at the home of the bride, Corunna Thursday, April 21, at 11 o'clock a. m., after which the bride and groom together with a few friends partook of a wedding dinner Both parties are well known and highly esteemed in the village. We heartily extend to them our best wishes. The ceremony was performed by H. A. Wingard, pastor at the Church of Christ.

A HAMFATTER

Special to the Daily Courier.

ANGOLA, IND., April 20, 1898.—Monday night, Albert Kemmerling, who lives just northeast of town, had five hams stolen from his smokehouse. Yesterday morning he tracked a road cart to the house of a neighbor, Henry Gochenaur and suspicioned him of the theft. He sent town for Constable John Carson, and himself hid in the roads near by to watch the house of Gochenaur. He had not waited long, until Mr. Gochenaur came walking across the field, carrying the two ham and panting like a tired dog, and walked up to within ten feet of Mr. Kemmerling before he saw him. Gochenaur stopped and looked amazed. When asked what he was going to do with the meat, he replied: "Good God, I don't know." He saw he was trapped, and thus the story ends, until the present grand jury makes a thorough investigation.

At that time he was a resident of Cuba, owning a great deal of property in Havana, besides much tobacco land. —Mr. Walter informs us that at the democrat committee meeting Tuesday, they voted on a location for the county convention, and all but five voted for Garrett. We do not see any reason for changing it from Auburn. This is the most central location, and all county political conventions should be here It is no advantage to Garrett or Auburn, but the matter of convenience for the voters should be considered. We hope to see it settled in Auburn hereafter.

WATERLOO POLITICS.

Waterloo is all torn up on the question of electric lights, so it is really not a question of politics, for those who favor lights are about erually divided between the two parties, and the same is true as to those opposed to lights. And each faction has held a caucus and nominated a ticket. And here is where the trouble came in. Both factions were a little slow. Those who favor the lights met on Friday, April 15, and made their nominations. The next day, they sought the town clerk so as to certify to their nominees, but that officer was out of town, and a later day, would not give the fifteen days fixed by law. Then the anti-light fellows met on Saturday evening, and put a ticket in the field, and of course they were still more too late. It begins to look as if they had forgotten something. Dr. Broughton, who was here yesterday on the pension board, informed the COURIER that things were in a great state, and that the old board, wants to keep both the tickets out of the field, so they can hold over. The best plan however, will be for both factions to waive the objection of shortness of time, go to work and give the best public notices they can, in the papers, etc, each agreeing not to kick on the irregularity of the other, then get out their forces, and decide in a fair way, whether they want the lights or not. Waterloo is able to have the lights and if a majority of the people want light, then in the words of the Scripture, "Let there be light."

Ayer's Asthma Cure

better known as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, has made a record for its remarkable cures of asthma. Cases that have been considered beyond hope or help have been cured by this remedy. We give two examples of such cures out of the many on record:—

"My mother has been a great sufferer from asthma for the past ten years, and her recovery is almost without a parallel. On account of her advanced age—over seventy—we had but little hopes of ever seeing her well again; but we are sincerely grateful to inform you that she has been entirely cured by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."
INGLIS BANKS, Tar Brook, N.S.

"I was a sufferer for a long time from asthma, vainly endeavoring to procure relief in the use of ordinary remedies. At length I was induced to try a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The first bottle afforded me so much benefit that I continued the use of the remedy until entirely cured."

FROM THE BOYS.

Thursday's Daily.

Mrs. Richards had a letter from John this morning saying that Co. K. would all enlist and asking her consent for him to do so. But she feels that she needs him at home and will probably refuse to let him go.

Dr. Broughton of Waterloo who went down with the company from that place left Indianapolis last night at midnight and reached here this morning. He says the boys are as comfortable as might be expected, many companies being quartered in the various buildings of the fair grounds. But when they got there Tuesday night, they found the quartermaster general had made little preparation to receive them. There were no cots, but few blankets and no provisions. While they did not grumble much they think this officer is incompetent. They have provisions plenty now.

Dr. Nusbaum is also home and the COURIER has a full account by him. Co. K was the most quiet and well behaved of all five or six companies on the train. When they left Ft. Wayne the train had thirteen coaches, and all were loaded down and crowded. At each town where they stopped, as Bluffton, Muncie, etc, the men of other companies would swarm out and run about, making themselves pretty conspicuous. And they finally had to station guards at the doors to keep them in the cars. But Co. K put no guards at the door and all staid in. It was remarked by many that their behavior was commendable. After reaching camp, which was at a late hour, they finally were assigned to quarters and by next day were very comfortable. They occupy stalls where four or five men can sleep together on clean straw, with blankets. They have mattresses to add to their comfort and all seem happy and contented. They will no doubt stay there several weeks for drill and preparation for the harder work of the field before being mustered in and sent to the front. They will then be subjected to a rigid examination by a U. S. officer, and no doubt a few of them will be rejected. But they all seem willing to enlist. It will also be of interest to know that the present organization of the militia will not be disturbed. Many have thought that when the men enlist, there will be a re-organization into new companies with different officers. But governor Mount says this will not be done.

TRIED THEM ALL.

The List Exhausted, a Specific for the Nerves at Last is Found in

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

We are apt to condemn all articles because similar ones prove worthless. Persons often reason; I have nervous prostration, St. Vitus' dance, spasms, rheumatism, can't sleep and am in a debilitating condition; have tried best physicians and most widely advertised remedies, but there is no cure for my case. No matter what your past experience may have been Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer will positively cure every case of nervous trouble—no failures. Here is expert evidence of that fact, Mr. J. H. Hutchings, Bancroft, Mich., for 20 years a successful druggist, tried every preparation he could hear of without benefit. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cured him. The following are his words, read them:

"I had a spinal trouble for years causing serious nervousness, sleeplessness and headache. Our night watchman can tell you how, many and many a night I have walked the streets for hours, hoping to tire myself to a condition of sleep. During these years I have tried nearly every remedy coming to my notice, with only a stupefying effect like morphine. The use of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was an exception, its beneficial effects were prompt and lasting; I secured refreshing sleep, my nerves were strengthened and through them my health was restored. From observation and experience I believe Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer to be the best remedy for all nerve troubles, including general debility." Mr. Hutchings is certainly a competent judge and his testimony is significant.

A CARD

TO THE PUBLIC:—It has come to my ears that a report is being circulated that my sympathies are with Spain in the present war. I wish to say that all these reports are malicious falsehoods, spread by personal enemies of mine, who wish to injure my business. There is no more patriotic citizen in Auburn than myself, and I was the first one to decorate my place of business with the American colors. It is only just to me to let public know that there is no foundation for these outrageous falsehoods, and that if I can discover the persons who started them, I will prosecute them to the limit of the law.

BARN BURNED.

(St. Joe News)

Monday morning about two o'clock the large farm barn belonging to Jerry Andrews, who lives three miles east of St. Joe, was totally destroyed by fire, together with most of its contents. The family were awakened by the roar of the flames, but it was too late to save anything except the live stock, which Mr. Andrews succeeded in getting out. The barn was one of the finest in that part of the country. There was quite a quantity of hay in the barn, besides grain, farm tools and other articles. The loss will reach in the neighborhood of two thousand dollars, with an insurance of but half that amount. Mr. Andrews has been very unfortunate as a barn burned for him at the same place several years ago.

COMPANY K.

TO THE DAILY COURIER.

The sun was shining brightly
On the morning of that day
And the flags were gaily floating
In honor of Company K.

Although the call came early
While some in slumber lay,
Yet all responded quickly—
No lags in Company K.

From out the town and country
Many loved ones hurried away;
The call had loudly sounded
To form in Company K.

How sad was many household,
How gloomy seemed that day
As the loved of many families
Made haste to Company K.

We thought the war so cruel
As they bravely marched away,
Yet our hearts were real thankful
That we had Company K.

Fathers, sons and brothers dear
Husbands, friends without delay,
To defend us from the foe,
Joined ranks with Company K.

Now as the conflict rages
Let us not forget to pray
To Him who watches o'er us,
God bless Company K.

And when this warfare is over,
Just as they left that day,
May the Lord return to us
This brave Company K.

OUR COAST DEFENSES.

(Chicago Record.)

It is well understood that unless they are defended properly the harbors and port cities of the United States are the vulnerable points of the country. A successful invasion is out of the question, and the outcome of any war could not be doubted by one who knows the resources of the nation But in the beginning great harm might be done to the seaport cities if their defenses were not in proper condition. It is reassuring to know that there has been a great deal of silent work done in the last few years, and that the harbor defenses are in far better condition than had been supposed by most persons. The progress of the country's defense preparations is not a matter which the government has chosen to advertise, so the fact that we know little of the details does not prove that the work has not been well done.

The fortification board of 1886 made an exhaustive report and recommendation, on the lines of which the work has been carried forward since that time. Modern disappearing guns of the heaviest and most approved type have been mounted in sandpits, with dydraulic appliances for handling them and perfect protection for guns and gunners. Mathematical science has been enlisted in the service, so that the efficiency and accuracy of the fire from the guns have been multiplied Land defenses have far more than kept pace with the advance in naval architecture, and no city whose defenses are approximately complete need fear the attack of a hostile fleet.

COW PEAS.

Purdue University sends out information as to the uses of the Cow pea, as a substitute for clover. Among some of the good points mentioned are, (1) greater capacity to endure drouth, (2) ability to grow on soils too thin to nourish clover, (3) ability to produce a large amount of forage or green manure in a few months of warm weather, and thus avoid the frosts of winter and early spring.

COW PEAS FOR FORAGE.

Cow peas are highly esteemed for forage in many parts of the south. They are pastured, cut green and fed as a soiling crop, and also cured as hay. Where they seed well they furnish an excellent pasture for pigs, in which case the land is left in fine condition for subsequent crops. In this State only the earliest sorts would produce much seed. In ritcher soils the tendency would be to run to vines. Cow peas produce a very watery growth, and are therefore not easy to cure for hay, although they have the advantage of maturing in the dry season of the year.

Both tops and roots are valuable to fertilize the soil. Cow peas have, like clovers, a very beneficial, mellowing effects on soils in which they grow, and when turned under they quickly replenish the store of humus and available nitrogen. It will doubtless be best to turn the crop under before the autumn frosts. If corn is to be grown the following spring, it will be well to sow rye soon after turning under the pea vines, to prevent, alike, washing of soil and dissipation of the nitrogen stored in the vines. Two different years, this station has plowed under good crops of cow peas that would not mature seed.

Cow peas may be sown broadcast or in drills. The rate varies greatly. One bushel, if drilled, would doubtless be ample, The planting should not be done till the ground becomes warm and all danger from frost is past.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Thursday's Daily.

The quiet movement of certain lines of regular troops, especially of field artillery, makes it look as we were intending to land a force on the island of Cuba, to unite with the insurgent forces there and make an effort to capture Havana, or other cities. This looks like a very good way to secure the insurgents in the possession of the island and in making sure of their freedom.

Spain evidently expects to bombard some of our seacoast cities. But it is doubtful whether any of the larger ones can be reached by them. But there are scores of smaller towns that might be destroyed, Still, we have a number of warships stationed at convenient places.

Michigan troops have gathered at the big camp at Island Lake. Those of Wisconsin are at Milwakee; those of Illinois about 8,000, are now in camp at Springfield. In every state, troops have been located in camp, or are coming in daily, and will all be there in a day or so.

Gen. Miles, Commander in chief, wants the militia drilled a few weeks before they go to the front. He expects to give them work guarding the cities of the seacoast.

Spanish vessels are watching at Gibraltar, for American ships coming out of the Mediterranean, but so far have not taken any prize.

The Monitor, Terror, has taken a prize, a small ship, but she had $70,000 in silver on board.

The old rebel general of cavalry, Joe Wheeler, has asked for a commission as general, and is anxious to go to the front

The latest movement is to invade Cuba for which the regular army will be used first. Several vessels have been engaged to carry the troops over. They are expected to land at Matanzas, when the fight was Wednesday.

The bombardment of Matanzas, as as noted yesterday in our paper, was a brilliant affair. It proved that our gunners were wonderful marksman and could drop the big shells inside the forts every time, doing much injury. The Spanish shots did no harm. Our fleet in the Pacific had to leave Hong-Kong, which is a British, neutral harbor. They will likely capture Manila or some such town in the Philippine Islands, in order to have a coaling station.

Insurgents in Cuba will probably furnish a force to help keep the Spaniards back, while we land troops.

The Spanish ship Guido, captured by the Monitor, "Terror" Wednesday had military stores of great value. But it took several shots to stop her. She was hit two or three times, and eight of her crew wounded. This is the first real bloodshed of the war.

Letters begin to come from our boys at Indianapolis. They are now comfortable and expect to be examined soon

An American sugar estate has been plundered on Porto Rico.

The American ship, Shenandoah has arrived safe at Liverpool.

Portugal proclaimed neutrality today.

Saturday's Daily.

Troops are arriving at Tampa, evidently getting ready to cross.

Several days ago, the clerks in the dead letter office were set to examining the letters in the mail of the Spanish ships captured. It is found that some Americans have written reasonable letters and they will be arrested. Valuable information had been given. One gives details of defenses at various cities.

Bill to raise was revenue passes the House.

The boys at Indianapolis are being passed as rapidly as they can, but no one knows just when our boys will be reached.

It is now believed that the blowing up of the powder magazine at San Francisco was the work of a Spaniard.

We seem to be waiting till the Cubans under Gomez are ready to cooperate with us in landing troops on the island. We will probably unite with the Cubans to take Havana.

Wild rumors are afloat, but nothing has been done of value since yesterday.

GOVERNOR SAYS

In Governor Mount's proclamation for troops issued April 25, he says: "Inasmuch as the number of men who are at this time tendering their services is far in excess of requirements, I deem it timely to announce in this connection that there will be no compulsion upon any member of the Indiana National Guard to enter the federal service except on his own free will and accord. Any member of the National Guard whose business affairs would be jeopardized, or whose domestic relations would subject his family to inconvenience and hardships, will be permitted to stand aside honorably and without prejudice."

VIEWS IN CHICKAMAUGA PARK, WHERE 14,000 UNION SOLDIERS DIED.

CHICKAMAUGA PARK.

IF there is anything of inspiration in the association of ideas, any added patriotism and courage to be gained by daily life on a field where 14,000 Union soldiers died in the hardest fought, most magnificent and thrilling series of battles in the civil war, the regulars, national guardsmen and volunteers who encamp in the Chickamauga Park should be able to fight like fiends incarnate. Tenting again on the old camp ground, in the midst of one of the most beautiful bits of country which God has given to this fairest of lands, it is hard to believe that war and death were within a few hours' ride by rail.

As, standing on Lookout Mountain, the eye sweeps over the glorious view below, Finch's prophecy rushes to mind—

No more shall the war cry sever,
Or the winding rivers be red.

No more, indeed, as to a divided nation, and foreign complications were then unthought of. Where battle lines of 140,000 men surged thirty-five years ago, 50,000 soldiers of the redeemed republic awaited the word which sends them forth to strike the shackles from another race. The heroism of their fathers is an open book to these soldiers of to-day.

DEDICATION SEPT. 19, 1895.

Little more than two short years ago the Park was dedicated with imposing ceremonies, after the nation had spent nearly a million dollars on it, and various States almost half a million more, New York State's share being $81,000. The Governor of Ohio, now the President of the United States, was there. All thought then that the park evermore was dedicated to peace. Western men, almost entirely, represented the Union in the six battles fought within the park. Ohio has more than fifty monuments on the fields, and Illinois nearly 100. Twenty-nine States had regiments in those battles, and each one of these States either has put up monuments to mark the position of her troops or will erect them soon. The General Government has remembered in similar manner the position of the regular regiments. Eight generals who fell on both sides are commemorated by mounds of shells and solid shot. Where batteries were posted are 300 or 400 mounted cannon, of the pattern used in the war. Half a dozen steel towers seventy feet high rear their slender forms from commanding positions on the fields, and afford to the visitors comprehensive views.

The park boundaries inclose about fifteen square miles, not including the fine roads or approaches. The largest part of the park is the battlefield of Chickamauga, in Georgia, and the next largest part takes in Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge and Orchard Knob, near Chattanooga, in Tennessee. Nearly fifty miles of roads improved by the General Government connect the different sections of the park. These are the same roads which the soldiers of the two armies used to reach the scene of battle. All roads which have been opened since the war have been closed, and those in use then which since had been closed were opened by the park commission. Land which was covered with trees in war days and since had been cleared was planted with saplings. Every effort has been made to put the park in its war time condition.

To thousands of persons who never have been there, including many old soldiers who fought on other fields, the cyclorama of the battles of Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain which has been on exhibition in various cities has given a good idea of the country and the battle scenes.

It was at Chickamauga, where Thomas stood "like a rock," that Garfield distinguished himself. He was chief of staff to Rosecrans, and was sent by that general to warn Thomas that Longstreet, with his 70,000 men, was marching to turn the right flank of Thomas' army. Garfield started off with a captain and two orderlies. They ran into an ambush, the captain was wounded, the two orderlies killed and Garfield was the only one left to go on with the all-important message. This was the tightest of all tight places that Garfield had ever been in. He jammed his lips together, muttered "Now is your time, be a man, Jim Garfield," and spurred ahead in a zig-zag course across the field to avoid the bullets. His horse, a fine animal, was struck, but it was only a flesh wound, and it was like another dig of the rowels. Garfield reached Col. McCook, got a new horse and made a fresh start over a fire-swept field. This mount, too, was hit, but the young chief of staff remained unhurt. Just as he got by Thomas' side the animal gave one bound and fell dead. Garfield delivered the message and Thomas' army was saved. Eighteen years from that day Garfield, the President, lay dead in the cottage at Elberon. The bullet of an assassin had done what the bullets of the Confederates could not do.

The month before Chickamauga was fought the battle of Wauhatchie, a little to the west of Chattanooga. Gen. Geary, who commanded the division which made this fight, had a son, who, at the age of 17, had enlisted at the beginning of the war, and at this time was a lieutenant of artillery. Just as Geary was about to lead the charge, his boy fell dead before his eyes, hit by a bullet fair in the forehead. The father dismounted, kissed the warm body, hardly still from the agonies of death, then sprang to his horse and led his men to the attack. The whole war does not furnish a parallel to this instance of fortitude.

Among those who fell at Chickamauga was the Union General William H. Lytle. His close friend was Lieutenant Richard Realf, an Englishman of rare poetic powers, who killed himself in California only a few years ago. The two friends often wrote verses together, and then submitted them to each other for criticism. On the night before Chickamauga they were engaged in this manner. Lytle had written part of the poem beginning, "I am dying, Egypt, dying," when Lytle suddenly turned to Realf.

"I shall never live to finish that," he said.

"Nonsense," replied Realf, "you'll live to write volumes of that sort of stuff."

"No," said Lytle, gravely. "As I was talking to you a minute ago I saw the green hills of Ohio as they looked when I stood among them. They began to recede from me in a weird way, and as they disappeared the conviction flashed through me like lightning that I should never see them again."

Realf laughed at him, but after a while became so filled with unnatural fear that he begged him to finish the verses. Before daybreak Lytle woke his friend and read to him the completed poem. Then, without another word, Lytle put it in his breast pocket. At dawn came the call to arms, and the friends separated. When next Realf saw the General, Lytle was among the slain. Remembering what the General had done with the poem, Realf searched the pocket and found it, and sent it to the General's friends.

A merrier incident was the reply Rosecrans returned to a soldier, who expressed before Chickamauga his firm conviction that the army was not well fed, which was the fact. The provision trains were called by the soldiers the "cracker line." One day as Rosecrans was riding through the camps a soldier called out to him within hearing of all the others:

"More crackers and less review."

Rosy turned in his saddle.

"A lean dog for a long race," was his quick reply.

In the two months that elapsed from Chickamauga to the battle of Chattanooga occurred the incident which resulted later in giving the badge to one of the army corps, the Fifteenth. Some of the men who had been with Hooker at Chancellorsville and shared in the defeat and retreat were telling of the various corps badges, and asked an Irishman of the Fifteenth corps what his badge was.

"Badge? That's that?" asked the Irishman.

"Why some distinguishing mark by which each corps can be told from the rest. For instance, one of the corps at Chancellorsville had the moon, or a crescent. Another had a star, and so on."

"Ah, yes, I see," said the Irishman. "Begorra, ye needed the moon and the stars to show ye the way across the Rappahannock. Here's our badge," slapping his cartridge box. "Forty rounds."

The reply was so apt that Logan, upon hearing of it, adopted the cartridge box, with the figures 40 on it, as the badge of the Fifteenth Corps.

After the disaster at Chickamauga, Grant came down and took command. In the two months' wait the pickets of the two armies got into quite friendly relations. They exchanged greetings, and sometimes swapped tobacco across the lines. One day Grant rode down to the Union pickets. One of the guard saw him and, according to the military custom, called out:

"Turn out the guard for the commanding general."

"Never mind the guard," returned the General, not caring for any fuss and anxious to spare his men any trouble. Just across the little creek were the pickets of the Johnnies.

"Turn out the guard for the commanding general, Gen. Grant," some Johnny called out. Out came the guard and presented arms. Grant returned the salute as he would one from his own men. Never in the war was this extraordinary scene duplicated.

GLORIOUS VICTORIES.

On Nov. 23 came the battle of Orchard Knob, on the 24th Lookout Mountain and on the next day Missionary Ridge. Every school boy and girl knows about these last two battles. Lookout Mountain is famed in song and story as the Battle Above the Clouds. The part of the Union army which was not included in the assaulting column were on the plains below, cheering as men never cheered before. All the bands in the army were massed down there playing as the attack was made. They say bands never are taken into battle. As a rule this is so, and whenever there is an exception it is a thing to be remembered to the life to come. The next morning, when the peak of Lookout was gained and a squad advanced with the Stars and Stripes, planting the staff on the highest point, the enthusiasm below was unbounded and contributed to the still more thrilling event of that day.

For the storming of Missionary Ridge was not on Grant's program. Grant, watching the battle on Orchard Knob, turned to Thomas, and said, almost angrily.

"Thomas, who ordered those men up the ridge?"

"I don't know," replied Thomas, in his usual deliberate manner. "I did not."

"Did you order them up?" Grant asked Gen. Gordon Granger.

"No," said Granger, "they started up without orders. When those fellows get started all hell can't stop them."

"Some one will suffer if it doesn't turn out well," was all the comment Grant made. But everything turned out well, and Missionary Ridge was ours.

Benjamin F. Taylor, the war correspondent, whose son was in the fight as a soldier, saw and reported the battles. Theodore R. Davis, one of Harpers' artists, also was there for his paper. And so the story of those November days comes down to us from the pencils of those specially gifted in description as well as from the drier official reports.

WHO THE CARLISTS ARE.

How They Base Their Present Claims to the Spanish Throne.

The talk of Carlist risings in Spain, and particularly the rumor that the person known as Don Jaime de Bourbon proposes to put himself at the head of the Carlist party, may incite a curiosity in some to know who the Carlists are and what they stand for in Spain. Ferdinand V., who came to the throne of Spain after the earth had settled from the Napoleonic earthquake, married, for his fourth wife, Maria Christina, daughter of the King of Naples, a sister of the Duchess de Berri and niece of Queen Marie Amelie, wife of King Louis Philippe of France. Ferdinand, always a miserable creature, like most Spanish monarchs, become more miserable after his fourth marriage. He fell completely under the domination of his handsome, energetic, ambitious and thoroughly unprincipled wife, says the Kansas City Star.

Queen Maria Christina was determined that the crown of Spain should descend to her family. But governing the descent was the decree of Philip V., which had been law in Spain for 120 years and which declared that no woman could reign in Spain while there lived a male descendant of Philip IV. In default of male heirs from the marriage of Ferdinand V. and Maria Christina, the lawful successor under the decree of Philip V. was Don Carlos, Ferdinand's brother. As it turned out, the first child born to this couple was a girl, Isabella, who fourteen months later, was followed by a sister. Even before the birth of Isabella, the Queen Maria Christina began a movement for the setting aside of the law of Philip V. Ferdinand, for a considerable period resisted, but yielded at last, and on April 6, 1830, ordered that an incomplete decree by Charles IV., in 1789, which appeared to repeal the Salic law, should be published and made perpetual. All the Bourbons protested, and the King endeavored to undo his action by what was called a "decree of derogation," but on his deathbed he declared that his act was the result of misrepresentation and was, therefore, null and void. This restored his act intended to make his daughter Isabella his heir. When Ferdinand died Marie Christina was reigning as queen regent and the little girl Isabella was the heir apparent, just as the Marie Christina reigns in the name of the little boy known as Alfonso XIII.

The brother of Ferdinand, usually known as Don Carlos, but who indulged in the name and title at home of Carlos Maria Isidor de Borbon-y-Borbon, infant of Spain, entered his protest before the death of Ferdinand against all the proceedings setting aside the Salic law admitting the female line, and declared himself the lawful heir-apparent to the throne of Spain. Immediately on the death of Ferdinand the northern provinces of Spain arose and declared for King Charles, as he was styled, and these people were called Carlists, a name which continues to exist. Those who adhered to the existing government, the government of the queen regent, were popularly called Christinos.

The cause of Don Carlos, dear to the Spanish heart as standing for bigotry and despotism, seemed at one time likely to triumph, but was betrayed by one of its generals, Morotto. Don Carlos fled from Spain, and in 1844 abdicated in favor of his son, the second Don Carlos. Cabrerea invaded Spain in 1849, but he neglected his former practice of murdering and mutilating his prisoners, and his efforts were not supported with the former enthusiasm. The second Don Carlos attempted to enter Spain in 1848 and again in 1860, when he was arrested and signed a renunciation of his claims to the Spanish throne. The present pretender is a third Don Carlos, grandson of the first, a son of Don Juan. He has made several attempts to overthrow the government of Spain; the most formidable beginning in 1873 and lasting until 1876. The Don Jaime, who is described as desirous of mixing in Spanish affairs as head of the Carlists, is the son of the third Don Carlos.

It is a noticeable fact in Spanish history that no real curse ever permanently departs from Spain. One of the permanent afflictions of Spain is what may be termed Carlism. In no other country is such a party as the Carlists possible. It is a party willing to shed its blood for a government of the worst type of the fourteenth century. There have been many Carlist risings, and they are perpetually expected.

DON CARLOS AND HIS WIFE.

Shakspeare Strangled by Electricity

Electricity and spiritualism do not make a good combination. An ingenious attempt to utilize them conjointly nearly gained for its contriver the honor of a coroner's inquest all to himself. A medium who made a specialty of luminous apparitions gave a seance on Monday night at the house of a scientific man, and successfully reproduced from his recess in a darkened room the luminous visions of various deceased personages.

While Shakspeare was on view the awe-stricken audience were surprised to hear a gasping, gurgling noise proceeding from his throat, while the head swayed to and fro as if in pain. A gentleman rushed forward just in time to save the great poet from suffocation by pulling out of his thorax a miniature electric lamp, connected by a slender wire to a small battery underneath his coat. On the principle of the schoolboy's salamander trick of illuminating the face by putting a lighted match in the mouth, the medium caused a faint spiritualistic glow, enough to satisfy wonder-seekers, to suffuse his countenance by inserting, before his hands were tied to insure confidence, the tiny electric lamp behind his teeth. Unfortunately in this case the article slipped too far down, and as the medium's bound hands prevented him pulling it up again the unfortunate man might have been choked by an incandescent light.—London Telegraph.

Travel on African Railroads.

Travel on the Buluwayo railroad is exciting. The Shashi River recently rose four feet above the bridge tracks, so that engines could not cross. A train was made up as long as the width of the river, pushed across by one engine, and taken up on the other side by another. Soon after the bridge was washed away.

Punishment.—God's punishment is not poison, but medicine. The pain men suffer is designed to make them better.—Rev. Richard E. Sykes, Universalist, Denver, Colo.

Aids to the Church.—Pleasant greetings and cordial hand clasps from the laity do more for a church than powerful sermons from the preacher.—Rev. Dr. Frank Crane, Methodist, Chicago, Illinois.

Love.—No day should pass that "I love you" has not gone often between husband and wife, for this little phrase is the shuttle of love, weaving two hearts into one.—Rev. Dr. Frank Crane, Methodist, Chicago, Ill.

Christianity and Hope.—Christianity is a religion of hope. No man can despair of the human race who sums himself in the sublime optimism of Jesus Christ.—Rev. W. Haines, Baptist, Washington, N. J.

Marshal of France.

Somewhere in the South there is said to be an ancient porcelain mug upon which is engraved "George Washington, Esq., General-in-Chief of the United States Army and Marshal of France." The mug recalls the fact, so little known, that Washigton really was an officer in the armies of the King of France. How the illustrious champion of Yorktown received that title arose in the following way: When old Count Rochambeau came to this country it was speedily made known that he could not serve under Washington, as the old Lieutenant General could only be commanded by the King in person or a Marshal of France. A way out of the difficulty was found by Col. Laurens, who suggested that King Louis make Washington a "Marechal de France." So it was done, and some of the auxiliaries so addressed Washington at Yorktown.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Gold in South Africa.

South African gold mining companies last year took out $55,472,000 in gold, of which 90 per cent. was obtained in the Witwatersrand district. The greater part of this amount was produced by a few companies which paid enormous dividends, ranging from 10 to 50 per cent., and in two instances 100 per cent., of the capital.

Better than Chewing Gum.

Mr. Lea, of Worcestershire sauce fame, left an estate of $5,350,000; his partner, Perrin, left nearly as much. They began life as druggists in a small way in an English country town.

"How can you say such cruel things of your antagonists in debate?" she inquired reproachfully of the statesman. "Oh," was the reply, "that's easy enough. I keep a scrap book, and when my own ideas give out I go to that."—Washington Star.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Death Mystery Solved by an Analysis—Madison County Glass Plants Bought by Pennsylvanians—Decision Against Quart Shops—Crushed in a Foundry.

Arsenic Found in Stomach.

As a result of the chemical examination of the stomach of the late Commodore Brown of Burrows by Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the State Board of Health, enough arsenic to kill ten men was found. Forty-five and one-seventh grains of the poison was discovered. Commodore Brown died under peculiar circumstances. Two men, Shuey and Jones, two years ago quarreled over Brown's wife and fought a duel, in which Shuey was killed. Jones was acquitted on the ground of self-defense. Letters found among Shuey's effects excited the suspicion of D. N. Brown, a brother of Mr. Brown, and he came from North Dakota and caused the investigation.

Buys the American's Plant.

Long-pending deals have been closed by which the Pennsylvania Plate Glass Company of Pittsburg absorbs the American plate glass plants in Madison County, valued at $1,000,000. This is the big anti-trust concern. The Pennsylvania company gains control by purchasing interests of the DePauws, who were the original and sole owners. The company will enlarge the Indiana plants, which means they will centralize all interests in this State and withdraw from Pennsylvania. They will reopen the plants at once.

Fatally Crushed in a Foundry.

Oscar Lewis, employed at the Roots foundry at Connersville, met with an accident that will cost him his life. He failed to securely fasten the chains around a pipe plate, weighing about 1,000 pounds, and when they attempted to raise it with the crane, the chains unfastened and the plate fell on Lewis, mashing his head and breast. He leaves a large family.

Ordered the Superintendent to Leave.

The miners at Jackson Hill, several hundred strong, marched to Alum Cave, a few miles distant, and ordered Superintendent Brown of the mine there to leave the locality. He did so. The men assert that the Alum Cave Company is not complying with the Chicago agreement. The mine is owned in Chicago.

Decide Against "Quart Shops."

The Supreme Court holds that the law passed by the last Legislature requiring "quartshops" to take out county licenses is valid. The law was assailed by the "quartshop" owners on the ground that it did not provide a penalty. The court holds that the general penalty act of 1881 attaches.

A summary of the window glass operations for the spring season has just been completed at Anderson, and shows a most remarkable industry and demand for product. At the time of making the summary the equivalent of 1,851 pots were in operation in the country, 1,577 of them being represented by Indiana and Pittsburg district plants, 146 by the North district and 128 by the East district. The full working force is employed, and more plants are in operation than at this season of any previous year. These pots are turning out about 685,000 boxes of glass per month. The imports have fallen from 100,000 to 40,000 boxes. The consumption is above normal, which is 441,000 boxes per month.

The dedication of St. John's Evangelist Church took place at Hartford City. Bishop Radamacher of Fort Wayne celebrated high pontifical mass in the presence of an immense audience. The confirmation of the children took place at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Rev. Radamacher then followed with an address. The dedication services were in charge of Rt. Rev. Joseph Radamacher, bishop, Fort Wayne, celebrant; Rev. W. Schmidt, Muncie, deacon; Rev. Alfred Weichman, Gas City, sub-deacon, and Rev. W. Quinlain, Marion, master of ceremonies. Rev. J. F. Delaney, Fort Wayne, preached the sermon. Rev. Charles Dhe is the pastor of the congregation. The new church is one of the finest in the city and cost $10,000.

Miss Fay Tucker of New London died from her burns. A month ago her mother, Mrs. Erastus Tucker, thrust the girl into a closet, threw oil on her and set her clothing on fire. She then burned herself to death on a mat of straw, with her feet braced against the door to keep her daughter imprisoned. The mother was insane.

Another Relic of Pompeii.

Another Roman villa has been dug up at Boscoreale, on the slopes of Vesuvius, near Pompeii, where the great find of silver ornaments was made two years ago. The walls are covered with beautiful frescoes, chiefly landscapes and marines. One represents a bridge over a river, with an angler fishing with a line. Four wine jars were in the cellar and seven skeletons have been found in the excavation.

WAISTS FOR SPRING.

BLOUSE EFFECT STILL HERE, BUT IN NEW FORMS.

The Most Recent Fashionable Bodices—New and Inexpensive Materials for Summer Wear—Capes Are More Attractive than Coats.

Fashionable Vernal Attire.

New York correspondence:

CHARACTERISTICS of the blouse linger in fashionable bodices, although such blousing has been stylish for so long a time. But at this late day it is highly desirable that the blouse arrangement take either a new or a recently adopted form, for the original cuts of it are quite out, and their immediate predecessors are already hopelessly common. Happily the entirely safe sorts are not a few, and among the newest of them an especially attractive one is in bib effect. Its blousing is very slight, no more than results from gathering in at the round belt. The blouse portion of the bodice is cut low under the arms, and rises back and front, narrowing by gracefully graded points towards the top, which comes just where the top of the bib to a nice apron would come. The edges are finished with tastefully arranged braid, and the rest of the bodice is of silk in color contrasting with blouse, skirt and sleeves. Any blouse tends to give length and slenderness to the figure, and this design most happily suggests both. A few perpendicular lines of braiding on the skirt complete the result.

PLANNED TO COVER A BLOUSE BODICE.

The example of this dainty design that is presented here was of golden brown cashmere, the top of the bodice being a much darker brown silk. Brown silk braid was used, and the brown of the silk belt matched that of the silk in the bodice. Such a gown may be made of any of the popular canvases, in which case it must be lined throughout with silk to match the upper portion of the bodice. The belt must match the yoke, and may be finished with sash ends at the back. It is satisfying to notice that none of these very latest models shows an exaggeratedly small sleeve.

The chiffon bodice not only appears in a perfect frenzy of puffs, frills and shirring, but is pretty under the simplest treatment. Ombre or shaded chiffon, which is offered this season as one of the prettiest novelties, lends itself charmingly to simple use. Ombre chiffon comes with color deepening from one selvage to the other, and in making the color is arranged to suit your taste, the deeper shading usually coming at the front, though sometimes the darkening is from the belt up. A double frill at the sleeve is made of the dark and the light, and the stock scarf shades prettily towards the ends. Such a bodice, whether worn with skirt to match or not, is dainty and cool for summer, and suitable right now for house wear. There is a variety to choose from, but the one at the left in this large picture was extremely tasteful. It was scarlet and green chiffon over scarlet taffeta, with scarlet taffeta belt and epaulettes. The current favor for yellows, particularly orange shades, is expressed in these waists, and the stylish but unbecoming blues are also employed, but should be discarded for something less trying unless you are sure that your complexion will stand it.

Another wrinkle turned by the shift of styles in summer dressing is in the economical woman's favor. For years summer materials have been dainty and inexpensive, but there was never such a lot of adorable madras, barred muslins and lace effects as this season. Madras is shown cross-barred with ribbon stripes that is so pretty that to see it is to make up your mind that you cannot get through the summer without—one? five at least, so many and so charming are the effects of color. The ground may be any shade and the stripes any other, but linen color barred with cerise, green, pale blue or yellow is a delight. Madras is heavy enough so that there need be no lining. Dainty embroidered edges come in colors to match the material, and gowns are made in all sorts of quaint effects, with little old fashioned draped collars and bands of ribbon to match the stripe.

FLUFFY WITHOUT SACRIFICE OF HEIGHT.

For such gowns the blouse bodice prevails. It is made like the one pictured here, with only the under-arm seam, a draw ribbon being set in at the back. This ribbon is loose the rest of its length, and ties about the waist, drawing it into shape, all of which facilitates washing. Linen color madras brightly barred is so pretty that a waist of that material was chosen by the artist, the striping being pale blue. The collar was finished with a ruffle of linen embroidery, and next to this linen insertion, light blue ribbon banding it and forming loops at the shoulders. Even barred muslin in spick-and-span white is made up in this way and trimmed with hamburg edge. Such a gown white and crisp from the tub offers a dainty contrast to the soft grace of a chiffon or silk muslin dress, and she is a wise as well as a lucky girl who includes both in her summer wardrobe.

Since blouse bodices hold their own in the summer and spring fashions, spring wraps have been conformed to the requirements of the dress to be beneath, and with very attractive results. The artist presents in her next sketch a very pretty coat model that fastened at one side, the whole front being cut in panel fashion and allowed to hang straight and loose outside the belt, which held down back and sides to a snug fit. Brown broadcloth was the material, brown braided silk galloon trimmed it, and brown satin lined it.

Capes are on the whole more attractive than coats, and there are good reasons for thinking them a better investment. Capes were worn but very little last winter, and this spring's jackets include few novelties, from which it is but natural to guess that capes will be all the go next winter. The spring crop is as fluffy as ever, though usually some arrangement of yoke or shoulder bands takes away any bunchy effect about the shoulders. To be properly becoming there should be absolute smoothness between the fluff and bunch of the frilling at the neck, and the fluttering fullness of the shoulder frills. Taffeta is the usual foundation, though some of the daintiest are made on net. The one shown here was black silk muslin over black taffeta, for which pale gray, pale green or orange could be substituted. Black satin and chiffon ruches trimmed it.

A Crow's Treasures.

One day while watching I saw a crow crossing the Don valley with something white in his beak. He flew to the mouth of the Rosedale brook, then took flight to the beaver elm. There he dropped the white object, and, looking about, gave me a chance to recognize my old friend Silverspot. After a minute he picked up the white thing—a shell—and walked over past the spring, and here, among the docks and the skunk-cabbages, he unearthed a pile of shells and other white, shiny things. He spread them out in the sun, turned them over, lifted them one by one in his beak, dropped them, nestled on them as though they were eggs, toyed with them and gloated over them like a miser. This was his hobby, his weakness. He could not have explained why he enjoyed them, any more than a boy can explain why he collects postage stamps, or a girl why she prefers pearls to rubies; but his pleasure in them was very real, and after half an hour he covered them all, including the new one, with earth and leaves, and flew off. I went at once to the spot and examined the hoard; there was about a hatful in all, chiefly white pebbles, clam shells, and same bits of tin, but there was also the handle of a china cup, which must have been the gem of the collection. That was the last time I saw them. Silverspot knew that I had found his treasures, and he removed them at once; where, I never knew.—Ernest Seton Tompson, in Scribner's.

A WOMAN'S BURDEN.

From the Evening News, Detroit, Mich.

The women of to-day are not as strong as their grandmothers. They are bearing a burden in silence that grows heavier day by day; that is sapping their vitality and clouding their happiness.

Mrs. Alexander B. Clark, of 417 Michigan avenue, Detroit, is a typical woman of to-day. Suffering as thousands of her sisters have suffered, she almost despaired of life and yet she was cured.

I became blind.

"For five years I suffered with ovarian trouble," is Mrs. Clark's own version of the story. "I was not free one single day from headache and intense twitching pains in my neck and shoulders. For months at a time I would be confined to my bed. At times black spots would appear before my eyes and I would become blind. My nerves were in such a state that a step on the floor unsettled me.

"Eminent doctors, skillful nurses, the best food and medicine all failed. Then I consented to an operation. That, too, failed and they said another was necessary. After the second I was much worse.

"It was then I heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I heard that they had cured cases like mine and I tried them.

"They cured me! They brought sunshine to my life and filled my cup with happiness. The headache is gone; the twitching is gone; the nervousness is gone; the trembling has ceased, and I have gained twenty-six pounds. Health and strength is mine and I am thankful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for the blessing."

These pills are a boon to womankind. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, they restore the requisite vitality to all parts of the body; creating functional regularity and perfect harmony throughout the nervous system. The pallor of the cheeks is changed to the delicate blush of health; the eyes brighten; the muscles grow elastic, ambition is created and good health returns.

Why are not more sermons equally as deep as they are long?

ATTRACTIVE WOMEN.

Fullness of Health Makes Sweet Dispositions and Happy Homes.

[EXTRACTS FROM MRS. PINKHAM'S NOTE BOOK.]

Woman's greatest gift is the power to inspire admiration, respect and love. There is a beauty in health which is more attractive to men than mere regularity of feature.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study. At the first indication of ill health, painful menses, pains in the side, headache or backache, secure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and begin its use. This truly wonderful remedy is the safeguard of women's health.

Mrs. MABEL SMITH, 345 Central Ave., Jersey City Heights, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can hardly find words with which to thank you for what your wonderful remedy has done for me. Without it I would by this time have been dead or worse, insane; for when I started to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a terrible state. I think it would be impossible for me to tell all I suffered. Every part of my body seemed to pain some way. The pain in my back and head was terrible. I was nervous, had hysterics and fainting spells. My case was one that was given up by two of the best doctors in Brooklyn. I had given up myself; as I had tried so many things, I believed nothing would ever do me any good. But, thanks to your medicine, I am now well and strong; in fact, another person entirely."

If you are puzzled about yourself, write freely and fully to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and secure the advice which she offers free of charge to all women. This is the advice that has brought sunshine into many homes which nervousness and irritability had nearly wrecked.

'ALF AND 'ALF.

Like the Englishman's Ale, was the Auburn City Election.

A queer and quiet election was that of yesterday. The vote came straggling in, and everybody used the blue pencil freely and with deadly effect. democrats knifed democrats and republicans knifed republicans, though the former were the worst. Many republicans voted for the democratic clerk, treasurer and marshal so as to secure votes for councilmen. Many democrats voted for republican councilmen under the idea, a mistaken one, that the democratic candidates were against waterworks. Others voted for republican candidates because of dissatisfaction engendered at the caucus. And so it went wild. The following is the vote.

JUSTICE IS BLIND.

Under this head may properly come the trip that Cook Ford and Lafe Miller made to Angola yesterday. They had the long drive, the loss of time and the necessary expenses for nothing The man against whom they expected to testify had plead guilty and been sentenced before they got there.

It appears that two or three years ago some clover seed was stolen near Hamilton. The man who stole it got another man to take it off some where and sell it This, last named man brought it to Auburn and offered it to Cook Ford and then to Mr. Moore, but finally sold it to Mr. Miller, and in this way they became witnesses. Soon afterwards, the man who sold the clover seed to Miller was arrested on charge of having stolen the seed and on trial was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. He served his time and is now out of prison. Now comes the queer part of it. Not long ago, it was learned that the original culprit, the man who stole the clover seed in fact, was living over in Ohio. He was arrested, brought over into Indiana and lodged in the Steuben county jail, and his trial came up in this term of the court, at Angola. When he saw how the land lay, he plead guilty and was given ten days in jail. This seems queer, when he was the man who alone stole the clover seed, while the man who merely took it and sold it for him got two years in the penitentiary. This furnishes another reason why justice is said to be blind.

How Farmers Get News.

Farmers like all the rest of us are deeply interested in the news just now. And here is when a new idea comes in. As for instance: At Sedan, W. H. Crane's little boy has a bicycle, and he has gone out among the nearby farmers and got quite a list of subscribers for the daily papers, and he delivers them each day, just as is done in cities. Who knows but DeKalb county lads will solve the much discussed problem of the country delivery of mails? It is quite a forward step and we are told the lad has quite a trade.

SOLDIERS IN CAMP

And Co. K. is the Best of the Brigade

Monday's Daily.

In common with several other lucky ones, the editor went to Indianapolis yesterday. Now it is no use to moralize on the bad effects of Sunday excursions. These war times furnish a sufficient excuse. At all events we went, and the first sensation was a surprise. The accommodations were ample and comfortable. And right here, so it may not be forgotten, we want to say that the Wabash road has broken the record. They furnished enough cars so everyone had a seat and there were some to spare going. Coming back, the first section was crowded, but that was the fault of the passengers who insisted on getting into the first section leaving the second one with a light load. There were two sections of the train. Both staid all night at Butler. The first came through empty, and began taking passengers at Columbia City. The second took passengers at Butler, Auburn. The Junction, Churubusco, and afterwards such scattering ones as were omitted by the first train. All were well seated and a most enjoyable ride brought us at a little after 11 to the northeast corner of the old farm which is the fair ground. Acres of white tents came in sight and thousands of soldiers and citizens covered the grounds. Our train load was one of 27 unloaded there during the forenoon. We thronged through the temporary entrance, and going southwest across the grounds soon came to the Camp of the Fourth Regiment, which occupy tents, arranged in the usual order, and covering several acres. To the question "Where's Co. K. 3d. regiment"? they could only point a general direction, southeast. On past the Fourth we went and to the camp of the Frst Regiment, which is also of tents. Again we were told. The "Third is over there among those buildings." There are too many boys to be the least bit acquainted. So we swarmed across the mile track and diagonally across the ground inside of it, striking the south side at the immense grand stand, a half of which was at the time, filled with the Second Regiment and visitors, for the Second boasts a chaplain who is a real preacher and they were having services. After an impressive sermon, all were dismissed and the boys in blue went to their camp which is among the fair buildings to the west of the Third, bringing the Second in the southwest part of the grounds. There were so many buildings where the Third "lives" that we got no good information and we sidetracked a little to the right and went to Brigade Headquarters, which were in the big "administration building." Here we got the first definite information as to Co. K. Going their direction to the south and soutneast and west of the railroad tracks that enter the grounds, we began to meet familiar faces and to answer the cheery hailings of well known voices. Then handshakings began to come thick and fast, thicker and faster, till we reached the entrance of one of the buildings marked "H" and there were the rest of the boys. Entering without hindrance by the soldier on duty we found our boys on the left of the center aisle as we go east, with Co. L. of Ligonier on the other side. The wives and sweethearts of the boys who were so fortunate as to have such, had reached there ahead of us, for, "Love has wings," and were now engaged in visiting and watching the preparations for dinner. If the soldier boys were not glad to see Auburn friends, they surely have a successful way of making believe. Their earnestness is not doubted.

Now we leave a part of what we have to say in order to first give the information that is uppermost in the minds of all. How are the boys situated? How treated? Are they satisfied or are they complaining? How many will enlist, etc. etc. The boys have an excellent building, clean, tight and almost new as are all the buildings on the ground. They sleep on clean straw with good blankets, etc., three, four or five in each of the stalls, and since the first night are comfortable. Their food the first day was short, but now they have plenty and it is all fresh and good. The hard tack is new and nice, but they also have an abundance of fresh light baker's bread, fresh beef, potatoes, cabbage, coffee and sugar, but no milk or butter. Appetite makes amends for lack of such things, and the boy who cannot empty his tin plate and cup is a curiosity. Health is good if we except now and then a slight cold. Are they satisfied? Yes. They like their treatment in all ways and the few grumblers, who are to be found in any 100 men, have stopped even that, for Capt. Lahnum and the other officers discouraged it in a way sufficiently vigorous to be effective. They are now like old soldiers in this regard. They are not clamoring for feather beds and pie. In fact, they rather look with scorn on such things, as indicating unsoldierly weakness.

The important question to people is, "Will they enlist? Saturday evening a paper was passed around among the men and those who wanted to enlist signed it.

The number who did not sign "yes" is put at 8 to 13, some having changed their minds over night. It is safe to say that enough have signed to make up the full company of 84 men. We did not get the names of all who signed but young boys like Roy McDowell and John Richards seem to be very anxious to go. Those who have agreed to go will be examined as fast as they can be reached and such as pass will be mustered into the service of Uncle Sam. Those who do not, will be sent home Those who have not signed to enlist will be home today or tomorrow. There is no certainty as to when the examinations will be begun or ended, or when they will reach Co. K. Many rumors are afloat that this one or that is coming home but the boys don't talk as if they knew.

Tuesday's Daily.

In yesterday's COURIER we had left off with Co. K. preparing for dinner. By the politeness of Sergeant Mort Hilkey we took dinner with the boys, and found it very appetizing. The coffee and steak were excellent and so were the potatoes and cabbage and the hominy would have been, but the boys had not got onto the resisting qualities of white corn. Altogether it was a treat for which Mr. Hilkey and the company have placed us, under obligations, and we hope when we go into camp and the boys come to see us, that we will be able to treat them as nicely as they did us. We give a few personal notes.

Dan Yingling undertook to eat a sandwich he bought of one of the hobo sandwich men who throng the camp, and it came near being his last. He was deathly sick but is out again now.

Bert Baker cooked a while for the boys and got such a good reputation that he has been hired to cook for the headquarters officers.

Joe Williamson has been engaged to cook for Co. K. and had to get his mess chest brought down from Auburn.

A man from Clay county was pushed under an electric car Sunday, while the big crowds were trying to get on to return to the city. The car was heavily loaded and the wheels passed over his body near the arms. He lived but a few minutes.

We met Chester Hodge in the camp of the artillery brigade as he belongs to the Zollinger battery. He had hurt a hand putting up their tents but is otherwise all right.

Charles McBride son of Judge R. Wess McBride, is again a member of Co. I. of Waterloo, and feels glad to be again with the company he joined as a mere lad in 1886.

We met Wallace Robbins and his wife and C. P. Houser and wife of Indianapolis, Mrs. Etna Kuhlman and her sister Metta Prosser of Elkhart and all report their people are well.

Saxby McIntosh was on duty at some headquarters Sunday for the first time.

Roy McDowell was feeling proud on Sunday. He had been honored by being taken as orderly to Quartermaster Harry Scott at regimental headquarters. It seems that each day Mr. Scott looks over the personal appearance of the boys and the one who looks the neatest and best is exempted that day from any sort of duty. The one who stands second best is chosen that day as the orderly for the quartermaster, Roy took proper pride in his temporary promotion.

Col. Pennington of the First Regiment had his leg broken at the point a few inches above the knee, on Friday, by his horse falling on him. He was to be taken home Monday.

Religious services were held on Sunday at several points. The Second regiment had the grand stand; the First and Fourth Regiments had services at their headquarters.

People from the city and those who came a long ways on trains brought big baskets of lunch and a thousand or so of the boys in this way got butter, pie, chicken, etc.

Wednesday's Daily.

One kindhearted young fellow from the city, brought his brother's bicycle, expecting the young soldier to be half tickled to death. A new light dawned on him when he trundled it down the bustling street of white tents and his brother told him he got all the exercise now that his constitution needed and that soldiers were not sent off into the country on scorching tours. The bicycle was taken back to the city and is now stored away to wait the time when Cuba is free and our own victorious boys in blue come marching home.

The boys who did not enlist but came back should have credit for self sacrifice and obedience to duty. We know of some who were very anxious to stay and enlist, but they had wives or more frequently mothers, who needed their help and were anxious for their welfare, who sent urgent requests for them to come home. So many of these young men gave up the ambitions and aspirations so dear to the young heart, and returned to relieve the anxiety of loved and dependent ones. All honor to such.

Henry West is with the boys and makes a fine looking soldier.

The snap shot fiend was everywhere present and in thousands of homes will be found pictures of the stirring scenes of Camp Mount.

Gen. McKee and his staff were all present and reviewed the troops at the close of dress parade. but Governor Mount did not come that day.

The First Regiment has one company without uniform or arms, evidently a company of new volunteers. The Second Regiment also has such a company and nearly all the companies have a few such men, all late recruits. One of the regimental bands has no uniform, but they make good music.

The Vincennes Cadets have a uniform of blue gray that calls attention among the masses of regulation uniforms seen all over the grounds They are students of the University of Vincennes and belong to the First Regiment.

Jacob Ochs, son of Isaac Ochs, is second lieutenant in Co. L, of Ligonier, is every inch a soldier, and takes great pride in the work before him.

It is impossible to give the names of the boys we met, there were too many of them.

The crowd was immense and the grand stand was generally full of good natured people who cheered the soldiers and cheered groups of lady bicyclists going by. cheered the flag, the bands, and in fact everything they thought worthy. Patriotism bubbled over and covered earth and sky.

It may be of interest to know how the various companies of the Third stood in regard to enlistment as shown by the papers they signed Saturday evening. The number in each who did not enlist is here shown:

Company A	23
" B	6
" C	10
" D	19
" E	3
" F	7
" G	18
" H	29
" I	15
" K	10
" L	23
" M	none
Total	184

But there are still left in the regiment 853 who propose to stay if they pass examination. But of course the number will be greatly reduced.

There is trouble in keeping the bands. They do not seem to enjoy military life. It was rumored that the entire Third Regiment band would go home. They also object to working for $13 dollars a month, for it seems they will get only the pay of ordinary soldiers, and as many have families, and can also command good wages at home, they feel like getting back to their work and their families. Other bands are talking of going home.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

BOYS COME HOME.

Since writing our Camp Mount article ten of the boys came home. They are: Linas Hilkey, John Richards, H. A. McGuire, Levi Rainier, John Brandon, Orange Moss, Huckley Donly, Conrad Schumberg, Frank Reesch and Tom Stoy.

It appears these are among the youngest in the company and some came back at the urgent appeals of parents or from a belief that they would be rejected on examination. They reached here at noon.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Monday's Daily.

It now appears that the President will wait awhile, before he sends troops to Cuba. It has been shown to him as a dangerous thing to land men over there where supplies of all sorts will have to be sent to them in ships, until we know where the Spanish fleet is.

The great naval battle at Manila, in the Phillipine Islands Sunday morning is the most exciting so far. It was a hard battle and it appears both sides lost some men. The Spaniards control the cable and make as good a showing as they can, but admit they lost two or three ships and many men. Their claim that U. S. ships, retreated behind a collection of foreign merchant ships in the harbor does not count for much. Our ships were inside the harbor and of course we would not stand around a day or two in reach of the enemy's guns on land and on their vessels. We had six war vessels and the Spaniards nine. But ours were better ones.

It seems probable that our people will land troops on the Phillipine Islands and the insurgents there will help us. The citizens of Manila are afraid of a scarcity of provisions in case of a siege.

Spanish papers seem anxious to keep their people ignorant of what has happened, and every day or two tell of the capture of American ships.

State camps were generally visited by large crowds of citizens yesterday particularly the camps in Indiana, Iowa and Illinois.

Mexico is divided in opinion. The higher classes side with Spain, but the common people with us.

Blanco says he will defend Havana at all hazards. The defenses there and at Matanzas being strengthened.

As Manila inner harbor is full of torpedoes it is not likely we have got that city.

A definite news as to how much the American fleet suffered, is not yet in.

Tuesday's Daily.

Admiral Dewey has taken Manila, chief city of the Phillipines. This came through Brittish sources and is correct.

Great turbulence in Madrid, all parties blaming the government for the loss of Manila and the fleet.

Martial law declared in Madrid to prevent mob rule.

Spain will ask Europe to interfere and save her from the "Yankee cowards."

Admiral Dewey's ships are not iron clads but are partially protected. He used dynamite bombs and the Spaniards were poor shots.

A British merchant vessel has been stopped near Havana, on suspicion but was let go on proving her nationality. As she had been stopped twice before shows how effective the blockade is.

The flying squadron is held ready to intercept the Spanish ships when they come.

Late reports have to be carefully scrutinized, as they come largely through Spanish sources.

Spaniards give up that their Asiatic fleet has been destroyed.

Not a word has been heard directly from Admiral Dewey. He is too busy to send dispatches.

Dewey has given the Spanish 24 hours to surrender the city of Manila, its ports, munitions and supplies of all kinds. News keeps getting better.

Wednesday's Daily.

While the government keeps quiet about it, there are signs that our troops will be moved on Cuba in a few days.

There comes a rumor that Great Britain will ask Spain to free Cuba as the United States have demanded, as that would end the trouble.

It now seems certain that the only cable from Manila has been cut, as no certain news can be had. All we know so far, is either from Spanish or French sources.

Spanish papers are not allowed to give news, except such as officials allow to go out.

The trouble in Madrid continues. It is believed the present ministry will be forced out of office, and more radical men like Weyler put at the head of affairs. Even a revolution by the Carlists, is feared or a change to a republican form of government.

A naval battle is believed to have taken place off the coast of Newfoundland.

It is believed we shall at once send a force of troops to the Phillipines

Campos may be put at the head of the Spanish ministry.

Don Carlos is more popular in Spain just now, than the present queen. As he has as good a right to the throne as anyone, he may yet kick the other family out.

Martial law is causing a great deal of dissatisfaction in Madrid.

The Spaniards don't feel like giving up without one or two more battles. Well, we are waiting for them.

To the Boys in Camp

Come friends and listen to my Say
I'll tell you what's the matter
Our Company K. is mighty strong
They'll make the Spaniards scatter,

When Company K. with boys in blue
Shall march into Havana
Many a loyal heart and true
Will shout aloud Hosanna.

Our boys of Company K. can fight
On foot or in the saddle
But when they get the Spaniard's track
They'll make them all skeedaddle.

In marching down through Cuba's land,
The Spaniards do not thank ye,
For they all scorn our boys in blue
Oh yes, they hate a Yankee

A soldier's life is hard to bear
But it wont last forever
For when we've Cuba free you know
We'll all come home together

And when we all shall bid farewell
To Cuba and its labors,
Oh what a story we will tell,
To all our friends and neighbors.

A BACKWARD SPRING

Brings Blood Diseases, Nervous Derangement and Chronic Catarrh.

Never was there a greater demand for spring medicines—something to cleanse the blood, strengthen the nerves, or regulate the digestion. Is there any medicine so good for these purposes as Pe-ru-na? Thousands of doctors, druggists, and tens of thousands of people of all classes and vocations have long ago decided this question—that Pe-ru-na has no equal in these cases. Poor, shrunken dyspeptics become strong, vigorous, and hearty after a few bottles of it. People who are blotched, pimpled and sallow and sluggish never fail to find a course of Pe-ru-na to clear the skin, invigorate the system and enrich the blood. Chronic catarrh in all phases and stages, cases that have defied the best of treatment for many years, take a few bottles of Pe-ru-na to their entire relief. Nervousness, debility, weaknesses of both sexes, sleeplessness, irritability, despondency, hypochondria, all these disappear when Pe-ru-na is used according to directions.

One of the most instructive books on chronic catarrh ever furnished free is being sent by Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company. Columbus Ohio. This book is very instructively illustrated with expensive drawings, and will be sent free to any address.

COURT

The Thomas habeas corpus case above noted has a queer history which goes far to show why Judge Roby criticised the justice. It appears that justice VanFleet, of Garrett was acting as agent for Thomas, to sell a house and lot, but failing to find a buyer, Thomas came down and found a buyer himself. Then VanFleit wanted his commission just the same as if he had sold it demanding $50. Thomas offered $30, and failing agree, VanFleit sued Thomas. Sharpless who was Thomas' attorney did not want to try it before VanFleit, an interested party, but failing to get a change of venue, it was held before VanFleit, who rendered judgment against Thomas which from the criminal nature of the charge, finally landed him in prison, at South Bend, and later on, in Auburn.

The case against Thomas of South Bend, that we spoke of Saturday was not finished that day, but came up again this forenoon, when he was discharged by the court, who said the justice who had committed him was wrong in so doing. Mr. Moody reports that his client and wife took the noon train for their home at South Bend.

GOOD RECORD

Mr. Coe was not able to hold the regular monthly examination of teachers, personally, last Saturday, and Mr. Harrison held it for him. It is a remarkable fact, that of the five examiners and county superintendents who have held this office since 1865, not one was prevented by ill health or accident from holding the examination on the day set. This means 395 Saturdays. And Mr. Coe, was detained not by sickness but by necessary business, that could not be avoided.

RUNAWAY.

Emanuel Stafford has a badly bruised face and head, and a sky blue eye, the result of an accident. He and his wife were starting for town on Saturday to do some trading, when the horse was frightened and Mr. Stafford was thrown out, and he thinks his head struck the wheel, possibly the hub. There was a large cut over the left eye, which took seven stitches to close. He had to come to town to get Dr Nusbaum to sew it up. The horse got away and smashed the buggy.

She went down on the Wabash train Tuesday, and it soon began to take on soldiers, and at every large town, great crowds, were ready with banners and cannon to greet them. She says she would not have missed this trip for anything.

BUTLER.

War has become the absorbing topic of conversation at all public places of late.

Ora Knisely and his wife are pleasantly installed in their new home on West Ninth street.

Trouble is again brewing in the bad land. A young grass widow has rather a scion of the opposite sex to assist her in her household and garden work, and the neighbors are stirred up over the fact, and manifest their displeasure by hooting and throwing stones at the house, much to the discomfort of innocent (?) inmates.

The new M. E. minister is having full houses of late, and bids fair to revivify this old society to its former status.

Frank Stump, who is working at mason work at the crossing of the Mackinaw and B. & O. railroads, was home over Sunday. He is republican nominee for councilman in his ward.

The fire at Hamilton recently had very serious effects on the trade at that place, as nearly all of the business part of town was wiped out.

R. A. Catlin, formerly foreman in the bicycle works is about to move to Angola, N. Y. We wish him success in his new field.

Our post office will soon have a new staff of officers. The outgoing post master, Mr. Oberlin, has given good satisfaction, rendering it more difficult for the new one to do so,

Ed. Showalter is working in Auburn at the carriage works.

Rev. Frech (Fray) delivered an address to the Odd Fellows, at the M. E. church, last Sabbath. Edgerton and St. Joe lodges were represented.

Wm. Scranton, living on East Green street, is improving, after a very serious illness.

Mrs. A. S. Briggs is seriously ill. Her recovery has become a subject of some doubt.

No small excitement resulted over the sterling of the records of the Butler corporation, last week. Two tax duplicates, tax receipt books and the stubs were taken, rendering the settlement of the officers very difficult. Disputes have arisen between some of the officers as to the validity of some of the receipts and Auburn's troubles are about to be transported to Butler.

—Farmers, use your common sense when spraying fruit trees. You all know that bees are useful in spreading the pollen of the flowers. Then don't kill the bees by spraying the blossoms. Wait till the blossoms fall and then spray as often as you please. If you doubt the correctness of this, call on Fleming at the greenhouse, Auburn. He will charge nothing for the information.

To Avoid Capture by Our Fleet.

The News Comes Through Spanish Sources, Showing Cable Still Under Spanish Control—The Port Probably Not Taken—Admiral Montejo Lost His Flagship.

Glorious American Victory.

Madrid special: Advices from Manila say that the American squadron, under Commodore Dewey, appeared off the Bay of Minila at 5 o'clock Sunday morning and opened a strong cannonade against the Spanish squadron and forts protecting the harbor. The Spanish second-class cruiser Don Juan de Austria, was severely damaged and her commander killed. Another Spanish vessel was burned. The American squadron retired, having also sustained severe damage.

A second engagement followed, in which the American squadron again suffered considerable loss and the Spanish warships Mindano and Ulloa were badly damaged.

According to late official telegrams, the Spanish cruiser Castilla was also burned. The other Spanish ships retired from the combat, some being sunk to avoid falling into the enemy's hands.

An official telegram from the Governor General of the Philippines says: "Admiral Montejo transferred his flag to the cruiser Isla de Cuba from the cruiser Reina Maria Christina. The Rejna Maria Christina was completely burned, as was also the cruiser Castilla, other ships having to retire from the combat, some being sunk to avoid their falling into the hands of the enemy."

Captain Cadarzo fell while standing almost beside Admiral Montejo.

The magazines of the Don Juan de Austria exploded when the fire started by American shells reached them, and the vessel went down like a flash.

Fifteen Men and Sixty Mules Blown to Pieces.

San Francisco (Cal.) special: News has just reached the city of a terrible explosion of powder that was being carried by pack train to Col. Dan Burn's Candelaria Mine in Mexico. The explosion took place on the road near San Vicente, State of Sinaloa, on April 4 last. The pack train was unusually large. It consisted of over 110 mules, and the attendants numbered some forty Mexicans. A part of the freight consisted of ammunition, caps and boxes of powder. It is reported that 218 boxes of powder and 20,000 caps exploded with such force that fifteen men and sixty mules were killed.

Burglars Escape Capture.

At Marion, Ind., Leo Stevens, a grocer, has periodically for five or six weeks had his money drawer robbed during the night, the thief having a key to the door of the store. The other morning at 3 o'clock two masked men entered the front door and proceeded to rob the money drawer. When ordered to surrender they commenced shooting. Stevens and the policeman returned the fire and one burglar jumped through a window and the other attempted to, but was captured. While Stevens was ringing for the patrol the burglar bolted and escaped from the policeman, but was recognized as a local tough.

Medicine Exploded.

A bottle of medicine for dyspepsia exploded in the pocket of J. S. Koppes of Mansfield, O., a traveling salesman. His clothing took fire, and before he succeeded in extinguishing the flames one side of his coat was gone and his hands badly burned. What there was about the contents of the bottle to explode could not be determined, although it was analyzed.

Important to Miners.

At a meeting of the Ohio and Pittsburg coal operators and miners, held at the Chittenden Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, it was agreed that the present price should be maintained in Ohio for room turning and that the Pittsburg prices shall be increased to that amount. This is a decision of importance to miners in both States.

Quick Sentence.

William Bestor and William Filer, arrested for the murder of an aged couple and the burning of their bodies at Black Earth, Wis., pleaded guilty to the crime. They were sentenced to life imprisonment and taken to the State prison. They were landed in prison thirty hours after the crime was committed.

Brazil Sells Torpedoes.

General Clay's Present.

Killed in a Runaway.

The team of Marvin Higgins ran away at Niles, Mich., and struck a wagon containing Mrs. Robert Garrison, her child and Miss Sadie Brown. The buggy pole struck Mrs. Garrison, penetrating her lung and killing her instantly. The other two were fatally injured.

Farmer Kills His Wife and Himself

Riley Nix, a farmer, aged 70 years, residing at Coldwater, Calloway County, Ky., shot and killed his aged wife. He then committed suicide by cutting his own throat. There was no other cause for the tragedy except temporary insanity.

MATANZAS IS SHELLED

Spanish Batteries Are Speedily Blown to Pieces.

DEATH AND RUIN DEALT OUT

American Warships for Thirty Minutes Belch Forth a Storm of Iron.

New York, Puritan and Cincinnati Are the Vessels Engaged in the First Serious Engagement of the War—Spanish Land Defenses Seriously Damaged and Loss of Life of the Defenders Is Reported—No Casualties on Fleet—Morro Castle Fires.

The flagship New York, monitor Puritan, and cruiser Cincinnati, under Admiral Sampson, on Wednesday afternoon bombarded the Spanish batteries that were in position and in course of construction at the entrance to Matanzas harbor. They were pretty thoroughly destroyed.

The flagship was first fired upon by the batteries on Point Rubal Cava and Point Maya, while the Puritan, New York and Cincinnati were reconnoitering for the purpose of locating and ultimately destroying the works the Spaniards were building. The New York steamed in between the batteries, and opened both broadsides on the Spaniards. The Puritan engaged the Cape Maya battery and the Cincinnati went to starboard of the New York, close up to the land, and sent a broadside of shells into Ruba Cava.

The batteries returned the fire, but not one of the shots took effect. They fired explosive shells, and they all fell wide of the mark, no damage of any kind resulting. A shrapnell shell exploded above the New York, and one shell exploded just beyond the stern. All others were wasted. The batteries were reduced in just twenty minutes. The final shot from the enemy came from Ruba Cava, and drew from the Puritan a reply from one of her twelve-inch guns, which struck the battery and blew up a section of it. The United States ships did not retire until the Spanish refused to renew the engagement. They left the batteries in ruins. During the engagement not a soul could be seen on the shore, and the puffs of smoke came up from the batteries as if by magic.

The seaport town of Matanzas, in the province of that name, is on the northwest coast of Cuba, about fifty-two miles east of Havana. It is connected by rail with Havana, Cardenas and the other principal towns on the island. Its population before the commencement of the present Cuban war was about 35,000.

The Spanish Version.

The Madrid version of the bombardment of Matanzas by the United States fleet says that "after half an hour's fight the Americans were obliged to retreat." The Spanish official reports, in addition to saying the Americans "were obliged to retire," admit that "several men were killed" and that "some damage was done to the town," also saying that the "American loss is not known." It is believed in Washington now that at least 100 Spanish soldiers were killed or wounded in the bombardment of Matanzas.

Millions Spent on War.

The several allotments made by the President from day to day out of the $50,000,000 national defense appropriation now aggregate $41,222,116, as follows: War, $16,148,627; navy, $25,078,489; treasury, $5,000. Of these amounts the Navy Department has disbursed $11,145,000 and the War Department $22,145,000.

Because the Government of the United States will not allow Madrid and New York telegrams to come to Havana for the press, the Spanish censor at that city has closed the cables to correspondents of New York newspapers.

POWERS TO REMAIN NEUTRAL.

Great European Countries Issue Formal Decrees of Neutrality.

Notice has been issued by the State Department that neutrality orders have been promulgated by Italy, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Norway and Sweden, Russia, France, and Colombia. To these should be added Great Britain, that country having issued a neutrality proclamation, although the State Department had not been officially advised of the fact. The State Department has also been informed that Mexico, Argentine Republic, Corea and Belgium have proclaimed neutrality. Corea's neutrality is considered important, owing to her proximity to the Philippines. Four out of the six great powers of Europe have declared their neutrality, namely, Great Britain, Italy, France and Russia. There remain of the great powers Germany and Austria, neither of which has acted. The delay of Austria does not cause surprise, as Austria's sympathy with Spain is more pronounced than that of any other country of Europe. It is not doubted, however, that Austria will assume a neutral attitude sooner or later. The delay of Germany is felt to be due solely to Germany's consulting her own commercial interests before shaping the exact terms of her neutrality proclamation.

"FIGHTING" BOB EVANS.

WILL NOT ADJOURN.

Congress to Remain in Session During the Progress of the War.

Congress, according to what most of the leaders say, is likely to remain in session until the war with Spain is over, even if the struggle should be prolonged until December. It is most important that it should, in view of the possibility of complications with other European nations. A number of Congressmen look for interference on the part of the several powers, whose interests and sympathies are with Spain, and decidedly against the United States or any strong republic. It is probable, however, that during the hot summer weather, should the war continue until then, brief recesses will be taken, and the members generally will remain close to Washington, so that they can return on short notice.

Terror Takes a Prize.

The United States monitor Terror captured the big Spanish steamer Guido, bound from Corunna, Spain, for Havana. The prize had on board a large cargo of provisions and money intended for the Spanish troops in Cuba. The capture took place ten miles off Cardenas, after a desperate chase, during which the Terror and the gunboat Machias fired, blowing the Spaniard's pilot house into the water. The crew of thirty-eight was taken to Key West. The Guido is a vessel of 2,065 tons net, and is one of the richest prizes captured. It is estimated that the steamer, with her cargo, is worth $400,000.

DISTANCES BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND SPANISH POINTS.

Transport Ships Chartered.

A rather striking sign of the imminence of the invasion of Cuba was contained in the chartering Thursday by the War Department of eight large steamers of an average capacity of 2,000 tons, and able to carry from 500 to 1,200 passengers each. These are to be used as transports for the conveyance of the first military expedition to Cuba.

Costs Money to Feed the Army.

The subsistence commission is making arrangements to feed an army of 186,000 at 25 cents per man per day. This will cost $18,000,000 a year. With the regulars and volunteers the United States army now numbers over 260,000 men.

No Women Nurses.

Surgeon General Sternberg of the army has received applications from over 1,200 physicians, who have offered their services to the Government. He has been obliged to issue a circular letter declining these offers. He says that comparatively few contract surgeons will be required in the regular army, and he has nothing to do with the volunteers. No female nurses will be sent to Cuba or to hospitals on the gulf coast.

Prisoners of War.

All crews and passengers of the prize ships will be held as prisoners of war.

CONGRESS MAKES FORMAL DECLARATION.

A BILL declaring that war exists between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Spain.

Be it enacted, etc.:

First—That war be and the same is hereby declared to exist and that war has existed since the 21st day of April, A. D., 1898, including said day, between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Spain.

Second—That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States and to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several States to such extent as may be necessary to carry this act into effect.

President McKinley's War Message.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

I transmit to Congress for its consideration and appropriate action copies of correspondence recently had with the representative of Spain in the United States with the United States minister at Madrid, and through the latter with the Government of Spain, showing the action taken under the joint resolution approved April 20, 1898, "for the recognition of the independence of the people of Cuba, demanding that the Government of Spain relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and to withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters, and directing the President of the United States to carry these resolutions into effect."

Upon communicating with the Spanish minister in Washington the demand which it became the duty of the Executive to address to the Government of Spain, in obedience to said resolution, the said minister asked for his passports and withdrew. The United States minister at Madrid was in turn notified by the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs that the withdrawal of the Spanish representative from the United States had terminated diplomatic relations between the two countries, and that all official communications between their respective representatives ceased therewith.

I recommend to your especial attention the note addressed to the United States minister at Madrid by the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs on the 21st inst., whereby the foregoing notification was conveyed. It will be perceived therefrom that the Government of Spain, having cognizance of the joint resolution of the United States Congress, and in view of things which the President is thereby required and authorized to do, responds by treating the representative demands of this Government as measures of hostility, following with that instant and complete severance of relations by its action whereby the usage of nations accompanies an existent state of war between sovereign powers.

The position of Spain being thus made known, and the demands of the United States being denied, with a complete rupture of intercourse by the act of Spain, I have been constrained, in exercise of the power and authority conferred upon me by the joint resolution aforesaid, to proclaim, under date of April 22, 1898, a blockade of certain ports on the north coast of Cuba lying between Cardenas and Bahai Honda, and of the port of Cienfugos on the south coast of Cuba; and further, in exercise of my constitutional powers, and using the authority conferred upon me by the act of Congress approved April 22, 1898, to issue my proclamation dated April 23, 1898, calling for volunteers in order to carry into effect the said resolutions of April 20, 1898. Copies of these proclamations are hereto appended.

In view of the measures so taken, and with a view to the adoption of such other measures as may be necessary to enable me to carry out the expressed will of the Congress of the United States in the premises, I now recommend to your honorable body the adoption of a joint resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Spain, and I urge the speedy action thereon, to the end that the definition of the international status of the United States as a belligerent power may be made known, and the assertion of all its rights and the maintenance of all its duties in the conduct of a public war may be assured.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

AGREE ON APPROPRIATION BILL.

Naval Conferees Have Decided to Set Aside $57,000,000.

The conferees on the naval appropriation bill reached an agreement Thursday evening and the report was presented Friday. As completed the bill carries a total of nearly $57,000,000, which is some $19,000,000 greater than when it passed the House, and $32,000,000 more than the appropriation for the current year. In the main the amendments made by the Senate were adopted by the conferees, it being recognized that they were demanded by the exigencies of the occasion. The most important of these amendments authorize the building of four harbor defense monitors and increasing the number of torpedo boat destroyers from twelve to sixteen. The bill authorizes the increase of the navy by three seagoing battleships, each of 11,000 tons displacement, carrying the heaviest armor and most powerful armament, to cost, exclusive of armor and armament, $3,000,000 each; three coast defense monitors.

SPAIN FEELS HUNGER.

War Is Causing a Rapid Rise in Prices of Food.

A dispatch from Madrid says that the effect of the war on the prices of food is beginning to be felt acutely. An impending rise in the price of bread in Madrid and the provinces is announced. The manufacturers at Palma, Majorca, have been compelled to reduce their work and discharge many employes. Thousands of artisans and their families are in distress. Another dispatch from Madrid says the Spanish Government is bewildered by the attitude of Great Britain. The Spanish officials profess to believe that the people and the Government of England are not in accord, and that the official acts of the British Government are due to some secret compact with the United States.

Spanish Officers Threaten.

Senora Virginia Herrara and her two sons, daughter, and four sisters have arrived in Atlanta from Havana. They say that an agreement has been entered into by the Spanish officers in the Cuban capital by which, rather than have the city fall intact into the hands of the Americans, they will massacre every American sympathizer and raze Havana to the ground. The first symptom of American occupation will be the signal for this action. Thousands of Cubans are leaving Havana from fear of this threat.

Death if Found Guilty.

John Waltz, arrested at Port Eads with a portfolio of plans and drawings showing the fortifications of Forts St. Philip and Jackson, will be shot if found guilty.

THE HARBOR OF MATANZAS.

Fear Treason in Mail Matter.

The Postoffice Department Tuesday took the first step toward the establishment of a system of surveillance of mail matter in connection with the transmission of war news. The action was taken on a letter addressed to a resident of New Orleans, supposed to be a spy, and was detained by the postmaster there upon information that it contained plans of the fortifications below that city, probably for treasonable use. In reply to his request for instructions, the postmaster was directed by Assistant Attorney General Tyner to send the letter to the commanding general at New Orleans.

The transport Panther, with 800 men, escorted by the cruiser Montgomery, put to sea from Fort Monroe, Va., for Key West.

The War Department has let contracts for $5,000,000 worth of cloth. The material is for clothing for the volunteer army.

Gen. Brooke is rapidly organizing the regulars at Chickamauga. It is expected 50,000 troops will be concentrated at that place.

The Cuban army and leaders are anxious to serve under the direction of the general commanding the United States army of occupation.

MEN WHO FIGHT FEVER.

Senate Military Committee Wants 10,000 Immunes Enlisted.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs made a favorable report on a bill authorizing the enlistment of an additional brigade of volunteer engineers. In connection with the offers made by recently organized troops in the South who have had yellow fever, the President is empowered to enlist without regard to apportionment among the States a volunteer force not exceeding 10,000 men, possessing immunity from diseases incident to tropical climates.

Mounts for Coast Defense Guns.

A Cleveland, O., firm has received a rush order from the Government for six more disappearing cartridges for coast defense guns. The order involves about $100,000. It is stated that there are 100 defense guns which the Government desires to mount along the Atlantic coast as soon as gun carriages can be obtained.

PLAN FOR AN INVASION.

Cuban Forces Are to Cover the Landing of Our Troops.

ROWAN GOES TO MEET GARCIA

United States Army Officer Gets Within the Enemy's Lines.

Details of the Plan of Sending Arms and Landing Our Soldiers Will Be Perfected—War Department's Maps of Cuba Will Also Be Corrected by Means of Information Secured from the Insurgent Leaders—A Hazardous Undertaking.

A United States army officer has made his way to the camp of Gen. Calixto Garcia of the Cuban insurgent army, and had consultation with him in reference to arming the Cubans and the co-operation of the Cuban and United States troops. This officer is Lieut. A. S. Rowan, Nineteenth Infantry, who was landed before daylight Monday west of Santiago from the United States torpedo boat Porter, Lieut. Fremont commanding. He was met by Cuban guides who were in waiting, and without delay the party set out for Garcia's camp. The arrangements for the reception of Rowan were made ten days or more before in Washington at a conference between Gen. Miles and Senor Palma. Gen. Garcia, commanding the Cuban forces in the eastern end of the island, is therefore now in full possession of the United States military plan of campaign.

INVADING ARMY TOO SMALL.

Officers Indulge in Caustic Criticisms on the Proposition.

Considerable caustic criticism has been indulged in by army officers, and particularly by Gen. Miles, of the smallness of the first army it is proposed to send to Cuba. Gen. Miles, it is understood, said that, in his opinion, it would be better to take the 5,000 men whom it is proposed to send to Cuba, put them on a transport and send them to Cadiz with a polite request to the Spanish Government to take good care of them until the cruel war is over. The fact that Matanzas, which is the point selected for the landing, is a comparatively short distance from Havana, where 80,000 Spanish soldiers are understood to be concentrated, was in itself thought to be sufficient reason for not risking so small a force as 5,000 men ashore.

TRAITOR ON PACIFIC COAST.

Letter Addressed to Sagasta Discovered in the Mails.

The postmaster at Santa Cruz, Cal., reported that a letter addressed to Premier Sagasta, Spain, had been mailed there, and under direction of Assistant Attorney General Tyner its contents were examined. It was mailed by a woman, who gave an address, where an answer would reach her, and contained information in regard to the fortifications of San Francisco, where guns are located. It also describes points lower down the coast, where Spanish vessels could land troops, and said there were men who would act as guides to attack San Francisco and seize railroad trains. The letter was transmitted to the War Department for action. It is thought that it may lead to an investigation as to whether there are persons in that vicinity unfriendly to the United States.

Spain Seeks Sympathy.

The Spanish Government sent a circular to the powers regretting "the hard necessity of being compelled to appeal to force in order to repel the scandalous aggression of the United States," etc. The note concludes: "The Spanish people await the attack with tranquil serenity, decided to sell their lives dear and to defend energetically their right to remain in America, confident that in this work they will have the assistance of Cubans, who are Spaniards like themselves."

Patrolling the Channel.

Two Spanish torpedo boats and a large armed ship were sighted cruising at the entrance of the English channel.

Soon to Land.

A Washington dispatch says that three United States expeditions are shortly to land in Cuba—two will carry arms and medicines to the Cuban armies of Garcia and Gomez and the other will take food to the starving reconcentrados.

The American embassy in London is overrun with British applicants who want to serve in our army and navy. Some of them are commissioned officers in the Queen's service.

A Spanish war vessel is said to be watching near Buenos Ayres for the battleship Oregon.

THE OLD HYMN.

I sat within a vacant room,
A low-ceiled room, quaint-shaped, oak-beamed,
With windows looking off to sea,
O'er which the sunset's glory streamed.
I watched the far-off flitting sails,
And "Half-way Rock" that looming rose
A tower from the heaving sea
Whereon the scattered isles repose.

And some one near me gently played
A dear old hymn that stirred my heart;
'Twas "Children of the Heavenly King,"
And what it woke made quick tears start.
The long years seemed to backward turn,
And I a little child again,
Held fast within his strong arms' clasp,
While soft he crooned the old refrain.

Oh! just once more to be that child,
And know again the blissful rest
The old hymn brought me, rocked to sleep
With pillowed head upon his breast!
But only yet a little while,
Though earth may call it years that creep,
I know he'll come to me again,
And rock me to eternal sleep.
—Mary Devereux, in Boston Transcript.

Aboard the Silver Star.

One rainy night, about half past 8 o'clock, the train had dashed into McKibben's Corners, and the mail had been delivered at the store and post office.

John Fairjohn, the postmaster, had opened the bag and counted the letters. There were, as he made it out, just ten and one was larger than the others,and had a red seal; and then he had found that he had left his glasses on the newspaper in the back room, and without his glasses he could not read a line; and so, of course, he had gone after them, returning to find two persons in the store—Farmer Roper and Squire McKibben, whose ancestors had given name to the place.

"Wet, ain't it?" said Mr. Fairjohn, nodding.

"Wet, or not, our folks ain't going to do without their groceries, you see," said the squire. "Mail's in, I see. That train came near running into my truck, too. Wasn't noticing the flag, and drove across just in time to save myself. Any letters for me?"

"I'll see," said Mr. Fairjohn.

He turned to the little pile of envelopes and told them over in his hand like a pack of cards.

"Why, there's only nine," he said. "I'm sure I counted right. I counted ten, and I thought one had a red seal. I might as well give up keeping the office if I'm going to lose my senses like that. There wasn't any one in here while I was gone, was there, squire?"

"Only Roper and I," said the squire, "and Roper's son. But he didn't come in, did he?"

"No," said old Roper. "I don't think Job came in at all. He just went on somewhere."

"Well," said the postmaster, after another search, "well, I must be mistaken. Yes, there is a letter for you—your folks, anyway—and something for you, Mr. Roper. And I suppose you wouldn't mind tossing that in at the Smiths' as you pass."

"Oh! no," said Farmer Roper. "Give it to me. That's from Smith that's clerking it to New York, I reckon. Can't get any of 'em to stay and farm."

"Your son Job did," said the squire.

"Oh! my son Job. He'd try the patience of his namesake," said Farmer Roper. "My son Job! Bah-"

Just at this moment the door of the store opened and there entered at it a little woman, dressed in a cheap calico dress and wrapped in a thin and faded shawl.

She looked timidly about the store, still more timidly at the heap of letters, and then in an appealing voice, like that of a frightened child, said:

"Mr. Fairjohn, is there any letter for me this time?"

The postmaster, who was a little deaf, had turned his head away and did not know that she had entered, and she came closer to the counter and to the light upon it before she spoke again. She was a faded little woman, and her face had signs of grief written upon it, but she was not either old or ugly yet, and there was something in the damp curls clustering under the faded calico hood, and in the little round dimpled chin, absolutely childlike, even yet.

"Is there any letters for me this time, Mr. Fairjohn?" she said again; and this time the postmaster looked up.

"No, there ain't; and you're a fool for taking such a walk to ask," said he, with rough kindness. Wouldn't I have sent it if it had a come, Mrs. Lester?"

"Well, you see, I felt in a hurry to get it," said she. "You can't blame me for being in a hurry; it's so long."

"That's true," said the postmaster. "Well, better luck next time. But why don't you wait? Mr. McKibben will take you over when he goes. He passes your corner."

"Yes, wait, Mrs. Lester," cried Mr. McKibben. "I'll take ye, and welcome."

But she had answered:

"Thank you. I don't mind walking," and was gone.

"Keeps it up, don't she?" asked the postmaster.

"It's a shame," said Mr. McKibben. "How many years is it now since Lester went off?"

"Ten," said the postmaster. "I know, for it was the day I came here. She was as pretty a woman as you'd want to see then, wasn't she?"

"Well, yes," said Mr. McKibben.

"Sailed in the Sphynx," said the postmaster. "And we all know that the Sphynx went down in that voyage, all hands along with her. The rest of the women put on widow's weeds, them that lost husbands—four in this town itself. They took what the Almighty sent and didn't rebel. She set up that her husband wasn't dead, and would come back. She's kept it up ever since; come for his letters regular; and he was drowned along with all the rest, of coure, ten years ago. She must be 30. Well, she's changed a good deal in that time."

"Yes," said the other old man; "but there's my son Job, wild over her yet. He's offered himself twice. He stands ready to offer himself again any day—ready to be a father to her boy and a good husband to her. He's better off than I be. His mother's father left him all he had. He's crazy, is Job—crazy, I call it. Plenty of pretty gals and healthy, smart widows; and he sees no one but that pale, slim, little thing that's just going out into the mud; and she—why, of course she's lost her senses or she'd have him. Works like a slave to keep herself and the child, lives in a rickety shanty, waitng and waiting for a drowned man to come back again. Why, every one knows Charlie Lester was drowned in the Sphynx. There wasn't a soul saved, not one. It was in the papers. Now, the bottle was found with a letter in it, writ by some one just before the ship sunk. And she's waitin' for him yet!"

"Crazy on that point," said the postmaster. "Well, poor soul, she'd only been married a week when the Sphynx sailed; that makes a difference."

"Oh, yes," said the farmer.

Then, their parcels being ready, they went out to their wagons, and Mr. Fairjohn, having stared out into the rainy night awhile, put up his shutters and went to bed. Meanwhile the woman plodded on through the mud. "Walking off her disappointment," she said to herself. It was one she should have been used to, and now the absurdity of it seemed to strike her for the first time in all these years.

"They laugh at me," she muttered to herself. "I know they laugh at me. Perhaps I am mad; but they don't know what love is. Charlie wouldn't have left me like that. If he had died he would have given me some sign; and yet—yet, if he were alive, it would be stranger still. No, no; they are right—I am wrong. He must be dead."

And as though the news had just been whispered to her, she clasped her hands to her forehead, gave a cry, and sank down on her knees in the road

She knelt there a few moments and then arose. In this little interval the wind had blown the clouds from the sky, and the moonlight lay white upon the path, and lit her on her way to her poor home.

There at the door sat a man, a strong, determined looking fellow, who arose as she approached and held out his hand.

"Here you come," he said, "tired to death. Jessie Lester, can't you give up this nonsense and think of the living a little. Think of me, Jessie, for half an hour."

"I do think of you," she said. "I'm very sorry you should be so good to me when I must seem so bad to you."

Then she sat down on the porch and took her little hood off, and leaned her head wearily against the wall of the house; and the man arose and crossed over and sat down beside her.

"Give it a softer resting place, Jessie," he said, "here on my heart."

She looked out into the night, not at him, as he spoke.

"Job," she said, "I begin to think you are right, that he went down in the Sphynx with the rest, ten years ago. But what good would I do you? What do you want to marry me for?"

The man drew closer as he answered.

"Before you married Charles Lester I loved you. All these ten years since that vessel went down in mid ocean, I've loved you. A man must have the woman he loves if he gives his soul for her."

"What a horrible thing!" said she. "His soul?"

"I should have said his life," said Job. "I don't want to shock you. But you don't know what it would be to me to have you. And then I'd do everything for your boy."

"Yes," she answered. "I know you would."

There was a pause. Then she gave him her hand.

"Job," she said, softly, "I shall pretend nothing I don't feel, but I know I've been crazy all this time, and if you want me you may have me. It's very good of you to love me so."

And thus it seemed to have ended, that ten years' watching and waiting, and there was triumph in Job's eyes as he turned away and left her with his first kiss upon her lips. But at the end of the green lane he paused and looked back.

"I told her the truth," he said, "when I said that when a man loved a woman as I love her, he must have her, if the price were his soul itself."

And then he drew from his breast a letter with a great red seal upon it, looked at it for a moment, and hid it away again.

Married? Yes, they were to be married. Every one at McKibben's Corners knew that now. Jessie Lester went no more to the post office for her long expected letter. Job was furnishing his house—had furnished it, for on the morrow the wedding was to take place. And it was night again. A month from that night, when she had come for the last time, as every one thought, through rain and mud, to make her sadly foolish query, she was sensible at last—very sensible. She had chosen the substance instead of the shadow.

And now, as we said, it was night, and a wetter one than the other—later, too, for Mr. Fairjohn had closed the store, and was compounding himself what he called a "nightcap," of warm water, lemons and sugar, and was supping it by the stove, when there came upon his door a feeble knock, and when, being repeated, he heard it, there staggered out of the rain a dripping figure—that of Jessie Lester, the bride who was to be on the morrow.

She was trembling with cold, and as he led her to the fire she burst into a flood of tears.

"I'm frightened," she said. "Some one followed me all the way. I heard them."

"You've no business to be out alone at night," said old Fairjohn, bluntly. "And what's the matter?"

She looked up at him piteously.

"I thought there would be a letter," said she. "I dreamt there was one. I thought Charlie came to me and said: Go to the office once more. I have written, I have written,' And I thought I saw a letter with a red seal."

"So did I," muttered old Fairjohn to himself.

He went to the box where the letters were kept, and brought them to her in his hand.

"Look for yourself," he said. "And now, Mrs. Lester, I'm an old man. Take my advice. Remember what your duty will be after tomorrow. Remember not to go crazy. Ten years have gone since your husband left this place. If he's alive he's a rascal, and you are free of him by law; but we all know that every man on board the Sphynx was drowned. So be a good wife to Job Roper and forget this folly. I'll take you home again this time. Don't come again."

"I seemed to know it had a red seal."

And as she spoke, old Fairjohn, glancing at the door, saw a dark shadow there; saw it grow darker, saw it enter, and, starting up on his defense, if need was, recognized Job Roper.

He was very pale, and he took no notice of Fairjohn, but, crossing the store, stood beside Jessie Lester.

"You love that man best, even now," he said. "You'd rather have found a letter from him than not, though tomorrow is our wedding day."

She looked up into his face with a piteous glance.

"I never lied to you, Job," said she. "You know that."

He grew whiter still.

"I told you a man would lose his soul for such love as mine," said he. "Did you think those were idle words?"

Then he plunged his hand into his bosom and the next instant a letter, with a red seal, lay in Jessie's lap.

"I've made you happy, and now I'll go," he said. "Fairjohn, I stole that letter a month ago off the counter yonder. I knew who wrote it at a glance," and then the door clanged behind him and he was gone.

But Jessie had torn open the letter and never looked after him.

And these were the words she read, old Fairjohn read over her shoulder:

"Aboard the Silver Star.

"Jessie, darling: I don't know what makes me believe that I shall find you mine still, after all these years; but something does.

"Five of us were cast on a desert island when the Sphynx went down. The two yet alive were taken off yesterday in skins with our beards to our knees. We must go to England first—then home. Jessie, Jessie, if I do not find you as I left you I shall go mad. Your husband.

"CHARLES LESTER."

And so Jessie's letter came at last. And as John Fairjohn looked into her face he saw how angels look in Paradise.

And Job. Job was found drowned in the Kill next morning. Jessie never knew it, perhaps, for she and her boy were on their way to New York to meet the Silver Star when it made port.

THE JOLLY AMEER.

Abdurramahn, of Afganistan, Most Original of Living Rulers.

The most interesting ruler in the world at present is, probably, Abdurrahman of Afghanistan.

A fine old crusted autocrat is Abdurrahman, capable of waking up his doctor to ask if it would hurt him to eat a peppermint lozenger, and also shutting up a thief in an iron cage to starve to death.

Once a beggar in Kabul asked alms of the Khan.

"Do you ever work for a living?" asked the ruler.

"Never, O Khan," the man replied; "I am a beggar."

"Then," said Abdurrhaman, "we can do without you,' and forthwith directed that the beggar should be hanged. He is, however, susceptible to flattery, and can sometimes be cajoled.

A man whom he had sentenced to have his ears cut off for some indiscretion happened to be a friend of his chief secretary, who averted the mutilation by offering to perform the task himself, provided it might be done in the Ameer's presence.

To this he assented, whereupon the secretary explained that he had never executed this form of punishment before, and would His Highness show him how much was to be removed.

The Ameer passed his hands over both ears of the trembling wretch, whereupon the secretary reminded him of a passage in the Koran saying that anything touched by the representative of the Almighty became sacred. So the ears were saved.

Afghanistan is anything but backward, as Asiatic countries go. There is a modern factory in Kabul run by steam and employing 3,500 workmen, which turns out daily 10,000 Martini-Henry cartridges and 10,000 Snider rifles; 50,000 coins; two field guns, varying from three pounders to twelve pounders; twelve maxims, eighteen Gardners, with carriages and full equimpment, per annum, as well as a large number of swords and mechanical vontrivances.

The Ameer takes great pride in the factory, and makes his khans and all his visitors go and see it. One day Umra Khan, who came from a distance, called on Sir Salters Pyne nd sid:

"How do you mke guns?"

"It is quite easy," replied Pyne. "You make a hole first, and then wrap some iron around it."

"Ah," he replied, sorrowfully, "there's lots of air for the hole in my country, only no one there knows how to wrap the iron around it."

Unusual Government Pensions.

The government is about to pay an unusual special pension claim to the widow of Lieutenant Michael Moore, who at the time of his death in Brooklyn last year, had served in the United States army continuously for 65 years thus holding the world's record for service of that character. He enlisted as a drummer boy at the outbreak of the war of 1812.

Likes His Nicknames.

Emperor William was recently told that three of his nicknames were "The Traveling Kaiser," "Alarm Fritz" and "Gondola Billy." "Well," he answered, "inasmuch as they all make me out a busy man, I rather like them."

UNCLE SAM—"NOW, THEN, ALTOGETHER, SING!"

GEN. GRANT'S GRANDSON.

Will Enter West Point to Train as a Soldier for Uncle Sam.

Through the appointment of President McKinley Ulysses S. Grant, son of Col. Fred Grant and grandson of the famous Union General and Chief Executive of the United States, will enter West Point. Before his death, in 1885, Gen. Grant framed a petition, directed to the President of the United States, asking for this favor, and later Gen. Sherman, as a matter of courtesy, indorsed it.

Young Ulysses, now in his sixteenth year, will not be of age to enter West Point until June, 1899. Before entering the famous institution he will devote a good deal of the intervening time to scientific study in Columbia College.

He is now a sturdy lad and measures 5 feet and 11 inches in height, with a quite certain prospect of reaching beyond six feet when he puts on the uniform of a West Point cadet. He is now two inches taller than his father and four inches taller than his famous grandfather. His other bodily measurements are in good proportion to his stature, and he gives every promise of developing a physique far above the ordinary. He has proven himself the possessor of more than usual mental abilities of a boy of his age, is very studious, stands high in his class in the New York school which he attends, and shows marked proficiency, particularly in acquiring languages. He manifested an early fondness for the military by joining the cadet corps of Troop A, National Guards, when but 12 years old.

ODDITIES OF A WEALTHY MAN.

Queer Things Which Marked the Life of George H. Hopper.

George H. Hopper, who died on his Elmwood estate, near Cleveland, Ohio, began life as a tinner, and made himself immensely rich through a contract for furnishing tin cans to the Standard Oil Company. About ten years ago Mr. Hopper purchased Elmwood farm, near Cleveland, and started in to lead the life of a gentleman farmer. Many amusing stories are told of him in this connection. He decided to turn it into a stock farm. The first thing he did was to purchase Bell Boy, a stallion, for $51,000. Six months later Bell Boy and the stables were burned. Mr. Hopper became disgusted with the idea of raising stock and gave it up.

He was seized with the idea at one time that it was the proper thing for a gentleman of elegant leisure to own a yacht. He had one built, and christened it Florence, in honor of his eldest daughter. When the yacht was completed it was found to be too big to enter the creek at the farm, and, there being no natural harbor at the place, it had to be kept at Ashtabula, twelve miles distant. Hopper hated the yacht from the day it was built. It was launched without ballast, and as it struck the water a big wave hit it, and it capsized and went to the bottom, with the crew on board. The yacht was raised, but Hopper never again put his foot upon it.

Hopper's whole career as a farmer was an amusing failure. He owned a beautiful orchard of peach trees, and a friend one day remarked that he would come down in the peach season and partake of some.

"Do," said Hopper, "do," grasping him by the hand warmly, "but let us know when you are coming, so we can get some peaches from Geneva."

Hoper was of a nervous, restless disposition, and had lived such a busy life that it was agony for him to be idle. Therefore he employed men to build a stone wall around his park, not that the wall was at all necessary, but that it gave him something to superintend.

Quakers' Hats.

There has been told in various works the persecution to which, in commonwealth times, George Fox, the founder of the Society of Friends, and his fellow Quakers were subjected because of their refusal to remove their hats in the presence of the civil magistrate; but the blame for this would seem to have lain upon the local justices rather than the central power. Cromwell perceived that it was easier for stupid or zealous magistrates to send Quakers to prison for this refusal than to get them out again, for Fox and his friends had almost to be implored to leave the jails into which they considered themselves to have been unjustly thrust.

It was this continual persecution of the Quakers, in the west of England particularly, that at length moved the council to emphatically interfere on their behalf. In November, 1657, a remonstrance, signed by five Friends, was presented to the council, specially complaining of the persecutions at Exeter; and Henry Lawrence, the president of the council, at once forwarded a letter to the justices of the peace, not only in Devon, but other counties, dealing with the matter.—Notes and Queries.

Lash for Thieves in Alaska.

Some weeks ago a Yukon outfit that had been packed from Dyea to Sheep Camp by a party on the way to the interior of the Klondike country was stolen. A "committee" of miners—such being the ominous term by which that sort of gathering is designated in the new country—tracked the thieves to the summit of Chilkoot Pass, where the lost property was recovered. Later the "committee" captured two men and brought them back to camp for trial. They gave the names of William Wellington and Edward Hanson.

Three of the "committee" favored lynching Wellington and Hanson, but they finally consented to a compromise on sixty lashes for each of the two captives.

This was accordingly undertaken. Wellington had been "formally" sentenced and was under an escort to the hut where he had been confined, when suddenly he slipped from the arms that held him and bounded away and killed himself.

When, through the intervention of a physician in the crowd, the whipping of Hanson was interrupted at the seventeenth of the sixty lashes he was sentenced to receive, he was given his clothes and a square meal, and then, with placards bearing the inscription, "Thief, pass him along," tied to his back and breast, was escorted by a committee of miners down the snow-covered road to Dyea.

Warned Gould of the Cost.

Paul Gore, now clerk at the Auditorium Annex, was room clerk at the Grand Pacific for several years. He tells a story in connection with Jay Gould's first visit to Chicago. Mr. Gould had registered at the Grand Pacific, and was standing in the lobby with his hands in his coat pockets, looking like a countryman in town.

The little millionaire approached J. P. Vidal, who was clerk at the house, and modestly asked him what would be the best way for him to go to Lincoln Park. Vidal, not knowing who Gould was, gave him the necessary instruction as to street cars, etc. Gould heard him through and then said: "But could I not go in a carriage?"

"Yes, you can; but it is a little expensive," said Vidal.

"Well, as this is my first visit, I think I will try to stand the expense."

"All right, but to whom shall I charge the carriage?" asked the clerk.

"To Jay Gould," came the quiet answer. Vidal almost fell to the floor, but Gould got the carriage.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Royal library, of course, is in the lead with more than 1,000,000, and growing at the rate of 20,000 per annum; the university now has 160,000 volumes; that of the statistical bureau 140,000; the War Academy has 90,000 volumes; that of the general staff 70,000; of the Court of Chambers 73,000; that of the Technical High School, 60,000. There are also a number of smaller ones.

REAL BROWNIES IN AMERICA.

Explorer Sullivan Finds a Tribe of Pigmies on Orinoco River.

Eben J. Sullivan, a South American explorer, claims to have discovered a race of living brownies near the head waters of the Orinoco River in the wilds of Surinam. In describing his find, Mr. Sullivan says:

"The queer child people are about four feet in height. Their skin from head to foot is a brilliant reddish brown, translucent in effect. Their legs are like pipestems, scarcely the size of a child's arm, while their arms are ridiculously small and thin, and their stomachs are big, out of all proportion to the body, and distended back as well as front.

Their faces are flat and flabby like those of Palmer Cox's brownies.

"I think they number 10,000 to 15,000. They are nomadic, moving over thousands of square miles. It was purely by accident that I came upon some of their roving bands. A traveler might have to search for months in the same region in order to find any of them. All those that I saw were in different parts of Surinam.

"In measuring these little folk I found none over four feet and eight inches, and the women were much shorter. They use the style of headdress so common among African tribes—that of shaping many designs by mixing mud with their hair; both men and women do this. Clothing in their village is worn only by adults, and then seldom more than a cloth over the loins. But they bedeck themselves with many brass and copper ornaments. They have tribal marks that sometimes cover the entire body and head. These are made by slits in the skin.

"They live in little houses called massougos, of mud or woven dried grass, entered by crawling on the hands and knees. I went into one and it seemed like a child's playhouse. There were queer little images, idols, fetich gods set up all about. They represented animals mostly and there were many ugly specimens of clay pottery. There were little fetich doctors in clay and many other things of the sort suggesting most depraved, superstitious ideas. They are, I believe, all pagans, though some of them seem to have an idea of a supreme spirit of power."

INSPIRED THE SIX HUNDRED.

Bugle that Sounded the Charge "Into the Jaws of Death."

Here is the bugle that sounded the "gallop" and the "charge" that sent heroes to death at Balaklava.

After the famous battle or sacrifice the regiment wanted to present to the trumpeter a silver duplicate of his trumpet, but he preferred the old one. On it was inscribed: "Presented by the Colonel of the Seventeenth Lancers to Trumpet Major Joy, on which the Balaklava charge was sounded, Oct. 25, 1854."

BUGLE AND NOTES.

Joy died in 1893, and now the famous bugle is to be sold at auction in London.

It's a Heroic Wooing.

The native states of Central India still abound with Khonds, and it is interesting to see that "wife capturing" is still in vogue among those who represent the first inhabitants of this land. The father in quest of wife to his son, or the young man himself, hunts a deer or some game and starts with a pot of toddy to the other party, and in the course of the day he manages to settle for a wife, and then there is feasting and drinking, in the course of which terms are settled.

The young man is to serve the girl's father for a fixed number of months, assist him in clearing the jungle and in cultivation, hunting game for food, and in gathering honey. After this period, on a certain day, the young man has to try to carry off his bride, and then follows a hunt after the man and a sound thrashing. If the man is able to withstand the blows and survive the ordeal then his prize is given to him, or if the man is able to escape uncaught to the precincts of his village custom forbids further pursuit, and the triumphant man has the prize.—Madras Times.

"Buck" Morrow was taken to the Logansport asylum yesterday afternoon He had became violent and abused his wife yesterday morning by choking and otherwise maltreating her. His derangement was caused by softening of the brain.

L. A. Hendry, of the Hotel Hendry, lost $82 in cash yesterday afternoon in a careless way. He was paid the money by John Castell at a table in the office room of the hotel, and laid the bills on the table to do some writing in his ledge. He then took the book and went to his warehouse, where he left it. He then went to the bank to deposit the money, but discovered he had left it on the table at the hotel. He hurried back, but the money had disappeared. There were two men in the office when Mr. Hendry went out, who are known to Mr. Hendry, but we are not permitted to divulge their names at present. There is no evidence, however, that either took the money, as others had been in and out about that time.

The first violators of the Indiana fish law in Steuben county, were prosecuted yesterday afternoon in 'Squire Kemery's court. The enders were A. I. Doudt and Ira Bowerman, and the complaining witnesses were the Misses Sylvia and Jennie German. The boys were spearing on Grass Lake and the girls caught them at it. The parties all live in Jackson township, this county, and it was evidenced during the trial that the "Golden Rule" had been observed in a very unharmonious way between the parties for some time. The boys were assessed $22.85 each. They paid the cash and went home wiser men. It is the first instance of the kind where young ladies brought violators to time. It is said there are more to follow.

General Debility and Loss of Flesh

Scott's Emulsion has been the standard remedy for nearly a quarter of a century. Physicians readily admit that they obtain results from it that they cannot get from any other flesh-forming food.

There are many other preparations on the market that pretend to do what does, but they fail to perform it. The pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil made into a delightful cream, skillfully blended with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, which are such valuable tonics, makes this preparation an ideal one and checks the wasting tendency, and the patient almost immediately commences to put on flesh and gain a strength which surprises them.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion. See that the man and fish are on the wrapper.

—P. V. Hoffman and family are now located in Auburn again. Mrs. Hoffman and family reached here several days ago, and Mr. Hoffman came yesterday. They have taken Mrs. Killian's house, the Grogg brick residence at the north end of Main-st. which will make them a cosy home and where our ladies can call and welcome Mrs. Hoffman. Mr. Hoffman has his law office in the room over Hebel's recently occupied by Dr. Sparling, where his clients will find him ready to do business at any time. He has been several years in successful practice at Chicago.

—St. Joe News:—We understand Geo. Bleeks is out as a candidate for sheriff, subject to the decision of the Democratic county convention. To a man up a tree it looks as though he should be the candidate this year if faithfulness to party counts for anything, and at the same time a man well tted for the place.

—St. Joe News: The supply of gravel at the Coburn pit has become exhausted and it is said the Trustee will buy a piece of ground out of the old Hoisington farm to be used for graveling the roads in this vicinity in the future. Those who have examined the quality of the gravel at the latter place think that it is the best yet discovered here for road purposes.

—Goshen Democrat:—Word was received by Elbel's Third Regiment, military band at South Bend Monday night that they would not be taken into the United States service as a musical organization, but that they would have to enter the service as privates. Under these circumstances the entire band will return in a body when their term of enlistment expires in June.

—The Governor has sent the company from Winamac home, because it had only 63 instead of 84 men, and also because its captain was drunk when he reported. The place of this company was then filled, by calling in the Cadets of Vincennes University. This is the company to which Hugh Harter belongs.

—At Linden, near Crawfordville, Ind., is stacked up 22,000 tons of cornstalks, the raw material for a cellulose factory which is now in course of erection there.

COURT NOTES.

Auburn can have court almost any day and at short notice. All day yesterday and part of this forenoon, the Hoffmeyer case from Fairfield was on trial. It will be remembered he had been up for some trespass trouble between himself and a neighbor. Then when it came into court, there was a judgment against him, and recently the sheriff seized his team and etc., and he soon after took the team to put in his oats. Then the sheriff put him in jail. Day before yesterday, Pomeroy for the state and Moody for Hoffmeyer, started the case before Squire Walter, and worked yesterdaday, finishing today. The charge against Hoffmeyer was "forcibly" preventing a legal process. It was shown there had been no show of force, and he was discharged.

This afternoon the case against a man named Thomas of South Bend comes up before Judge Roby sitting "in chambers" as it is called. Thomas is accused of a crooked sale of real estate at Garrett, and was put in jail. Moody, his attorney, brings him into court on a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge Chapin and the younger Ninde are here taking depositions in in the case of Long vs McIntyre, about that buggy seat patent.

The damage suit against Dr. Keller of Ft. Wayne has been decided against him in the supreme court. It will be remembered that a man in his employ was injured by some part of the machinery and sued for damages. It was in court here several times and went against the Doctor. It was called up again on some point as to whether Mrs. Keller should have judgment against her jointly with her husband. Judge Adair decided that she could be let out of the case, but that the doctor should be held. Then it was appealed and now the supreme court says that Judge Adair was right. So the Doctor will have to pay, if he is worth it, but many are of the opinion that he is not and that he has deeded his property to his wife.

Maccabees Proctected In War

To the Officers and Members of the Supreme Tent of the Knights of the Maccabees of the World:

Greeting:—The people of the United States are today facing a situation more serious than any that has existed since the days of the Civil War. Nothing like it has been known to them since the organization of our Order, which was established to "protect the widow and care for the orphan,' as well as to care for its members when they become totally and permanently disabled.

It is apparent to all that "the dogs of war have been unleashed" and already the thrilling sound of marshal music and the tread of brave men as they respond to the patriotic impulses awakened in the cause of humanity are heard throughout the land.

It is not only the duty, but it will be a pleasure for every citizen of the United States capable of bearing arms to respond to his country's call.

One of the objects of our Order is to promote good citizenship, and in its beautiful ritualism the lesson of patriotism is fittingly emphasized. Every member not only pledges himself to yield up his life should his country or its institutions demand such a sacrifice, but that he will be as true and loyal to his country as was Judas Maccabeus to his country.

Desiring to encourage all our members to be true to their obligations, and to be true to each other and to those who are dependent upon them, and believing that the good of the Order requires it, I do by virtue of the authority in me vested by the Laws of the Order, and in the name of humanity, fraternity and true brotherly love, grant this dispensation permitting any and all members of the Order to engage in the military or naval service of the United States during the impending war with Spain, guaranteeing unto them and their beneficiaries the full and unqualifed protection of the Order, as though they had not so engaged, anything in the Laws of the Order to the contrary notwithstanding.

Given under my hand and the seal of the Supreme Tent, this 21st day of April, A. D. 1898

—Frank Baxter is now employed part of the time at the Princess store. He puts in the time mornings and evenings, out of school hours, and on Saturdays.

—Mrs. Geo. Clark received a postal from him to-day, and Phil. Noel has a letter from his son. But there is nothing new in either, more than we already have.

—The slowness with which the Spanish fleet moves, says the Chicago Record, looks as if they considered this thing a race between them and Christmas to see which would reach the United States first.

—Frank Hoff resents the imputation that he is disloyal, and very properly. One of the very first men to show the national colors was Mr. Hoff, and it will be remembered that the papers spoke of his decorations at the time.

—A niece of James Griswold who lives at Cleveland, Ohio, writes him, that Mr. Griswold's brother there, his youngest brother, now 74, has just been elected again, as justice of the peace in that city. It appears that he has held the place several times, and given good satisfaction. But we venture to say that few men get elected to a local office at that age.

—The preliminary hearing of Bay VanAuken is going on before Squire Walborn this afternoon. It is to determine whether there is evidence against him, enough to hold him in custody till court meets. One witness, Dan Lung of the Junction has testified. He said that Bay was at his place Saturday and Sunday. On Sunday he bought a lunch, and got Lung to change a $10 bill and he had another bill. Dr Hines is testifying as we close.

—Miss Maude Trover returned to Monroeville today. She is teaching classes in vocal music at that place. She has been receiving valuable training by the best teachers in Chicago, and has been highly complimented by them on her musical gifts and her ability as a teacher. We believe an effort will be made by some of our young musically inclined people to have her come here once a week to teach a class. No doubt plenty of promising pupils would be glad of this opportunity.

INTERESTING RELIC

David Link, of Waterloo, was here today, and like all the COURIER patrons never forgets the editor. And while talking, he produced an old medal which he had picked up in his orchard a year ago last fall. It is a brass campaign medal, is round and about the size of a two-cent copper coin. On one side around near the edge it reads "Stephen A. Douglas." On the other is "Herschell V. Johnson." These were the names of the democratic candidates for president and vice-president in 1860. He thinks it had belonged to his brother, George Link, who later went into the army and was so badly wounded at the second day' fight at Stone River, that he died later on. The medal was 36 years old when he found it, and the two pictures of the men, one on each side, at present are rusted or melted away, leaving only the thin metal that had been between them. Mr. Link prizes it very highly. It will be remembered by our older citizen, that the presidential campaign of 1860 was a very interesting and exciting one. There were four tickets. Douglas and Johnson for the northern democrats; Breckenridge and Lane for the southern democrats; Lincoln and Hamlin for the republicans, who were chiefly in the northern states, and Bell and Everett who were the "Union" candidates.

Save The Children.

When children are attacked with cough, cold and croup, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will prove a quick and sure cure. Mr. Elmer E. Baker, Blandon, Pa., writes: "We have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for cough, cold and croup, and found it the best cough medicine and cure for these affections. We never run out of it, but always keep it on hand." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents. Insist on having it.

LETTER FROM CAMP

The Courier Special Correspondent tells of Life With Company K.

CAMP MOUNT, IND., May 4, 1898.

To the Daily Courier,—

It is a dreary, rainy day, and the companies are excused from drill, except "foot movements" and "manual of arms," which can be executed in the quarters. Quite a busy scene is presented,—some are writing letters to their wives mothers, sweethearts and friends, while others are reading, enjoying a social game of cards, shaving, cleaning guns, etc All of the boys seem to enjoy camp life very much. There are so many features of entertainment presented by different members of the company that no dreary hours enter. Every evening the "Star Quartet," "the only" quartet in the regiment render some sweet songs, which tend to remind us of the pleasantries of home; the reunion of families, sweethearts and friends. We are gradually tempering ourselves to rougher and less home-like life—for we all realize that real active service will yet be experienced. The jolly man of the crowd is "Luetgert," (Hank West) who takes special delight in foraging material for his "Sausage Mill," and always has a fish story on hand—three cheers for Hank!

Company receives no small share of compliments from visitors for her clean quarters and good drilling. The medical corps commenced examining the companies this morning, and you might imagine the suspense the boys are in waiting for their turn and the result of the examination. The company is in full sympathy with the boys whose parents compelled them to return home and could not sacrifice parental responsibility—but not with those who came down "just to have a good time." The company is proud of their officers, as they have held their commissions with dignity and have proven by their untiring energy in performing their duty, worthy of their various places. While there is a universal disposition prevailing in the company to volunteer, only as a company with her present officers, yet there is a sentiment on the part of some to volunteer under any condition; and while the officers fully appreciate this display of loyalty, yet they advise them if they should not pass the examination, to compromise the matter by their volunteering under the banner of Co. K., and to accept such offices as might be needed. The Auburn people will feel proud of the independent stand taken by the officers and privates, and their resignation to their fate will tend to create a higher respect and sympathy. We hope that no one of Co. K will have to be refused from volunteering, either honorably or otherwise.

Wesly Lahnum left this morning for Auburn, having been honorbly discharged by the General, Colonel, Major and other officers. The boys regreted much to see Wes. go as he was always attentive to duty and made a good soldier.

Ex-President Harrison visited the camp grounds yesterday afternoon, and delivered an eloquent address in the presentation of a beautiful flag given by the Daughters of the Revolution of Indianapolis to Battery "A" Light Artilery of Indianapolis.

Mrs. Capt. Lahnum, Mrs. Frank Johiff and Mrs. Chas. Picker, who have been visiting their husbands since Sunday, returned home this morning.

The company made a fine hit last Sunday by employing Joe Williamson as cook. Joe has had quite a great deal of experience in this line, and will commence his duties whenever he returns from Auburn, where he is making the proper preparations.

We are called up every morning at 5 o'clock and have roll call at 5:30; breakfast at 6; company drill at 7:10; batallion drill at 9:30; dinner at 12; batallion and regimental drill from 2:30 to 4:30; supper at 6:20; dress parade from 7:30 to 8 and roll call at 9 p. m.

There have been several vacancies and resignations made in the 3d Regiment this week. Rev. Milbery, of Angola, arrived here last evening and accepted the Chaplaincy of the 3d Regiment, made vacant by the resignation of Rev. Goss, of Elkhart.

Lieutenant Quarter Master Melendy, of Fremont, went to the retired list this week and Quarter Master Hutton, of Angola, was commissioned to fill the vacancy.

Commissary Sergeant Lobmiller, of Auburn, will be promoted to Quarter Master Sergeant as soon as Lieutenant Quarter Master Hutton can arrange his accounts. Mr. Lobmiller deserves the promotion, and will do credit to his place as he has in his past commissions. DeKalb county will receive her share in these promotions.

The company was gladdened this morning on the receipt of a letter from Dr. Nusbaum stating that active steps had been taken to raise money and to form a committee to see after the families of the men who had volunteered from Auburn. The boys who had left someone dependent have been feeling quite anxious about them, but since these demonstrations have occurred, are greatly relieved, and will highly appreciate any deed of kindness shown by the citizens.

The boys are all well excepting a few who have had slight attacks of "billiousness."

Company K extends thanks for the COURIER and wishes her great success.

Yours respectfully,
PRIVATE.

FROM CAMP MOUNT.

(Goshen Times.)

The reports of the number of men in camp which were turned in at the office of Assistant Adjutant General Frank last evening showed the following:

First Regiment, 956.
Second Regiment, 859.
Third Regiment, 873
Fourth Regiment, 888.
Artillery Regiment, 443.
Brigade Staff, 54.
Total, 4,073

The total of Monday's reports was 4,488 and the difference between the two totals is 415, showing that number of men left the camp between Monday and Tuesday morning.

It is the condition of affairs at the camp shown by the above figures that is keeping the officers on the anxious seat and adds daily to their impatience at the delay of the mustering officer in beginning his work, which, the officers say is the only cure for the evil which hourly presses harder on the brigade, for so long as it remains as it is, a body of volunteer troops, there is nothing to prevent the boys from leaving camp when the inclination comes to them.

GARRETT'S GROWTH & BUSINESS STAFF.

I have lived here seventeen years this May,
And gracious! What a change,
Some people who had moved away
Came back and thought it looked strange,

Our houses are numbered, our streets are named
We have water works and electric lights
We've hit it now for what we have aimed
For we never miss our sights.

Our population is about four thousand fifty,
And we have two good policemen
Our citizens are very thrifty
And of course they need protection.

If you want a nice clean shave
Go to Stoner's, McFennan's or Frank Knave,
Or if you want some nice fresh meat
Go to Clark Eros, or G. L. Fox on Randolph-st.

If you want some nice white bread
Be sure and get your flour of old Fred.
If you want a nice strong whisky
Go to Nick's he's always frisky.

OTIS ARMSTRONG.

PATRIOTIC MEETING.

To the citizens of Auburn and vicinity.

At this time when every true American citizen feel that his love of country should prompt him to do every thing in his power to aid the Cuban patriots in their fight for human liberty and from Spanish oppression we as citizens of Auburn should not only by words but by acts and deeds, demonstrate to our brave and loyal boys of Co. K. that while we cannot all go to the front and bare our breasts to the storm of battle, yet we can support the wives and children of those who are compelled to go and I suggest that a meeting be called in the court room, Thursday evening at 7 p. m. to take such action as becomes us as loyal American citizens.

DR W. H. NUSBAUM.

JUNCTION FOUNDRY.

A

What does A stand for? When some friend suggests that your blood needs A sarsaparilla treatment, remember that A stands for AYER'S. The first letter in the alphabet stands for the first of sarsaparillas; first in origin, first in record, first in the favor of the family. For nearly half a century has been curing all forms of blood diseases—scrofula, eczema, tetter, rheumatism, erysipelas, blood poisoning, etc. There's a book about these cures—"Ayer's Curebook, a story of cures told by the cured,"—which is sent free on request, by Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass. The book will interest you if you are sick or weak, because it tells not what it is claimed the remedy will do, but what your neighbors and fellows testify that it has done. Will it cure you? It has cured thousands like you. Why not you?

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Thursday's Daily.

From many important towns in Spain come news that the people are turbulent and in many places there have been serious riots and much damage. The people seem to blame the ministry for the disasters that have befallen the Spanish cause so far.

It appears that the report had Commodore Dewey's report had reached Hong Kong, has no foundation in fact. Newspapers are so hungry to get something to say about the war that they send out all sorts of reports. It may be a day or two yet before we hear from him.

People are needlessly alarmed, at the fact so many of our warships have gone away from Havana. There is still a strong force of smaller cruisers, left, a plenty to keep up the blockade

It is reported from good sources that provisions are very scarce in Havana. Our ships prevent anything being carried to them by sea, and the insurgent Cubans see to it, that nothing reaches them from land.

There is a serious fear, that civil war may break out in Spain at any hour.

The fact that our best warships have sailed from before Havnana, and from Key West as well as from Hampton Roads, makes it look as it we had heard that the Spanish fleet is coming across the sea and we were going out meet them. Something is likely to happen soon.

Horses, mules, and other material are being purchased to send Cuba, as well as clothing suitable for the native soldiers in the Cuban army.

It is rumored that the Queen of Spain will resign, her 15 year old son for whom she is regent may come at once to the throne, and so possibly prevent a revolution. It is doubtful, however, if such a course would help Spain.

And now, there is some fear that Dewey has met with misfortune of some kind, as he is not heard from.

The Oregon is now safe probably, as she was joined by another warship on the coast of South America.

Naval officers advise that we move at once on Cuba and take Havana before the Spanish fleet comes. This is a sensible view. We ought to move at once.

Ships have been chartered to take supplies to Dewey.

There is a rumor that Spain would give up Cuba if we do not ask them to pay a war indemnity.

Troops have fired on the rioters at several Spanish cities.

Friday's Daily.

The talk of the resignation of the Queen of Spain still continues and many believe she will leave the Kingdom as she may be in danger if she stays.

It is now the belief that the Spanish fleet that is coming across the ocean is heading for Porto Rico, and that is why our fleet before Havana has gone in that direction.

It is believed our Havana fleet will reach Porto Rico today. If the Spanish fleet that left Cape Verde last Friday, comes to Porto Rico, there will be a battle. Our fleet is stronger than theirs, it is believed. If we whip them, we will take temporary possession of that island

We are now sending supplies to the Cuban insurgents.

Believed by some, that the Spanish cruisers lack coal and other supplies, as the cause for their slow movements.

Congress will pass a measure, providing for supplies for the Cuban insurgents.

The wealthier Cubans are escaping from Cuba, but mostly go to Boston and New York.

The newly elected "autommist" congress met in Havana Wednesday, and was opened in due form. But its life, will probably be brief. No one but Spain favors it.

Gen. Lee, late consul-general at Havana, and Congressman Joe Wheeler of Alabama, both ex-rebel generals, are to be made Major-generals.

A British cruiser has gone to Havana to take off British subjects there.

Regulars are being moved to the seacoast now, evidently getting in shape to cross to Cuba.

Private advices from Singapore say that Dewey, has possession of the Phillippines and is acting as govenor. But this is not yet certain.

Saturday's Daily.

As the time approaches when people expect to hear news from Dewey at the Phillippine Islands, all sorts of wild rumors are afloat. Telegrams fly over the state stating this or that to have happened when in reality nothing is known to a certainty. And yet it is so easy to guess as to what has happened that many of these bogus dispatches are reasonable.

For example, this forenoon a rumor swept over town that Dewey had been heard from direct. As this may happen at any hour, people became excited. It was said he had sunk eleven Spanish ships and had captured the town of Manila. All this is likely to come true. So we can almost begin to believe it in advance.

Our ships from Havana are on the coast of Porto Rico by this time and no doubt there will be business there soon.

We have captured a French Merchantman trying to go into Havana with supplies. She was soon after released, for although she had sailed from Spain after the President's proclamation and therefore knew what risks she would run, she still wanted the profits on the big cargo worth half a million. But rather than get into trouble with France, we have released her. The French people are very indignant.

Provisions and other supplies are being sent from San Francisco to Commodore Dewey at Manila.

Our government has protested against Portugal which allowed a steamer to take war supplies to the Spanish squadron.

It is not certain that the Spanish queen will abdicate. It looks more as if she would stay.

A QUEER RELIC.

(Kendallville Daily Sun.)

O. B. Baily, a merchant of Wanatah, owns a petrified foot, presumably of an historic giant. It is sixteen inches long, and it is supposed to have belonged to a man fully sixteen feet high. The foot was clad in a shoe fashioned somewhat after the modern shoe, but the uppers are as low as those of a modern slipper, if not lower. The outlines and seams of the shoe are plainly visible. One seam extends around the foot below the ankle joints and there is evidence of a patch on one side of the shoe. The sole and half sole are shown, as well as a low heel, like the heel of a modern shoe. The foot has excited the a great amount of interest among the people of Wanatah and every visitor to the town of late, has gone to see the curiosity. The owner has been offered sixty dollars for his relic, but would not accept that amount.

NAVAL BATTLE

Of the Century Soon to Occur at Porto Rico.

The Spanish and American Squadrons Are Nearing Each Other.

Seventeen Spanish Ships Off Porto Rico and Sampson Not Far Off.

An American Cruiser Chased By a Spanish Battle-Ship.

Will Soon Come Together.

A special from Port Au Prince, Hayti, says: A French steamer, the Olinde Roddrigues, from Havre, bound for Haytien ports, reports that a Spanish warship is said to have been watching for her, mistaking the steamer for an American vessel. When the Olinde Roddigues left Cape Haytien, a Spanish warship approached her, but allowed her to continue to this port. The United States cruiser Montgomery left Cape Haytien soon afterward and the Spaniard, which is supposed to have been watching for her, is said to have pursued an American cruiser, both putting on full steam.

The Spaniard gained in the pursuit, which was witnessed from the bridge of the Olinda Roddrigues by the officers of that vessel. The two warships went in the same direction, with the Spaniard behind. The latter appeared to be a formidable vessel, much larger and faster than the Montgomery.

Seventeen Spanish vessels, warships and others arrived late Sunday evening at Porto Rico. It is reported from Cape Haytien that Rear Admiral Sampson's squad on has been sighted to the north. The vessel which pursued the cruiser Montgomery is supposed to have been the Spanish warship Vizcaya, and it is suggested that possibly the Montgomery enticed the Spaniard within striking distance of Admiral Sampson. The crew of the German ship Bolivia, Captain Braun, which arrived Monday, say they heard cannonading to the northward.

St. Louis special: Rev. Father Thomas Sherman, son of the late Gen. William T. Sherman, will be appointed a chaplain in the Fourth Regiment of the Missouri Guards. Father Sherman said that he did not care to discuss the present war; whether it would change the map of Europe, whether it was a war of acquisition, or whether the Republic was in danger. He was asked by Col. Corley of the Fourth to accept the position of chaplain and readily consented. The majority of the Fourth are Protestants, but he said that this mattered not.

Spanish Plot Against the Life of California's Executive Discovered.

A conspiracy against the life of Governor Budd of California, is said to have been unearthed by an employe of the Southern Pacific Railroad. MANILA AT HIS MERCY.

Yankee Commander So Notifies Navy Department.

NOW REAR ADMIRAL DEWEY.

President McKinley Thanks the Daring Hero and Promotes Him.

DID NOT LOSE A SINGLE MAN.

Spanish Fleet Destroyed Without Loss to the United States.

Having Disposed Of the Enemy's Battleships, the Successful Naval Commander Turns His Attention to the Forts at Cavite, Which He Demolishes with His Guns—Spaniards Suffer a Loss of at Least One Hundred and Fifty Men—Only a Few of the American Tars Injured—5,000 Troops Sent from San Francisco.

Notwithstanding the fact that everybody for several days had been in momentary expectation of cable advices from Commodore Dewey, Washington was thrown into the wildest excitement early Saturday morning by the receipt of news announcing the arrival of the McCulloch at Hong-Kong with dispatches for the government from Commodore Dewey. The publication of newspaper dispatches telling of terrible mortality among the Spanish and the escape of the American forces, men and ships, from serious injury added to the excitement and to the intense satisfaction with which the long-expected news was received.

The State Department had the honor of receiving the first news. It came in the shape of a cablegram of three words from United States Consul Wildman at Hong-Kong, and was as follows:

"Hong-Kong. McCulloch. Wildman."

That is the usual form in which naval movements are reported by cable. The naval officials were promptly notified and awaited with intense interest the dispatch which soon came from Commodore Dewey.

In brief, Commodore Dewey states that he silenced the batteries at Manila completely, that he cut the cable himself, and that he has the bay and everything else completely at his mercy. He has, however, been unable to take possession of the town of Manila for lack of men. Dewey's report further says that he destroyed eleven ships, that none of his men was killed, and few injured, and that the American fleet was not injured at all.

Dewey's Dispatches.

Secretary Long gave out the following to the newspaper correspondents as Dewey's dispatch:

Manila, May 1.—The squadron arrived at Manila at daybreak this morning. Immediately engaged the enemy and destroyed the following Spanish war vessels: Reina Christina, Castilla, Ulloa, Isle de Cuba, General Lezo, the Duero, Correo, Velasco, Mindanao, one transport and the water battery at Cavite. The squadron is uninjured and only a few men were slightly wounded. The only means of telegraphing is to the American consul at Hong-Kong. I shall communicate with him. DEWEY.

Cavite, May 4.—I have taken possession of the naval station at Cavite on the Philippine Islands. Have destroyed the fortifications at the bay entrance, paroling the garrison. I control the bay completely and can take the city at any time. The squadron is in excellent health and spirits. Spanish loss is not fully known, but is very heavy; 150 were killed, including the captain of the Reina Christina. I am assisting in protecting Spanish sick and wounded. Two hundred and fifty sick and wounded are in hospital within our lines. Much excitement at Manila. Will protect foreign residents. DEWEY.

Thanks of a Nation.

By direction of the President Secretary Long, on receipt of Dewey's report of his achievement, sent the following cable dispatch to the gallant Commodore:

"Dewey, Manila: The President, in the name of the American people, thanks you and your officers and men for your splendid achievement and overwhelming victory. In recognition he has appointed you acting admiral, and will recommend a vote of thanks to you by Congress. "LONG."

Fear Water Was Poisoned.

It is reported from the camp at Tampa that an attempt was made to poison the water in the well from which the soldiers draw their supply. A number of the troops who drank the water were taken sick, and it is the general belief that the water was poisoned by a Spanish spy.

Hawaii Is to Wait.

It is understood the Hawaiian minister has been advised that this country won't change its policy toward the Hawaiian islands pending congressional action on annexation.

Supplies Ordered for Dewey.

The Secretary of the Navy has ordered Naval Constructor William L. Capps, now at the Union iron works, San Francisco, to proceed at the earliest moment on the steamer City of Pekin, chartered by the Navy Department, to meet Dewey's squadron at Manila. The purpose of the department in making this order is to put Commodore Dewey's fleet at the earliest possible moment into first-class condition.

Secretary of War Alger has made changes in the form of enlisting volunteers calculated to preserve the integrity of State military organizations.

ADMIRAL DEWEY, THE HERO OF MANILA.

LITTLE FEAR OF FEVER.

Danger from "Yellow Jack" Has Been Greatly Exaggerated.

The prospect of sending American troops to Cuba during the yellow fever season gives special interest and importance to a report by Dr. H. W. Brunner, United States marine hospital inspector at Havana, who left that city with Gen. Fitzhugh Lee a short time ago. From reading this report and from other sources it is evident that the danger from yellow fever has been much exaggerated. At the same time it appears that the popular talk of immunity is based to a large extent on no tangible evidence. The best information available seems to show that there is no such thing as becoming acclimated to the disease. New arrivals in an infected district suffer more than residents. On the other hand, with proper care and nursing, there is really little more danger from yellow fever than there is from measles, and it is regarded with little more dread in countries where it is epidemic than is the latter disease. Of course, if people disregard the laws of health, expose themselves to the night air, get their clothes soaked through without changing them and sleep in swamps, they must expect to suffer for it, whether they do these things in Illinois or Arkansas or Cuba. Cuba is not naturally an unhealthy country, and has been made so in certain sections only by the acts of man.

TO OCCUPY THE PHILIPPINES.

Troops to Be Sent There to Hold What Has Been Taken.

Washington special:

The administration has decided to occupy the Philippines with a strong military force as soon as possible. For this purpose, Pacific slope troops will be used, and it is expected that at least 5,000 will be en route within the next ten days. There does not seem to be any doubt as to the government's purpose to hold these islands pending a final settlement with Spain, when they will be used as a collateral to secure the payment to the United States of a war indemnity. High officials are of the opinion that none of the powers will seriously dispute our right to make such final disposition. In any event, this government will be prepared to contest any point which may be raised on this score.

Commodore Dewey's great victory has thrown a burden on the United States. What shall be done with the Philippines ultimately? If the United States holds the islands this government at once becomes a factor in all the controversies of the Orient. Many prominent public men are adverse to this if it can be avoided. They believe the United States should confine its possessions to this hemisphere, and that even the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands is a matter of questionable policy. Retention of the Philippines, they say, means that the United States is to become a world power, and is to have a voice in the affairs of not only this continent but of the world at large. A military force would have to be maintained in the islands. The fortifications of Manila demolished by Commodore Dewey's guns would have to be rebuilt and strengthened, and the Pacific fleet of the United States increased.

Should the islands be transferred to any other power fresh complications would arise. They could not be given to Japan without incurring the disfavor of Russia at least, and probably other European powers. They could not be transferred to Great Britain or any European power without bringing about complications of the gravest character, and, perhaps, engendering a general European war.

Advice from London.

The London Spectator urges America to raise a colored army of 20,000 men and hold the Philippine Islands, Hawaii and Porto Rico.

NEWSPAPER MAN SHOT.

Spaniards Said to Have Killed Chicago Tribune Correspondent.

Advices received in Chicago say that H. J. Whigham, correspondent of the Tribune, has been captured and shot by Spaniards in Cuba. Mr. Whigham, it is believed, was with Maj. Smith's party which started out to make a visit to Gomez's camp. There were a number of other newspaper correspondents in the little detail which took such great chances in order that the insurgent leader might be made acquainted with the latest phases of the war situation and that the public might be supplied with news as to his plans and movements. It is almost certain that the Spanish would have treated the entire corps as spies and have visited death upon every member of it. The death of Smith, who belonged to the Gomez bodyguard, is announced as a fact, and not a rumor. That his companions succeeded in getting away unscathed is deemed exceedingly unlikely and not in accord with the Castilian's idea of war.

Head Back Toward Spain.

Port Said advices say that the Spanish steamer Leo XIII., with troops for Manila, has sailed for Barcelona.

Smallpox in Camp.

There was a wholesale vaccination at the camp of the regulars at Mobile. All submitted to the Jenner operation, from Gen. Coppinger down. This precaution was taken because of one case of smallpox developing among the Montgomery troops at the volunteer encampment.

The Spanish Government is advised to arm all the available shipping and attack American merchantmen. This means privateering, which Spain has reserved for her last resource in this war.

SEIZED AND FREED.

FRENCH STEAMER LAFAYETTE HALTED NEAR HAVANA.

Big Liner Taken to Key West, Where Release Quickly Follows When It Is Learned She Had Special Permission to Land in Cuba.

Causes a Sensation.

Washington special:

Failure of the commanding officers in the blockading squadron off Havana to receive orders sent out by the Navy Department several days previous resulted in the seizure on Thursday evening of the French steamer Lafayette. The ship was halted near Havana by the gunboat Annapolis and after being warned not to enter that port was allowed to proceed. She sailed directly toward Havana, however, and she was again stopped and escorted to Key West by the Wilmington. It was then learned that special permission to enter Havana had been granted her at the request of the French government, but the blockading officials had not been notified of the fact. She was thereupon released and left for Havana immediately.

The steamer sailed from Nazaire and was filled to the hatches with medicines, provisions, wines and cotton goods consigned to merchants in Havana and Vera Cruz, Mexico. It is estimated that the value of the ship's cargo was nearly $500,000. Her tonnage is 4,000 tons. She touched at Corunna, Spain, April 23, two days after the President issued the blockade proclamation, although Capt. Lechapelane declared he was not notified.

The Lafayette was held up almost under the guns of Morro. The Annapolis hailed her in the harbor offing and receiving no answer but a show of the French tricolor plumped a six-pounder across her bows and brought her up standing. Of the 161 cabin passengers on the steamer eighty were women and children. They locked themselves in the staterooms when the warning shot was fired and the Annapolis and Wilmington approached and gave themselves up to prayers and tears. Most of the passengers were Spaniards or Cubans, and there were a few Mexicans. Nearly all were bound for Havana.

PORTO RICO IN STATE OF PANIC.

Famine Has Made the People Angry and Unruly.

A dispatch from Porto Rico says the island is in a panic. Riots have been going on and famine is making the natives wild. The cable from Madrid gave San Juan de Porto Rico news of the battle of Manila. The quality of the Spanish report may be judged from the fact that Porto Rico named a day of "public thanksgiving for Admiral Montejo's glorious victory in the Philippines." A subscription raised $100,000 for the Spanish war fund.

Flags Increasing in Price.

The War Department is unable to get flags enough for its use. There are only two factories in the country, and although they are working day and night, and with largely augmented forces of men, they are getting behind in their orders. As the result of the demand prices have gone up. It is calculated that since the blowing up of the Maine, with the consequent outburst of popular feeling, at least 10,000,000 flags have been sold.

BIG DEMAND FOR FOOD.

Uncle Sam Orders 2,000,000 Rations Sent from Chicago to Chattanooga.

Uncle Sam on Friday ordered 2,000,000 rations sent at once to Chattanooga from Chicago. This amounted to about four train loads of bacon, hard bread, sugar, coffee, beans, salt, pepper and vinegar, which are the component parts of the soldier's bill of fare. The item of bacon alone amounted to twenty-seven carloads, 900,000 pounds. Each of the items of principal food in the list of a ration's constituents was shipped in quantities represented by six figures and the total weight of the whole 2,000,000 rations is 1,500,000 pounds net. Last week there was shipped 1,500,000 pounds of bacon, the packing houses at the Chicago stockyards running night and day to keep up with the demand. The whole amount of bacon required by this big order was the death of 9,000 hogs.

IN A U. S. COMMISSARY WAREHOUSE.

An army ration is prescribed by the regulations, and consists of a certain quantity of the articles named. In reducing the order for rations Maj. Smith, in charge of the quartermaster's department in Chicago, gives the following list and the prices being paid:

900,000 pounds bacon	$63,000
675,000 pounds flour	21,937
600,000 pounds hard bread	28,500
120,000 pounds coffee	12,000
180,000 pounds beans	4,194
180,000 pounds sugar	9,450
12,000 gallons vinegar	1,080
48,100 pounds salt	240
3,000 pounds pepper	480
24,000 pounds baking powder	7,200
48,000 pounds soap	1,560
18,000 pounds candles	1,800
360,000 pounds tomatoes (canned)	10,200

CUBAN WAR NEWS IS EXPENSIVE.

Collected by Newspaper Dispatch Boats and Cabled from Key West.

People who read Cuban war news have little idea of what it is costing to collect that news. All of the news that comes from the blockading ships is sent in dispatch boats chartered by newspapers or press associations. Key West is the nearest cable office. When the correspondents on a dispatch boat get a piece of news it is a 12 to 14 hours' run from the fleet to Key West and return. One New York paper has three dispatch boats, with a crew of about twenty men on each. As no tips are given from the blockading ships, it is largely a matter of luck for a dispatch boat to be on the spot when anything of importance occurs. Only one dispatch boat was fortunate enough to be at the bombardment of Matanzas. It brought in a report of less than 1,000 words. The dispatch had cost about 50 cents a word when it reached the office of publication. The cable tolls for press dispatches from Key West are 5 cents a word. As high as 6,000 words have been sent in one day to a single newspaper. Perhaps not more than one-half of the dispatch was printed. There are several daily papers whose cable tolls at Key West have averaged over $1,500 a week since the Maine disaster.

The naval prize court began its sittings at Key West Wednesday. Proceedings are secret.

RIOTERS SHOT DOWN.

SPANISH MOBS ASK BREAD, AND GET BULLETS.

Violent Demonstrations Are Reported Throughout Spain—Restaurants, Shops, and the Homes of Merchants Stoned by Hungry Crowds.

Many Killed or Wounded.

Dispatches indicate that the crisis in Spain has become intensified. The queen regent is rapidly losing the little popularity she has, and is now insolently referred to as "that Austrian woman." It is believed she would quit Spain at once should she believe that such a step would promote the interests of the infant king. Meanwhile the trouble in the provinces increases and the rioting may become a revolution. Thus far a number of persons have been killed and wounded and several buildings wrecked. In the financial world all is chaos. Runs on banks everywhere prevail, and the funds withdrawn are being hoarded. The speech of Lord Salisbury in London enraged the Spaniards. They discern that with England in sympathy with America the other European powers will hesitate to act for Spain.

The outlook in Madrid grows darker every hour that passes. Reports of riot pour in from the provinces, and in most cases there has been bloodshed. A serious disturbance occurred at Caceres, and a still more violent demonstration took place at Leon, where large crowds of women and children paraded the streets crying, "Give us bread or work." These paraders were joined by large numbers of men, and the disorder became greater. The mob stoned the restaurants, provision shops, and the houses of merchants, breaking doors and windows and seizing everything they could lay hands on. The civil guard called upon the crowd to disperse, but the demand was refused, whereupon the troops fired a volley into the mob. A mob of 10,000 persons rioted at Helquist and plundered houses on all sides. The police fired into the crowd. Eight thousand miners, who are on strike at Murcia, paraded the streets shouting "Death to the thieves," "Down with the octroi dues." The mob tried to set fire to the railway station and a number of other buildings, but was not successful. The mob then marched on Cartagena, but was intercepted by troops, who fired upon and wounded several of the rioters.

All these disturbances are due to economic causes, to the great dearth of wheat and the consequent advance in the price of bread, and the closing of factories and workshops, owing to the complete paralyzation of trade and the prohibitive prices of coal and raw materials. The government is adopting drastic measures to keep food in the country. A bill passed the cortes, to come into immediate operation, totally prohibiting export of wheat, flour and potatoes.

ARMY DEFICIENCY BILL.

Big War Measure Hurriedly Passed by Both Houses of Congress.

Both houses of Congress Monday passed the $36,000,000 deficiency appropriation war bill which contains several items of interest. It appropriates $350,000 for torpedo work and $150,034 for the expenses of the Cuban expeditionary force. The latter item is particularly significant just at this time. With it was a foot note from Maj. Gen. Miles urging that the fund was required with the least possible delay, explaining that the $50,000,000 appropriation for national defense has been allotted and there is no money available for this particular object.

The Cuban expedition paragraph includes $42,000 for "unforeseen contingent expenses which involve immediate expenditure for purposes of imperative urgency;" $33,500 for portable electric outfit, and $12,095 for intrenching tools. The largest item under any head is $10,000,000 for clothing, camp and garrison equipage. The other big items were published with estimates.

DOLE OFFERS HAWAII.

Makes Formal Tender of Islands to Uncle Sam.

President Dole has sent a long communication to President McKinley, offering to President McKinley, offering to transfer the Hawaiian islands to the United States for purposes of its war with Spain, and to furnish American ships of war in Pacific waters with large quantities of coal, supplies, and ammunition. This action was unexpected in Washington. There is a general sentiment in Congress favorable to the acceptance of the offer, and a Washington correspondent says that when it is formally received it is probable that the President will send to Congress a message recommending the passage of a bill granting him authority to act.

ODDS & ENDS OF SPORT

All records in baseball were broken Friday a week, when two National League teams were shut out without a base hit.

Jack Daly and Kid Lavigne are to tackle each other again in the latter end of May. This time they are to try conclusions at Long Island City.

Peter Jackson has retired from the ring, giving as a reason the statement that the youngsters like Jim Jeffries, who are coming up, "are too speedy for him."

Major Taylor, the colored cycle rider, is matched to ride against Jaap Eden, Kiser, Gardiner, Boulay and August Lehr, five races, each on a different track.

On March 21 the stallion Boyets trotted four miles in a race in Russia in 10:07¾. This performance lowers all records for the distance, not only in Europe, but America.

John C. Knowles, the century rider, who made a 60-century run in 1894, died at the Bellevue hospital, New York, last week from consumption, brought on by excessive riding.

Cordang, holder of the world's 24-hour record of 616 miles, is again in great form, and will make an attempt to ride even further in the double revolution of the clock some time during the spring.

In his day Bobby Mathews, who died the other day, had no peer. He was the second pitcher to knack the art of curving the ball. The first to throw a curve was Arthur Cummings. The pitching rules in those days called for a 45-foot distance. Bobby's curves furnished columns of sensations in the newspapers at the time.

The League of American Wheelmen has secured the support of the State Department in pushing the claims for indemnity against Turkey for the death of Frank Lenz, the American cyclist, who was murdered by Kurds while making a tour of the world awheel. The Turkish Government has signified its willingness to pay an indemnity, but thinks $40,000, the amount claimed, too high.

COMES ONE WITH A SONG.

In the strife and the tumult that sweeps us along
Comes one with a song.
In the storm of the nations—the wrath for the wrong,
Comes one with a song.
And over the range of the people the skies
See the light of a lovelier morning arise;
There are prayers on Love's lips—and the light's in Love's eyes:
Comes one with a song.

In the rude clamor and crush of the throng
Comes one with a song.
The winds have foretold him; rills rippled along
Of one with a song.
And the sword's in the scabbard and soft as the dew
On the lips of the lilies—God's white thoughts of you—
Love's dear arms enfold you; light breaks from the blue!
Comes one with a song.

The Clown's Vengeance.

A Tale of the Sawdust Circle.

That evening there was a great concourse of people on the Place de la Liberte. The Rosati Circus was giving its last performance, and the public of Toulon was flocking in crowds to this farewell representation. At the doors, beneath the flickering gleam of the therows of gas lights, there was a ceaseless crush and movement; an endless line was slowly winding its way in, halting at every step and hammering the sounding planks with a confused clatter. All around, on the notice boards stuck in the ground, the colors of the flaming posters were displayed and, bathed in the garish light, dazzled the eye. In the crowd of spectators and idlers every one was reading aloud the placard which stood conspicuous in front:

Positively the Last Time
This Evening.
LAST PERFORMANCES
of
PRINCE ICARUS
(the flying man),
of
MLLE. RITA
and of AESOP
(the grasshopper Clown).

Within the circus the seats were already overflowing, and the same names repeated from mouth to mouth blended into a general murmur deadened by the canvas roof over the ring. Some of the circus men were raking the sawdust on the track, and, above the door to the stables, the musicians were languidly tuning their instruments, or, at times, addressing friends who passed beneath the gallery. "That you? Marius, how goes it?" etc. In the upper rows the audience was alive with impatience for the expected spectacle, and irritated by the passing of the young, fashionable "first-nighters"—envied frequenters behind the scenes—who passed in a crowd to the narrow entrance leading to the greenroom.

Officers in civilian dress, and students, ship brokers, and idle dandies, all wished for the last time to get near the fair Mlle. Rita, the celebrated equestrienne, who, for a month, had been the subject of conversation in every mess room and every club. They stepped along, the elbowed and elbowers, between the walls that were covered with sets of varnished harness, and begged pardon every time they josted a groom. They stopped at the stalls of Blue Ruin and Djinn, the two trick Arabians, and, under pretext of giving some sugar to the horses, fluttered about the extemporized dressing room where Rita, tranquil and smiling, was donning her attire. Then came in succession the commonplace compliments, to which the star of the circus, unheeding, scarcely deigned to give an answer, without seeming to note the ardent gaze of her admirers.

She was a handsome girl, a careless gypsy, with the sun in her eyes and her blood, accustomed to the atmosphere of admiration, and she finished her toilet without hurrying. At times, however, impatiently, and with a pretty, rebellious movement, she gave her shoulders a shake and made the pearls of her necklace rattle. It was when the little clown Aesop, her husband, who, all befloured and painted, was walking before the room, his huge topknot swaying at every step, drew near, and with his sharp falsetto voice launched some taunt at the artist's courtiers. They laughed, they even applauded, but, more often, they lowered their eyes before the sullen, cold gaze of the dwarf, whose wan and grotesque face—in spite of the smile of his blood red and too large lips—seemed at some moments to be fraught with evil.

This evening the manikin was in a worse humor than usual; his jeers were more biting and more bitter, and beneath the coat of flour covering his seamed features he appeared not pale but livid. His eyes had a sharp and and menacing flash in them, and never left Rita, who, gayly posed before her mirror, was having her bodice laced by the handsome gymnast Icarus.

In the circus the orchestra was finishing a waltz by Metra. The curious were gradually quitting the stable and returning to their places. The sharp eyes of the ring master's whip were cracking in the arena; the show had begun. Icarus placed a last rose in the hair of the equestrienne and ran to chalk her shoes. He tumbled against his dwarfish comrade.

The clown seemed very busy in examining the gas metre, and pushed him away. Then, without more ado, the acrobat sent him reeling, and leaping on a ladder, cried, with a laugh, "Out of the way, you pitiful pigmy!"

Aesop utter a roar of rage and anger, then suddenly calming himself, returned to the metre, and after having followed with an eye of hatred the ascent of Icarus, began fumbling with the mechanism of the stop-cocks.

A great clapping of hands. A frantic ovation. Two hundred pretty women dropped their fans, and leveled their opera glasses, and, a trifle pale, smiled with a delicious dread. Icarus was up there—high up at the top of the circus—hanging to the last trapeze, and turning over and over in it, slowly and without an effort.

At times he paused, and his face was seen radiant in the foolish pride of triumph. Below, in the ring, the clowns were stretching a circular next, and in all the circus reigned deep silence broken only by a feminine whisper: "How graceful! What a handsome fellow!"

The gymnast then, finding his public sufficiently warmed up, raised himself at one pull, stiffening himself on his wrists.

The trapeze, violently thrown back, described a great arc, and, letting go the bar, the man shot forward like an arrow into space.

There was a feeling of apprehension in the crowd, and an "Oh-" of affright uttered by a thousand breasts. The acrobat reached the second trapeze, and calmly let himself swing in its describing oscillations.

Slowly he thus darted eleven times, calm and smiling as he made the tour of the circus, and rejoicing at feeling beneath him the immense panting of the throng.

At the eleventh trapeze he paused to prolong this emotion—his glory—and his eyes sought out Rita. The equestrienne saw him, and with the handle of her whip threw him a kiss.

The elated Icarus, hanging by one hand, saluted her; then he brought his trapeze to rest. He was about to complete his task.

"Enough," said some voices.

"No! Bravo! Encore!" cried the ladies, eager to feel once more the perverse joy of an enticing pain.

For the twentieth time the handsome gymnast, stiffening his muscular arms, essayed his terrible flight.

But an appalling cry of terror, a frantic shout arose.

In an instant, suddenly—like a candle glistening lights of the circus were extinguished all together, at the precise and fatal moment when the man was darting into space.

At the same instant there arose from the ring a laugh, terrible, vibrating with hate.

Then in the black and hideous obscurity, in the pitchy darkness that filled the circus lately so blazing, poignant shrieks rolled from row to row. Women fainted, and the spectators, with their hearts crushed in hopeless terror, shudderingly sat as if petrified in their places, and peered into the night that filled the dome. The net was empty, the acrobat must be looked for in the gloom. In the search, lanterns were brought and carried toward the top of the circus. Five minutes—five centuries, elapsed. Some one cried, "Bengal lights."

Then, while here and there people were trying to relight the burners, a blaze of violet and red, of green and azure, flashed out and with a powerful illumination lit up at one flash every corner of the circus with its frantic and trembling gleams.

And suddenly, as in the flames of a transformation scene, was seen, rigid, clamped to the trapeze, Prince Icarus, hanging motionless.

An unheard of horror paralyzed him in a supernatural frenzy. His hair stood erect. His distorted mouth grinned an idiot grin terrible to see and his face, whiter than that of a corpse, his haggard eyes, protruding from their sockets, rolled convulsively.

Soon his comrades were near him. With the handle of his knife Aesop struck the gymnast's hands, and with great difficulty detached from the bar the clenched hands of the miserable man.

The gas was relighted, and the crowd silently and without a breath, watched, as it was slowly lowered down, the descent of the living corpse.

There is today, near Marseilles, in the Asylum of Saint Pierre, a poor madman who stalks straight forward, his arms held in front and contracted in an imaginary grip. It is a frightful sight. It is "Prince Icarus."

I do not know what jail holds Aesop. As to the fairy Rita, she is now a princess somewhere in Germany.—Adapted from the French of Paul Bonnetain.

Waterproofing Wheels.

Inventive genius is at work on some means by which wheels may be made more durable, and will not swell and shrink, thus avoiding the necessity of resetting the tires. It is suggested that a groove be cut in the felloe and a small connecting opening be left, through which oil could be forced into the groove. This would gradually be absorbed by the wood, and would render the material practically waterproof. This method, however, has objections. The groove removes just so much strength from the felloe, and great difficulty would probably be expected in making the connection between the iron and the wood so close that the oil would not ooze out either of its own weight or by the pressure on the tire when the vehicle was loaded. Thirty years ago a hard-headed old farmer used to buy wagon wheels in the raw wood. He then provided a bath of boiling hot linseed oil. This was poured into an iron trough, made by bending a section of sheet iron into proper form to hold one side of the wheel. Slowly the wheel was revolved in the oil, which was kept hot by a small fire underneath the oil pan. As the wheel revolved the oil ran down the spokes to the hub, and when the job was finished there was not a place the size of a pin head which the oil had not penetrated. The wheels were then set up in the sun and allowed to become thoroughly dry. If there were any places that did not appear well soaked the process was repeated; then the wheels were painted. This oiling of wheels to make them waterproof is by no means a new idea. The originator of the idea did this not only to keep out the water and avoid shrinkage, but he claimed that the treatment would add one year to every three to the wear of the wagon. He claimed also that the oil gave the wood a certain amount of resiliency, and, that being toughened by the process, the wood was infinitely more durable for any purpose. All of the woodwork of his wagons and carriages was treated in the same way when possible. If wheels were bought ready finished, after the paint wore off from wheels and shafts they were treated in this way greatly to their benefit; but, of course, nothing like what the original oiling would have produced.

Sympathy of the Birds.

The last scenes of a pathetic little drama and tragedy, in which canary birds were conspicuous actors, has just been enacted, and a little girl and three canaries are under the sod in one grave at Elkerty, Ind. Some time ago Minnie Fay, a charming little girl, died. She had been sick for some time, and death came as a relief. During her long sickness her most intimate friends had been three canary birds, which occupied a cage just over her bed where she could see them.

There they sang to her their best songs, and there she watched them with the kindliest devotion. As she became weaker and weaker the birds seemed to notice that something momentous was at hand. As she neared death she became very nervous, and the little songs of the canaries, instead of pleasing her, annoyed her. At last one day she became very nervous, and when the birds began to sing she interrupted them by exclaiming nervously: "Oh, hush, Dick." The birds seemed to under stand either the look, tone or words of their mistress and immediately stopped. The little girl died the next day.

Either the harsh command or the loss of their mistress affected them so seriously that Dick died three days later, a week later another died and a few days later the last one dropped from his perch and was dead the next morning when found. They had hardly touched food since the command to stop singing. They were laid to rest in little graves made on top of the mound. There always seemed to me the very closest bond between the birds and the invalid, and all think that the birds understood her command and that it caused their death.—Louisville Commercial.

Turret Turning.

Ine great drawback to hydraulic machinery is its tendency to freeze up in cold climates, which, of course, at once destroys its efficiency. Steam, on the other hand, while free from the defect of freezing, must always take a certain perceptible amount of time to overcome the inertia of the piston and its attached machinery. Moreover, this inertia, once overcome, requires an equal force to bring the machinery to rest again. Thus, it is found that with a turret fifteen feet in diameter the least movement possible with steam machinery, calculated on the rim of the turret, is four inches, while actual tests on one of the war ships of the United States several months ago showed that with electric turning gear a turret of the same diameter could be moved—that is, started and stopped again—twenty-nine times in one inch. The proportion between steam and electricity, therefore, in delicacy of movement in this instance, is four times twenty-nine or 116 times as great.

The chief objection to all radical innovations like this one has hitherto been based on the sound principle that in actual conflict the machinery or motive power might break down, and the work would have to be done by hand power in such an emergency. Thus, guns, turrets, and all other fighting appliances one board some war ships are provided with alternative hand tackle. But there does not seem to be any reason why electricity could not lend itself to be coupled with hand power apparatus, at least as well, if not better, than either steam or hydraulic power.

Long Wars.

It is argued by many philosophical writers of the day that there never again be a long war. The facilities of modern communication, the improvements in arms, and, above all, the mighty interests of modern commerce, forbid, in the opinion of these writers, the possibility of such a deplorable event. Let us devoutly hope that the conclusion is just. Human passions, however, when thoroughly aroused, cannot readily be governed by the rule of pilicy.

It will not do, however, to trust too much to modern civilization as a preventive of protracted and vindictive war. The taste of blood that converts the tamed tiger into a sanguinary monster has pretty much the same effect upon the civilized and Christian man. The latter, it is true, makes his onslaughts under certain rules and regulations, and gives quarter to his prostrate and bleeding foe. But let the war last long enough, and even the chivalry and mercy that should mitigate its horrors will at last be forgotten. The true way to prevent war is to make a strong war. Every overwhelming blow is a mercy stroke. In a short-time combat, when one party has no hope for victory he cries enough and as it is with man the individual, so it is with aggregates of men. The policy, the true Christian policy, in war is to smite irresistibly and then tender the olive branch with brotherly hand.—New York Ledger.

Twenty Dollar Treasury Note.

The twenty-dollar treasury note now in circulation has thereon between six and seven hundred different shades of color, while the other notes have but three to four hunred shades. The twenty-dollar treasury note has all colors thereon but blue. This color is the most difficult for counterfeiters to imitate, the ink used by the Government being a secret. The paper used by the Government for the protection of its bills is such that when printed on one surface, the ink will not show through on the opposite surface,, while at the same time it is of but a single thickness. The counterfeiters, by reason of the fact that they are unable to obtain a paper having the above characteristics, are compelled to print upon two sheets of paper, and subsequently, by means of some adhesive material, secure them together. The counterfeit recently circulated of the one-hundred dollar bill, was printed from a plate which it is thought was stolen, in some mysterious way, from the Government; the counterfeit is about one-sixteenth of an inch shorter than the genuine bill, the difference in length being due to the shrinkage caused by the adhesive for uniting the two sheets of paper on which the counterfeit is printed.

BABY SOPRANO.

Wee Two-Year-Old Girl Who Sings Grand Operas.

The youngest musical wonder in all New York is little Marguerite Mandelkern, just 2 years and 3 months old. The wee girl has not yet learned to lisp plainly the mingled English and German in which she expresses herself, but there is no music too difficult for her to sing with absolute precision after once or twice hearing it upon the piano.

The little treble voice is as clear and true as a bell, and most intricate measures are given with a strict adherence to time that would make a prima donna envious.

The child is a daughter of Joseph Mandelkern, of No. 100 East One Hundred and Twentieth street, and has doubtless inherited her marvelous ear from her father, whose ruling passion is music. For hours, while her sister Elizabeth, a pianist of no mean order, is playing, Baby Marguerite will creep into the room and lie silently listening. This had been going on for some time before the family observed the little one's habit and became aware of her devotion to melody.

It was when near her second birthday, however, that the infant musician essayed her own powers. Her choice was grand opera, and her debut made in an aria from "Aida." As the first note was struck "Gracie," as she is known at home, stopped suddenly in her play, threw back her head, parted her red lips and to the surprise of every one present sang in a sweet, pure thread of tone the entire aria.

Once having found her voice the little maid, tremulous with delight, went on to make her own every theme that appealed to her. And Gracie knows, too, everything that she sings. It is a matter of moment to this small music lover whether it be Verdi or Mendelssohn that occupies her attention.—New York World.

COSTLY EXECUTIONS.

Bills for Killing Criminals Formerly Paid in Holland.

Edam, in Holland, where the Dutch cheese comes from, has just opened a museum of local antiquities, and among the not least interesting of the exhibits are the accounts of the municipal executioners during the eighteenth century. One of these functionaries, by name Vogel, presents a detailed bill, dated Dec. 19, 1713, in which he sets forth a claim for 6 florins for one decapitation and 3 florins each for a sword and winding sheet, with 3 florins 14 cents for a coffin for the decapitated one. His charge for hanging a criminal was also 6 florins, with the further addition of 3 florins for "cutting down and impaling ditto." "Breaking a man on the wheel" was a costlier luxury and ran to 9 florins, while for supplying "nine new lashes for scourge" the charge was 27 florins.

On the whole, however, Mr. Vogel was a moderate man in his charges or the value of human life went up a good deal in the next fifty years, for in the no less circumstantial accounts of Johannes Ka, presented Aug. 1, 1764, we have a charge of 12 florins for "going on board the Hans and preparing instruments of torture," with a like charge for "torturing one person." But this must have been for the "lesser torture" only, as on Aug. 30 the same Johannes sends in a bill for "torturing three persons at 75 florins a head"—total, 225 florins, while a few days later no less than 600 florins is charged for "hanging four persons at 150 florins each," and for "flogging two persons and burning a third" he exacts 150 florins. Clearly considerations of economy, if not of humanity, must have tended toward the reform of the criminal code in Holland.—London Chronicle.

The Cabin Boy's Mistake.

When the British fleet was at Hong-Kong a merchant ship was seen coming over the bar with her ensign upside down. The ships in the harbor at once lowered lifeboats and raced to be first to give assistance to the supposed sinking ship. When the first boat got within hailing distance they saw the skipper clapping his hands and shouting, "Go it! Come on! Well pulled!" etc. The officer in charge then said: "What's the matter, captain?" "Nothing the matter," said the skipper. "Then why have you got your ensign upside down?" The skipper glanced aloft as his colors. "It's that boy Joe again," he cried, in disgust. "I thought it was a regatta."

INDICATE CHARACTER.

What Different Kinds of Noses Mean to Their Owners.

A thick nose and flat is an unfavorable feature with men as well as women, usually signifying that the character is predominated by material instincts, while a turned-up nose with wide nostrils betokens a vain disposition.

Especially wide nostrils are signs of courage, strength and pride; small nostrils of weakness and timidity. Noses large in every respect are usually found among men, and when a woman possesses a large nose it indicates she is masculine in character.

The nose, the form of which has so much to do with the beauty of the face, is amenable to culture, and we have it on the authority of a German physician that it is beyond dispute that during half an ordinary human life the nose is capable of receiving more noble form. The mental training of an individual has a great deal to do with shaping the nose.

The small, flat nose, found among women and called the soubrette nose, when occurring with an otherwise agreeable cast of countenance, indicates a gracious and cheerful naivette, combined with considerable curiosity. Such a nose is seldom found among men, and when a man is unfortunate enough to possess it he is characterized by weak and definite sagacity.—Philadelphia Press.

German Geographical Prize.

Herr Krupp, of Essen, has given 10,000 marks to the German Geographical Society for a gold medal, to be awarded yearly for geographical discovery. It will be called the Nachtigal medal, after Krupp's friend, Gustav Nachtigal, the African explorer, and, where the merits of candidates are otherwise equal, will be given in preference first to discoveries on the African continent, and next to exploration in German colonies elsewhere.

Forest in a Former Lake Bed.

Lake Rikwa, or Leopold, between Lakes Tanganyika and Nyassa, in Central Africa, which when first discovered forty years ago, was 180 miles long by 30 broad, is reported by recent travelers to have dried up completely. The bed of the lake is now a plain covered with thick woods.

He Promised.

"Oh, George," she cried, after he had kissed her, "you'll never tell any one, will you?"

"Never have the slightest fear on that score," he replied. And it must have been the way he said it that made her angry.

"Any mail for me this morning?" asked the lawyer.

"No, sir, but there was a lady," replied the bright boy.—Philadelphia North American.

FROM THE BOYS

By the kindness of T. C. Ford, we publish the following letter from Mr. Wheelock who used to be employed in his store. He is one of the men who went to Indianapolis Sunday. The letter is as follows.

CAMP MOUNT, May 9, 1898.

—FRIEND COOK:—We arrived here all o. k. about 4 o'clock, and examined this morning, and passed right through, there was only three out of the crowd that came down that was rejected We expect to be sent away in a day or two. The Co. is just filled. Saxby McIntosh was rejected. If I get a complete outfit, I will send my clothes back. This is writing under difficulties here, so will stop, and wait till you hear from me again. With kind regards to all.

H. G. WHEELOCK.

THEIR SEMI-CENTENNIAL

Kendallville Presbyterians celebrated the 50th anniversary of the founding of their church. Sunday last. Hon. John Mitchell presided, and many letters from former pastors were read, including one from Rev. J. T. Bliss, the minister, who organized the church fifty years ago. There were numerous short speeches from prominent members, and a call of the roll of all who had been members from the first, about 480 in all. Many who did not respond, owing to absence, death or other causes, were answered for by short speeches from friends. Mrs. Bliss, now a resident of Fort Wayne, wa present, but Mr. Bliss' heal th kept him at home. Mr. Bliss is the minister who founded the church in Auburn several years earlier than that at Kendallville.

PORK IS STRONG.

That is what they say in the market reports when it sells high. But a good sized porker is pretty strong in a muscular sense also, as can be testified to by a friend of ours up in Fairfield township. And thereby hangs a tale—not the pig's however. A well known young man of that popular township, and a companion were taking a sort of foot race in the orchard when a hog that was pasturing in the same lot took a hand in the race. As luck would have it, a collision took place, which ended in the young man being struck in such a way as to seat him on the top of the hog's back, in fact he took, a ride at the end of which he was landed ker thump on his head. And though no bad results followed he is not likely to try it again.

FROM ISLES OF THE PACIFIC

The Courier's Special Correspondent Sends Greetings.

APIA, SAMOAN ISLANDS April 12, '98

EDITOR COURIER:—
Though many thousands of miles away you and your readers are not forgotten. In my last letter we left you at Honolulu where six hours ashore much refreshed my family. Once more aboard the Mana which is a veritable floating Palace. This is her third trip only. She was built in Scotland last year, and to be aboard her is a pleasure indeed After leaving Honolulu our course was almost due south. Day by day we approached the Equator. The sun shone with a brilliancy unknown in temperate climes. The sea was of a deep sky blue except when at short interals a tropical shower would descend and a rainbow would span the heavens where clouds such as you see in harvest times were piled up promiscuously. As we neared the sun line the showers increased until at last it was a continnal deluge amounting almost to a cloudburst. Here on the Equator the two trade winds meet and all of the over abundant moisture is precipitated, an unabated flood which has continued for thousands of years. But when at last we steamed clear of the rain belt and the Equatorial sun poured his fiery rays upon the deck awnings the heat was almost unbearable. Another day and we had reached the region of the southeast trade winds and the remainder of our sea voyage was quite pleasant. In looking over the map of Oceanic you will observe the Islands are as the sands of the sea shore, so great number, but yet so vast is the great expanse of the Pacific that not one acre of land is seen from Honolulu to Samoa and the track of this steamship line is twenty miles wide, that is, you can see any object at ten miles distance on either side. Finally on the fifteenth day out from San Francisco teh watchman announced land in sight from the topmast, but in vain we strained our eyes for the coveted earth until at last from the misty blue there arose a dim outline which grew more and more distinct until at last a fair Tropical Island came full in view. We could see the long stretches of Cocoa Palms and a dense dark forest covered the mountains to their very tops which rise to an elevation of about four thousand feet, on the top of which Robert Louis Stevenson the great poet sleeps his last long sleep.

A Pilot is taken aboard and the great iron ship is headed direct for the raging breakers as they dash upon the Coral Reefs which surround all Tropical Islands. As we approach nearer a small gap in the reef is noticed, through which the ship glides safely into the smooth waters of Apia Bay. The Bay is moon shaped and about two miles in length and around its shore is stretched perhaps the most picturesque village on earth. Of the six great warships that were wrecked here during the ever memorable hurricane of 1889 one alone is now visible. It is the German ship Nepsick which yet lies hight and dry upon a Coral Reef not more than twenty rods from the beach. No sooner than we cast anchor, hundreds of Natives come crowding around the ship each with its outriger and canoe.

Next comes the task of gathering up one's belongings and gaining passage to the shore for there is no wharf at Apia as yet. Our boatmen pull us over shining beds of Coral through the surf and land us at a little Pier and we scramble up the steps and are shown to a large hotel with a wide veranda up stairs and down running entirely around the building. Our first day ashore can hardly be described, there is so much that is strange and new to look at and to be wondered at. Such a wondrous growth of every conceivable flowery vines and trees and shrubs, that one is almost lost in a maze of bewilderment My family and I are well but cannot as yet say what our future plans may be, but shall look around and will tell you more of the country in our next letter 28 days hence.

Yours Truly
JOSEPH A. SHADE.

MRS. SHULL DEAD.

Mrs. Susanah Shull died at the old farm home south of town on the Ft. Wayne road, last night very suddenly. She woke in the night, and aroused the girl who stays with her saying, "Mary, I am sick." The girl was alarmed, and went and wakened Charlie Kraus, who lives in one part of the house, and he got up, and seeing she was bad, went out and rang the bell for help, not feeling safe to go for a doctor before help came. Then he came back into the house, and she only breathed a few times after that. The funeral will be tomorrow. They assemble at the house at 2 p m., and come up town to the Baptist church where the services will be held at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Evergreen. Mrs. Shull was 76 years old and was among the earliest settlers here, they having come onto the farm where she died, over forty years ago,

AT IT AGAIN.

Thieving on the Lake Shore freight trains has not entirely ceased, though three of the boys were sentenced here in Auburn the last term of court. The Elkhart Review says: "When through freight second 62 arrived here at 4:30 this morning one car loaded with merchandise for Butler, Waterloo and other points east of here had been entered and robbed. Shawls, silks, bicycle tires and other goods the thieves apparently did not desire, were scattered about in the car. After an inventory of the goods left had been taken, the car was forwarded to its destination. The seal had been broken somewhere between here and Chicago. The amount stolen could not be ascertained here."

NEW POSTAL.

(Columbia City Post.)

The boys at Camp Mount have adopted a new style postal card which is quite different from anything we ever saw before used for that purpose. It is nothing but a square of hard tack, upon which the desired news is written, the address and stamp being placed on the other side.

The "thing" resembles a soda cracker at first sight, but closer inspection effectually removes all suspicions of the presence of soda. It is said their use for that purpose has become quite a fad in camp.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Tuesday's Daily.

Indiana men are sent to the big camp at Chicamauga. They may go today or tomorrow.

Volunteers west of the Rocky Mountains go to San Francisco and will likely be sent to Manila.

It is pretty certain now that we will at once occupy Cuba with a strong army and Manila also.

No fight yet between the fleets near Porto Rico. It is believed by some that the Spaniards are not coming over at all.

Congress thanks Dewey, gives him a sword, and makes him an admiral.

Ships with troops and supplies start for Cuba.

Wednesday's Daily.

Spain continues to have trouble with rioters in her smaller cities and among her mining people.

Rumors that United States and Great Britain are trying to arrange that in case other nations help Spain, Great Britain will help us and that then we will capture the Canary Island sand give them to Great Britain, is probably not true. Great Britain can take those islands herself any time she wants them.

On land in Cuba now it often happens that in their skirmishes, the two flags ours and the Cuban are often carried side by side.

Blanco, the governor-general at Havana, gives out that the Spaniards have captured Boston, Mobile, Charleston and Pensacola.

As indicated yesterday in the COURIER, the Spanish ships did not come across the sea to meet our fleet waiting for them near Porto Rico. Instead they had turned about after leaving Cape Verde Islands, and steamed for home, and have reached Spain in safety.

The forward movement of troops, shows we are likely to send men over to Cuba in a few days. Those at Chickamauga, are being moved to Tampa on the seacoast, and a big camp is being established at New Orleans.

Our own boys of the Third regiment go to New Orleans today.

A large ship load of infantry, supplies. mules, etc. has sailed from Tampa. A great many ships are under contract to take more troops, etc. from Tampa, Mobile and New Orleans. Looks as if a big dush is to be made to secure Cuba.

Illinois regiments have started south Troops moving all over the country, going south, or on the Coast going to San Francisco

Sampson will capture Porto Rico and then we go to Cuba.

The Perry Fair Trial

To the Daily Courier,—

ANGOLA IND., May 11, 1898:—The jury in the trial of the State vs Perry Fair is composed of the following persons: Chas Wells, T. Moffit, Thomas Hendry, Josiah Phillips, Frank Dale, Henry West, A. E. Emerson, George Ford, Cal Tuttle, Rob. Metzger, Frank Meese and Jay Brooks.

Hon. Cyrus Cline is trying the case as special judge. There are many witnesses here from DeKalb county. Reuben Sawvel, ex-treasurer is here from States prison. D. D. Moody is also here. M. F. Long, Al Robbins and M. Boland have testified.

The evidence tried to show that D. D. Moody, clerk issued an order to John Grogg for $19.20 for jury services This he took to the Auditor who issued a county order for the amount in Grogg's favor who presented it at the treasurer's office. There was a young man in the office. Grogg applied most of the order on his taxes and received balance in money. The next time the order turned up was at the Farmers Bank in Auburn where Perry Fair took it, saying it belonged to Mrs. Irene Smith and the amount then was $119.20

The defense on cross examination sought to show that it had been a common dractice to raise orders in the treasurer's office.

Albert Robbins was on the stand a long time. He testified that a certain notice to the defendant to produce papers is in defendent's own hand writing

Welsheimer assisted by Mr. Rose of Angola, for the state claims, two orders were raised $100 each. Fair is represented by Powers & Croxton, of Angola, and J. W. Baxter, of Auburn. Sawvel was sent for by the defense, so they are evidently wishing to show that some other county officer raised the orders. The case may take all the week.

Angola Court.

Special to the Daily Courier

The jury for the trial of the State vs. Perry Fair is being empaneled. Cyrus Cline, of Angola, is special judge The attorneys for the state are Prosecutor Rhodes, Sol. A. Wood and Welsheimer, of Auburn. For the defense: Croxton & Powers, of Angola, snd John W. Baxter, of Auburn. The witnesses are expected here at noon and the case will probably proceed without delay. It has been continned so many times people are wondering if something will not yet happen to postpone the trial.

In the state case from Fremont, which grew out of the sale of liquor to a club or combination of persons who had liquor put up in bottles at Detroit and labeled with the home parties name and shipped to the club in bottles, the jury found it a sale in evasion of the law and fined the defendant $35 and costs.

—Waterloo Press:—The committee on speeches of Decoration Day have secured the services of Capt. E. D. Hartman, of Auburn, who delivered the address here several years ago. —During the grand review and parades at Indianapolis Sunday, many people said, "There goes a regiment without guns." It was the artillery. Their "guns" as they insist on calling their big revolvers, were in their belts Their "guns" proper, however, that is their cannons, were too big to trot out on Sunday, and were left parked on their grounds at the southeast part of the fair grounds. Each artilleryman has a saber, a rather Turkish looking sword, that is not probably of much use to him. He carries a big revolver, however that looks wicked enough.

—Guy Baker informs us that the murderer of his relative, Lona Culler, who was killed while on duty as a telegraph operator up in Wisconsin has not been found. It appears that Mr. Culler was alone in the office, he being a telegraph operator, and had worked late footing up his monthly statement. He must have been shot dead by someone from behind while sitting at his work, as the ball entered from behind and came out in front. He was found next morning sitting dead in his chair. The assassin had evidently entered the room cautiously and after shooting his victim had gone out and locked the door. The door was found locked the next morning the key being on the outside. This fact as well as the shot from behind proves it was not a case of suicide or of accidental shooting.

$1000 REWARD

For the apprehension and conviction of the parties who composed, printed and distributed the following libelous circular:

To Members of the Associated Bicycle Clubs

FELLOW RIDERS: We, the committee appointed by the Executive Committee to make a complete and searching investigation into the rumors which have recently gained circulation to the effect that the "RAMBLER" bicycle, manufactnred by GORMULLY & JEFFERY for the past nineteen years, during which time it has stood high in public favor, is now being manufactured out of inferior material and put together in a very inferior manner, and therefore unsafe for any other than boulevard riding, make the following statement:

As the matter was deemed important to both ourselves and the firm of manufacturers' whose reputation for years has been of the best, your committee decided to make a complete investigation and give GORMULLY & JEFFERY every opportunity to maintain the reputation so long enjoyed by the "RAMBLER" wheel.

Upon our visit to the offices of GORMULLY & JEFFERY we were very courteously received as the representatives of the Associated Bicycle Clubs, but upon our stating our errand and that we would like to be given the opportunity to inspect the factory and construction of the "RAMBLER" wheel, we were very plainly told that such request could not be granted and that it was none of our business as to how the wheel was manufactured. Mr. Jeffery talked very presistently of his high business standing and stated that the "RAMBLER" had been nineteen years on the market and that the rumors (which he acknowledged were in circulation) were instigated by rival manufacturers. We informed him that we could very easily find out whether or not the "RAMBLER" was a safe wheel to ride if he would give us permission to watch the construction of a set of them, but he declined.

Our next move was to place one of our members, who is well known to you all, in the factory as an employe in the assembling department. He made application and secured employment in the course of a few days and thus had an excellent opportunity to keep his eye on the building of the "RAMBLER" wheel. He spent ten days in the factory and then tendered his resignation, at which the foreman expressed regret, stating that he was one of the best workmen in the room.

Our report is as follows: "The 'RAMBLER' wheel of to-day in no way compares with the 'RAMBLER' of a few years ago. Not only is the material used in its construction of a poor grade, but the workmen are a very inferior lot. Very few mechanics are employed in the factory and none of the men who were with GORMULLY & JEFFERY when they made the wheel famous are with them to-day, on account, we are informed of the low wages paid.

"We therefore advise all members of the Association to let the 'RAMBLER' alone as it is an unsafe wheel to ride and will not stand road work."

This recommendation is made after a very careful study of the material used and method of manufacturing the "RAMBLER," and we are assured that the reports are true in fact and not instigated by jealous rivals as GORMULLY & JEFFERY assert.

Respectfully,

JOHN CARLSON, OKIE M. CHESMAN, HENRY ARKSON, Committee.

NOTE

For refutation of these falsehoods, and the claim that such a committee was appointed, we refer to the president of any associated cycling club in the U. S. A.

INSPECTION SOLICTED.

THE LUNCHEON HOUR

WHEN PENSION OFFICE CLERKS LEAVE THEIR DESKS.

In and About the Big Court—Enjoyment in a Cup of Coffee and a Sandwich—One of the Interesting Capital City Sights.

Among the File Cases.

No more interesting sight can be seen about Washington than that which occurs daily at the pension office during the half hour, between 12:30 and 1 o'clock, allowed the employes of that branch of the government for luncheon.

THE LUNCH HOUR.

There is something of a military precision in the manner lunches are eaten at the pension office, very different from the way that proceeding is conducted in other departments.

Commissioner Evans has insisted that as the lunch time is from 12:30 to 1 o'clock that the act of taking nourishment shall be confined to that period. Not a minute sooner than the prescribed hour the army of 1,600 clerks emerge from the offices and swarm down the broad staircases to the eastern portion of the court, where a score of impromptu tables are set loaded with sandwiches, pie, cups of coffee and various concoctions of food to be devoured. The venders of these provisions are instructed not to sell anything before 12:30 o'clock, and previous to that time a dollar bill would not be sufficient to buy a piece of pie.

A hundred and fifty bicycles are stacked in the court of the pension office, and half of the owners of these wheels mount them promptly during lunch time and speed away a mile or a mile and a half to their homes, where they eat their mid-day meal with their families. The others stand about the court with a mug of milk or coffee, a sandwich or a piece of pie, quietly gaining refreshment while they exchange the news of the day.

WITH A MUG OF MILK.

To the outer world the doings of the chiefs of divisions in the pension office may appear to be a small matter, but within the barn-like structure that accommodates this branch of the government the chiefs are the personal aids of the commissioner. They see the commissioner every day, talk over with him the administration of the bureau, suggest changes that might improve its methods of doing business, and to a greater or less extent the army of clerks are dependent upon them for "reputations" as good clerks. So it is that any word that may have dropped from the lips of a chief is passed around and devoured as eagerly as are the viands which are procured of the caterers. An accident happening to any of the clerks is discussed and commented on, and the various orders issued by the commissioner form intensely interesting subjects for conversation. Of course, as in every gathering of men and women, all sorts of gossip runs riot.

Other signs that would be of interest to the visitor, but which have become commonplace with the clerks at the pension office, are the great stretch of file cases containing the claims for pensions of a million brave soldiers and soldiers' widows and minor children, which cover nearly the entire floor space of the court of the pension office building, and the largest American flag in the United States, which floats above them all. In no other place on earth has there ever been such a massing together of claims of soldiers for pensions, the result of a single civil war.

Men who remember the last time the remnants of the Grand Army of the Republic, old men and feeble, many of them carrying evidences in their maimed bodies of the stirring scenes through which they passed, marched up Pennsylvania avenue amid an applauding audience made of a younger generation have a peculiar feeling of veneration toward the mass of papers which have been filed since the war in the pension office to prove their claims for recognition through pensions. But this scene, a memorable one to visitors here, is now too commonplace to call forth much interest from the clerks of the pension office who wend their way to the lunch counters through this mass of documentary evidence.

ELABORATE.

Finally at 1 o'clock a gong sounds, and before its intonations have died out the 1,600 clerks of the pension office are back at their desks and at work. There are no stragglers. This precision is unknown in other departments, but at the pension office it is ever present during lunch time. The short half hour devoted to attentions to the inner man is a pleasant break always at the pension office, and pleasanter probably because of the strictness observed in stopping and beginning work.

UNCLE SAM'S DOMAIN.

With All His Extravagance He Still Owns Over 600,000,000 Acres.

The idea that Uncle Sam is at present a landless old fellow has generally taken possession of the people throughout the country. This, however, is a great mistake. He still has land enough to give each one of his 73,000,000 children a nice little homestead of eight acres each and still have a ranch of over 16,000,000 acres left. In other words, your dear old uncle still owns something over 600,000,000 acres, distributed as follows throughout the various States and Territories:

Alabama, 532,339 acres; Arizona, 54,400,211 acres; Arkansas, 3,922,042 acres; California, 43,841,044 acres; Colorado, 4,037,204 acres; Florida, 1,797,662 acres; Idaho, 45,962,855 acres; Kansas, 1,046,589 acres; Louisiana, 845,020 acres; Michigan, 522,431 acres; Minnesota, 6,240,049 acres; Mississippi, 41,441,220 acres; Missouri, 497,764 acres; Montana, 71,432,917 acres; Nebraska, 10,669,353 acres; Nevada, 61,578,586 acres; New Mexico, 56,983,047 acres; North Dakota, 21,385,293 acres; Oklahoma, 8,105,238 acres; Oregon, 35,892,318 acres; South Dakota, 13,250,718 acres; Utah, 44,207,270 acres; Washington, 17,958,536 acres; Wisconsin, 454,107 acres; Wyoming, 49,341,588 acres, and Alaska, 369,529,600 acres.

About one-half this vast amount of land lies, it will be seen, in Alaska, and it is very certain that this will never be available for homestead purposes, but for mining purposes its value in gold coin may prove to be even greater than though it were arable. The larger part of the balance lies in fertile and productive States, and is all subject to homestead laws.

Those who want homes should avail themselves of the more than liberal homestead laws of the United States. This is the place for the surplus labor. —St. Louis Star.

"Yours Truly."

The habits of people in signing letters are receiving some attention, and interesting conclusions are drawn from a study of the different ways writers subscribe themselves. The curt "Yours" and "Yours truly" are found not only in business letters, but in personal notes as well, for there are plenty of correspondents who don't believe in gush, and who think that "Yours truly" or "sincerely" means about all they wish to convey. Opposed to these sensible and essentially practical persons is that class of writers made up usually of young and enthusiastic individuals, as a rule of the gentle sex, who throw words about as carelessly on paper as they do in conversation. The use of the word love by such people is a distressing sign of emotional weakness, or carelessness, or of insincerity, and possibly arises from the same impulse that prompts women to kiss each other indiscriminately. One Boston girl, who is quoted by the Journal, has taken her own stand in the matter, and at the risk of being considered "cold" and "thoroughly Boston" she sticks to it. In her childhood she was taught to sign "affectionately yours" to her faraway greataunts and second cousins, some of whom she had never seen, but all of whom she tried to like, because of the claims of kindred, and the word "affectionately" came to mean to her nothing at all except polite and necessary fiction. So she signs "affectionately" to people she is supposed to be conventionally fond of, and when she says anything more she means it. She thoroughly approves of "Cordially yours," and this, by the way, is seen more and more frequently now in notes between acquaintances who are on distinctly friendly or cordial terms. After all, "Your friend," when it can be used truthfully, is a simple and satisfactory way of ending friendly letters. Some people have the habit of not prefacing their names with any set form of words at the end of letters. They stop when they get through, and write their signatures without any frills.—Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

Spread of the English Language.

Mr. Gladstone lately expressed himself as believing that English is to be the language of the future. Mr. Gladstone's reasons are based on what has happened within his own lifetime. When Mr. Gladstone was born English was spoken by 30,000,000 of people. It is now spoken by 120,000,000. The number of people in the earth who speak English is doubled every forty years. This forms the basis of a very simple calculation as to when the entire population of the earth shall speak English. The two great English-speaking countries are Great Britain and the United States. Wherever Great Britain goes she carries the English language, and whoever comes to the United States learns it.

Horse Brains.

An East Hebron (Maine) horse proves his wit in this wise: Two nights in succession the nag slipped his headstall off and pushed an inner door of the stable open and slid the outer railroad door with his teeth and went into the field and helped himself to grass. He was detected by the prints of his teeth on the cross-bars of the door.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

THE TWO PARTIES IN CONGRESS.

Hon. Mr. McMillan of Tennessee made an able argument against the bond issue policy of the Federal administration in the House of Representatives. He very aptly inquired of Hon. Mr. Dingley, the Republican leader and bond champion, why he wanted to borrow five hundred millions of money when Secretary Gage had just publicly asserted that he had two hundred and twenty millions already in the treasury? That calculation did not exhibit any danger of Government bankruptcy, and the immediate necessity for incurring further interest-bearing public debt did not exist if Mr. Gage's boastful statement were a truthful one. Mr. McMillan suspected that there was reference rather to increasing the national bank circulation than to the prosecution of the war against Spain.

The argument upon the bond bill in the House has been a partisan argument. The Democrats have given unhesitating and patriotic support to war measures, and have helped to fill up the ranks of the national forces and to make such appropriations for military and naval purposes as the executive departments called for. But they have steadily opposed concessions to Wall street, and legislation enabling capital to take undue advantage of the Government's needs. They have remembered that they were themselves elected to their present positions charged and intrusted with the interests of the tax-paying people, and that to cast their influence in favor of the public creditors, as against those who had confided to them that agency, would be a breach of good faith. It has been left to the Republican majority of the House in this discussion to uphold the demands of the loan mongers, and to sustain the bankers' policy to the detriment of their own constituents.—New York News.

Who Are Obstructionists?

Republican leaders are getting ready to raise the cry that Democrats are obstructionists. This, they believe, will furnish good campaign material for the political contest this fall, and they propose to put things in such a shape that they can find an excuse to use it.

With the demands of war upon the country the Republicans are preparing measures for the securing of revenue which contain propositions entirely contrary to Democratic doctrines and which must of necessity be opposed by the Democrats in Congress. If these measures are not opposed, then the Republicans will succeed in passing laws which, under ordinary circumstances, could not have been passed.

If, however, the Democrats refuse to be made the victims of this sort of trickery, then the Republicans will raise the cry that Democrats are "obstructionists," and will go before the country with this false issue. As a matter of fact, the Republicans are the obstructionists. They refuse to yield their partisanship to the demands of patriotism, and they propose to force issues which in all decency and fairness should be left until the more imminent demands of the war have been met.

It is far from being settled that a bond issue is an immediate necessity, yet the Republicans have taken it for granted that there is such a necessity and have proposed an issue of $500,000,000 worth of bonds. All these matters will have to be discussed in Congress, and when the facts are laid before the people they will be able to decide who are the obstructionists.—Chicago Dispatch.

Woodford's Record as a Diplomat.

General Woodford has twice allowed himself to be outwitted in the game of diplomacy. Instructed to demand the recall of Dupuy, he permitted the Spanish cabinet to accept the minister's resignation before acting, and, given the President's ultimatum, he permitted himself to be surprised with his passports. When it is remembered, in addition to this, that he was firmly convinced that he could talk the Spanish into peace, one is bound to acknowledge that General Woodford is not a success in the diplomatic field.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Secretary of State Day.

Never since John L. Sullivan refused to be mayor of Boston in order that he might fill the more glorious office of heavy-weight champion of the world, has a more important political change taken place than that in the State department. It is one the very contemplation of which brings the moisture of virtuous perspiration to the nest of modesty. Think of it! John Sherman, whose glorious predecessors in the State Department were such intellectual and patriotic giants as Jefferson, Madison, Webster, Marcy and Silas Wright, is succeeded by Judge Day. Let us swathe ourselves in Canton flannel and reflect.—Washington Times.

Factions in the Ohio G. O. P.

Now that the North and South are united and party lines in Congress obliterated, it is time for the two or three Republican parties in Ohio to get together. In other words, it is unfortunate that a season of almost universal harmony should be disturbed by the bickerings and dickerings of rival factions of Buckeye Republicans in or out of the Senate.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Trouble for McKinley's Friend.

The Ohio Senate has accepted the report of the committee charging that the election of Mark A. Hanna to the United States Senate was obtained by bribery. Now the United States Senate will be compelled to take cognizance of the subject, and it would seem to be in the interest of Senator Hanna, as much as in that of his opponents, that the full facts in the contest shall be submitted to the public.—Boston Herald.

Debt and Taxes.

President McKinley and his bank president Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Gage, and their followers in Congress, are determined upon an old-fashioned Wall-street-begotten government bond, to be subscribed for and taken up by money lenders, and to be made a basis for additional national bank issues, to the profit of the Shylocks. They even make a parade of sacrificing their darling goldbug scheme of a gold bond issue, and will accept the "coin" payment, if by that means they can only get a government bond that will help them to put out and circulate more bank paper.

The Democrats in Congress are in a minority, although in the Senate they are strong enough, when re-enforced by the Populists and the Silver Republicans, to make a good fight. It is probable that they will do their utmost to save the country from any more government bonds. They will propose income taxation, greenback issues, increase of internal revenue duties, postoffice savings banks, coinage of silver dollars—anything and everything, except the handing over of the government of the United States to the plutarchists of Wall street. We cannot doubt that the Democrats of the Senate and House of Representatives will do everything in their power to save our people from that voracious money power which has played so prominent a part in this Cuban business and appears resolved to speculate in our people's patriotism still further.

An Ohio Prediction.

All there is of the Republican party in Ohio to-day is what Governor Bushnell and his wing of it represent. But for him the whole party would have submitted to the corrupt dictation of the most unprincipled man who has ever risen to distinction in our country. Governor Bushnell will leave his office with the good will of all the people, while Mark Hanna will in all probability leave his in disgrace.—Columbus Press-Post.

A "Popular Loan."

After conferring with a politic convocation of New York bankers, the Hon. Lyman J. Gage announces that the bonds issued will be a "popular loan." The inference is that the bankers are the people—a conclusion natural enough considering Mr. Gage's tastes and affiliations. "Resolved, That the saints shall inherit the earth," ran the declaration of a certain historic gathering. "Resolved further, That we are the saints."

Tired of Republican Profligacy.

The people of Pennsylvania would be glad to welcome a thoroughly able, honest and trustworthy Democratic party and everything to-day points to more than willingness on their part to intrust such a Democracy with the control of the State as a refuge from a discordant, demoralized and profligate Republicanism.—Philadelphia Times.

Confident Missouri Democrats.

Governor Stevens predicts a plurality of 75,000 for the Democratic ticket in Missouri next November. This is a big figure, but it takes big figures to represent the rational expectations of the Missouri Democracy, based upon past achievements and present conditions.—St. Louis Republic.

When Reed Rule Will Be Broken.

It may be that the House of Representatives will break away from Tom Reed. In fact, it is almost certain, because Mr. Reed cannot live forever.—Peoria Herald.

Where Bachelorhood Is Illegal.

Bachelors have a hard time in the Argentine Republic. There a law inflicts a fine upon any person of marriageable age who rejects a proposal. Here is the statute: People of marriageable age of either sex who refuse an offer to wed without reasons which are considered valid in law shall not be permitted to marry thereafter without the permission of the government. They shall, moreover, pay an indemnity sum of not more than one hundred pounds to the person whose offer they have refused. Young men and women under 20 years old are exempt from the law, and can marry as they please. After they are 28 the men are obliged to pay a heavy tax if they remain single. The women propose as well as men; so an unmarried young man between 20 and 28 years old in that country has a troublesome time. Not only is he made to pay a tax for being a bachelor, but if he refuses a proposal he has to pay the proposer a fine. Naturally, there are few old maids in Argentine.

TO DRY CHILDREN'S SHOES.

The Way to Do It So that the Leather Will Not Shrink.

"Damp feet are always walking toward disease and death," says an eminent physician, and a more impressive truth it would be difficult to put into words. Children must play out of doors and they will run about in all weather. It is almost always the case that when the little shoes come off at night, they are damp, if not actually wet. The careless mother passes them by, thinking that they will dry by morning, forgetting that, even though they do dry, they will be harsh, uncomfortable and irritating to tender little feet, and may lay the foundation for discomfort and suffering untold. When the little ones have finished their play, they should be taught to remove their shoes and stockings and put on dry ones. House shoes of soft leather or felt are inexpensive and comfortable, and they last a long time, besides being a great saving in noise and the nerve irritation that is often harder to bear than the laborious work with which the housemother has to struggle.

As soon as the shoes are taken off they should be filled to the very tops with dry oats. It is a custom of one of the most provident women who ever raised a family to prepare stocking feet of the sizes of the various shoes worn by the children. These are numbered and hung on a nail in the entryway, where the little ones keep their wrappings. These stockings feet have short tops; in fact, they are shaped more like a baby's sock than anything else. They are filled with oats and sewed up at the top. A couple of inches of extra room is allowed at the top, and when the shoes are to be filled, the oats are shaken loosely through the stocking, then it is put into the shoe and adjusted as nearly in the form of the human foot as possible. A few gentle raps will settle the oats into the shoe; then a strong cord is tied around the stocking top as close to the grain as possible. The oats being perfectly dry occupy a given amount of space. As they absorb the moisture, which they begin to do immediately, they swell a little and keep the leather from shrinking.

MILITARY BALLOONING.

German Officers Conduct Successful Experiments on the Spree.

The Aeronautic division of the German army has recently been conducting some interesting experiments on the Upper Spree, near Berlin, with a view to testing the capabilities of a captive balloon as a means of reconnoitering in war time. On a wooden platform placed on two pontoons was fixed a windlass, on which was wound the rope holding the balloon. Along the rope ran a telegraph wire connecting the balloon with the platform, on which an officer, seated at a table with his telegraphic apparatus in front of him, was able to carry on communication with the occupants of the balloon, who, at a height of some 3,000 feet above the ground, commanded a vast expanse of country.

THE SPREE ASCENT.

Where Little Things Count.

Bookkeeping has been reduced to such an exact science in the big metropolitan banks that the clerks are expected to strike a correct balance at the close of each day's work, no matter if the transactions have run into the millions of dollars. When the books fail to balance, the whole force of the bank is put to work to discover the error, and no clerk starts for home until it is discovered, whether it amounts to two cents or $2,000. Generally a quarter of an hour will bring the mistake to light, but sometimes the hunt is kept up until late into the night.

Such a search was being conducted in a New York bank located in the vicinity of Wall street. Forty-five cents was missing. At 6 o'clock not a trace of the errant sum had been discovered. Dinner was sent in for the whole force from an adjoining restaurant, and after an hour's rest the search was again taken up. Midnight came, but still no clew, so sandwiches and coffee were served.

"Hello!" said a clerk. "The Blank National people are working to-night, too. Guess they're in the same box."

Sure enough, the windows of the bank across the street were brilliantly lighted. The incident was soon forgotten when the wearying hunt after that elusive forty-five cents was resumed. Shortly after 1 o'clock in the morning, as they were about to give up for the night, a loud rapping was heard at the front door of the bank.

"Hello! Hello! What's the matter?" called the cashier through the keyhole.

"Matter, you chumps. Why, we've got your blamed old forty-five cents! Come along home to bed!"

Outside stood the crowd of clerks from the neighboring bank. It appeared that, in making a cash transaction, one of the banks had paid the other forty-five cents too much. As a result half a hundred men had worked for nine hours, and the search was only ended because a bright clerk, noticing the light in the bank opposite, shrewdly guessed the cause, hunted up the cash slip, and discovered the error.

BALLADS OF THE SPANISH WAR

To the Spaniards.

By the little ones that have died at their feet,
By the cries that have reached our ears,
By the pain they have wrought on helpless ones,
We have measured their tale of years,
And it is black with evil deeds
And heavy with women's tears.

For that they have been unmerciful;
For the wickedness they have done,
For that they have flouted the gentle word—
The jaws of the rifled gun
Shall speak to them, and tell the world
That the murderers' race is run.
—New York Press.

Over Morro Castle.

There's a flag afloat to-day,
Over Morro castle,
That hasn't long to stay
Over Morro castle!
Keep a lookout for the flash,
There is going to be a smash,
Something hot's about to crash,
Into Morro castle.

There are remnants of the Maine
Down near Morro castle;
We will pick a bone with Spain
Down by Morro castle!
When we've ended this affair,
When the smoke clears from the air,
You may see Old Glory there,
Over Morro castle!
—Cleveland Leader.

War.

A sparkle from the bugle horn
Of scattered notes—the reveille!
A shout sent up to greet the morn
From millions' throats for liberty
And lo! the earth is thrilled to meet
The tramp and tread of marching feet.

A blare of bugles through the land
"To horse!" the call, 'tis full and clear,
A loosening of hand from hand;
A teardrop's fall; a kiss so dear!
A father's clasp, a mother's prayer,
A rose hid in the knapsack there.

A brazen boom of jarring guns;
To arms! Huzzah !the echoes wake!
For peace hath raised up fighting sons
To break her law for freedom's sake.
A flag undimmed of stripe or star
Above a host. This, this is war!
—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Uncle Sam to Gomez.

I am coming, Brother Gomez, I am coming with my boats,
An' my boats are rammed with thunder, yes, sir-ee!
An' I'm goin' to speak a little piece I think is rather cute;
I am coming, Brother Gomez. Wait for me.
I ain't much on palaver, an' I ain't no hand to talk,
But my guns are fluent speakers, an 'their lungs are never weak,
An' they're coming down to help you in your argument of guns;
They are coming, Brother Gomez, an' they've got a piece to speak.

I am coming, Brother Gomez, an' I've got a piece to speak,
An' no Spaniard will cry "Louder!" I shall speak sufficient plain;
An' my little recitation will be heard, I calculate,
An' will be distinctly audible in Spain.
I have got my piece committed, an' I reckon that I'll speak,
Though I'm not a man to bluster or to roar;
But my guns have got two voices, an' I think I'll talk through them,
An' I don't expect a call for an encore.

Old Glory.

Now let Old Glory's silken folds
Upon the morning breeze float free;
While bugle's note and war drum's roll
Call men to arms from sea to sea.
Stream out, proud banner, on the wind,
In every hero's heart enshrined!

The tide of war that rises now
Will stand at flood till every stain
Of martyred blood is blotted from
The riven wreckage of the Maine!
Float out, proud banner, brave and free!
The hero's guide to victory!

From every fortress by the sea,
On every mast and spar
Of battle-ships, a token be
Of victory in war.
Proud banner, float! Old Glory, wave!
O'er serried ranks of freemen brave!

Now let the haughty Spaniard feel
The lightning of our long-pent wrath;
The bolt that belches fire and steel
Will sweep the tyrant from its path.
Wave, wave, Old Glory, proud and free!
And perish Spanish tyranny!
—Washington Times.

"Remember the Maine."

When the vengeance wakes, when the battle breaks,
And the ships sweep out to sea;
When the foe is neared, when the decks are cleared,
And the colors floating free;
When the squadrons meet, when it's fleet to fleet,
And front to front with Spain,
From ship to ship, from lip to lip,
Pass on the quick refrain:
"Remember, remember the Maine."

When the flag shall sign, "Advance in line,
Train ships on an even keel;"
When the guns shall flash and the shot shall crash,
And bound on the ringing steel;
When rattling blasts from the armored masts
Are hurling their deadliest rain,
Let their voices loud through the blinding cloud
Cry ever the fierce refrain:
"Remember, remember the Maine."

God's sky and sea in that storm shall be
Fate's chaos of smoke and flame,
But across that hell every shot shall tell
Not a gun can miss its aim;
Not a blow will fall on the crumbling mail,
And the waves that engulf the slain
Shall sweep the decks of the blackened wrecks,
With the thundering dread refrain:
"Remember, remember the Maine."

Chickamauga—1898.

They are camped on Chickamauga!
Once again the white tents gleam
On that field where vanished heroes
Sleep the sleep that knows no dream.
There are shadows all about them
Of the ghostly troops to-day,
But they light the common campfire—
Those who wore the blue and gray.

Where the pines of Georgia tower,
Where the mountains kiss the sky,
On their arms the nation's warriors
Wait to hear the battle-cry.
Wait together, friends and brothers,
And the heroes 'neath their feet
Sleep the long and dreamless slumber
Where the flowers are blooming sweet.

Sentries, pause, yon shadow challenge!
Rock-ribbed Thomas goes that way—
He who fought the foe unyielding
In that awful battle fray.
Yonder pass the shades of heroes,
And they follow where Bragg leads
Through the meadows and the river,
But no ghost the sentry heeds.

Field of fame, a patriot army
Treads thy sacred sod to-day!
And they'll face a common foeman,
Those who wore the blue and gray.
And they'll fight for common country,
And they'll charge to victory
'Neath the folds of one brave banner—
Starry banner of the free!

They were camped on Chickamauga,
Where the green tents of the dead
Turn the soil into a glory
Where a nation's heart once bled;
But they're clasping hands together
On this storied field of strife—
Brothers brave who meet to battle
In the freedom-war of life!

Habit of Crack Walking.

A young lawyer in this town has a strange habit of ambling along the streets, now taking gigantic strides, again making mincing steps. Whenever he is seen doing this his acquaintances are sure that his mind is totally occupied with his thought. He is a confirmed crack walker. When his mind is free from business he walks quite naturally, because then he studiously avoids the cracks.

How he grew into the habit of walking sidewalk cracks he tells in this fashion:

"When I was a very little boy my old colored mammy told me that when walking on the sidewalk I must always step on a crack, else my mother would be poisoned. I had absolute faith in the old woman, and from that day until I was old enough to know better I never failed to step on a crack, while out walking. Then I found that I had acquired a habit that I could not easily break. And to-day, when my thoughts are occupied, I skip along on the flagstones, making astonishing leaps to alight on a crack. At other times I have to make an effort to keep from following an instinct. A habit like that, once formed, is not easy to break."

Are you a crack walker? A great many persons are.—Kansas City Star.

Gladstone's Books.

Mr. Gladstone is one of the most generous book-buyers in the United Kingdom, and when he is at home spends considerable time poring over book catalogues. He buys practically all the new books about witchcraft, dueling, gypsies, epitaphs, marriage, strange religions, Homer, Shakspeare, Dante, or whatever subject he may be studying at the time. He reads three books at a time—early in the day one which is quite difficult, in the afternoon a lighter topical work, and in the evening a novel. Of modern writers Stevenson is his favorite, Scott among the older ones; but he reads rapidly all sorts of novels by all sorts of people. The four authors who have had most influence on his mind are, he says, Dante, Aristotle, Bishop Butler, and St. Augustine.

Give Information Unintentionally.

In 1872, it will be recalled, Greeley had been nominated for the presidency and the news item was whether the Democrats would name a candidate, or, without indorsement, let partisans vote for Uncle Horace, or not at all. An old reporter spins this reminiscence: "The late August Belmont was then chairman of the National Democratic Committee. Every human effort had been made by the newspapers to get Mr. Belmont to express an opinion on the subject. Of course, the call for the National Democratic convention had to be made by the National Democratic Committee through its chairman. Not a member could be induced to say a word on the subject. So the idea began to grow that there would be no call for the convention. Consequently there would be no regular Democratic nominee in the field.

"I made up my mind," went on the political reporter of 1872, "to settle that question or die in the attempt. August Belmont was irascible, terribly so, when a newspaper man attempted to 'drag him out' on the subject he was determined to be silent about. 'You keep cool,' said the reporter to himself; 'the other side may, in anger, do the rest.'

"Well, that interview between Belmont and me," said the reporter of 1872, "was short. He was a bit lame, and the madder he got at the questions put to him the harder he pounded his Wall street office counter and the quicker he limped toward the passageway, which, fortunately for me, was at the counter end farthest from the street door, where I stood. If Belmont had ever reached that passageway I knew I would have had to make a bee-line for Wall street, or——

"Well, cool, calm, collected," continued the reporter, "I quietly remarked, as I put my hand on the door knob: 'Then, Mr. Belmont, judging from all you have said, you wish it to be distinctly understod that you will not issue a call for a convention!' The dear, good man, God forgive me, hadn't touched the subject. But he fell into the trap. Full of rage, like a lion, with a jump toward the passageway, he exclaimed: 'By heaven, you wretch, I shall call a convention!'

"That settled it. I was a block away before Mr. Belmont got anywhere near the doorway, and my paper had a fine story the next day about the 'Coming Convention of the Democrats.' Belmont often laughed about the matter afterward."—New York World.

Supreme Court Sustains the Foot-Ease Trade-mark.

Justice Laughlin, in Supreme Court, Buffalo, N. Y., has ordered a permanent injunction, with costs, and a full accounting of sales, to issue against Paul B. Hudson, the manufacturer of the foot powder called "Dr. Clark's Foot Powder," and also against a retail dealer of Brooklyn, restraining them from making or selling the Dr. Clark's Foot Powder, which is declared, in the decision of the court, an imitation and infringement of "Foot-Ease," the powder for tired, aching feet, to shake into your shoes, now so largely advertised and sold all over the country. Allen S. Olmsted of Le Roy, N. Y., is the owner of the trade-mark "Foot-Ease," and he is the first individual who ever advertised a foot powder extensively over the country. He will send a sample Free to anyone who will write him for it. The decision in this case upholds his trade-mark and renders all parties liable who fraudulently attempt to profit by the extensive "Foot-Ease" advertising, in placing upon the market a spurious and similar appearing preparation, labeled and put up in envelopes and boxes like Foot-Ease. Similar suits will be brought against others who are now infringing on the Foot-Ease trade-mark and common law rights.

Best Part of a Cemetery.

Probably few people know that there is a choice side to every cemetery. Thus, in some parts of the world, the eastern portion, without regard to its situation, is always deemed the most desirable. This preference arises from the old tradition that our Lord will appear from the east. It is also believed that the dead in the eastern portion will be the first to rise; then those in the southern, western and northern, in order. In England it was once the custom to bury felons and other bad characters on the north side of the church. The custom of laying the dead in a certain direction is responsible for the Welsh designation for the east wind, "The wind of the dead men's feet."

THE R'S OF FASHION.

THEY INDICATE RICH, RASH AND ROMANTIC.

Characteristics of Winter, Spring and Summer Attire Are Indicated—Bits of Daring Affected by Modish Dressers—Apparel for May and June Days.

Dame Fortune's Dictum.

New York correspondence:

RICH for winter, rash for spring and romantic for summer—these are the "three R's" of fashion. And as this is spring, it means that you must possess yourself of novelty, of something fresh and striking, something to suggest the coming of warm weather and consequent relief from the thralldom of furs and heavy attire generally. Illustrative of this was the waist sketched beside the initial, whose maker, with this spring's abundant cool days in mind, was particular to describe as a warm weather garment. It was of white taffeta, was fitted with demure severity, and its only trimming consisted of bands of the white embroidered with black. Stunning wide revers that served for shoulder finish, too, were made to match—that is, were covered closely with black thread embroidery. The result was charming, at once dashing and well judged. Harmony with the color scheme of the waist and with its dash was found in the hat that accompanied it, which was all black wings and white straw and tulle. The gloves were white, black-stitched, for such are again to be the thing. The entire result was just the relief from the sombre severity of winter that is most welcome in this in-between season.

THREE STYLISH STARTLERS.

It is in the new trimmings, rather than in the new stuffs, that spring's "R" is made apparent. A gown of pale gray cashmere sounds simple, but when made after the manner of the left-hand sketch of the three a-row, it is quite otherwise. When the skirt is trimmed with rows of tightly pleated narrow white satin ribbon, when the sleeves are white satin with closely pleated rows of black satin ribbon, and when the open-jacket effect of the bodice is completed by a most elaborate white chiffon front, then the simplicity becomes the daring kind that suits the season. It is accentuated, too, when the hat displays a dash of unexpected color. This one was rich in yellow and burnt orange, so the gown was fittingly topped.

A gown of russet brown canvas made up over orange silk is a dream for just now. It is as demure as can be, with just a glint of sunshine through the open mesh of the canvas when the outside skirt is down; but when she crosses the street and the outer skirt is lifted—that is another matter! Then, of a sudden, the tilted hat's wreath of brilliant nasturtiums in all the yellows and oranges that bloom knows becomes explained, the bronze of the hair takes double value, the delicate tea color of the gloves seem just right, and the reason for the tiny edge of deep butter lace that appears here and there is clear. It was this lace that made the daring touch at first glance. Orange satin ribbon trimming skirt and bodice contributed its share of dash, too, and another flash of orange came at the throat in the smoked chiffon yoke and crushed collar.

TRIMMING THAT SAVES FROM PLAINNESS.

In the final one of these three expressions of daring it was a trick of cut, rather than of trimming and stuffs. It was one of many gowns planned especially for street wear just now, when each hour of the day is likely to present a different temperature, which are made to suggest an overgarment. The belted redingote offers a graceful mode that is followed so cleverly sometimes that the princess effect is secured by continuing the trimming from above to below the belt, though the dress is really made in two pieces. A brown canvas gown made in redingote fashion will show at the throat where the canvas turns back a dickie of silk to match that of the drop skirt. Or, as in this model, by the management of a single sweep of trimming that seemed to outline the edge of the double-breasted redingote from throat to bust and from bust line down under the belt to reappear on the skirt, a demure high-necked garment was suggested as covering a gown beneath. Most women prefer to seem, at least, to have on some outer covering over the dress for the street, but just at this season, when an outer garment is likely to be burdensome, it is a clever idea to create the effect of such by the trimming of the gown. Bluet cloth was used in this model, the long line of trimming being a bias fold of white cloth, a piping of white cloth coming at the hem. Belt and collar were white satin.

HEIGHT TAKEN AND RETURNED.

Braid is applied effectively in groups of graduated rows, and a skirt thus trimmed with four or five groups of braid rows conforms to the demand for trimmed skirts, yet the becoming lines of the plain skirt need not be seriously interfered with. Putting other rows on bodice and sleeves easily brings above and below belt portions into harmony, and that's a point gained. Brown serge was thus trimmed with black braid in the third of to-day's illustrations. We have by no means given up the blouse bodice, and the open blouse showing an elaborated and much frilled filmy front beneath is especially pretty just now, suggesting a snug over-garment and a spring-like under-bodice. Green and red in the silk facing of the revers was all the bright color needed for this bodice.

Gowns are very cleverly designed for this season to present several novelties, and where one effect is calculated to take from height or slenderness, another is introduced to offset that. The dress made with what seems to be a series of skirts one over the other, the top one the shortest, is planned with petticoat effect in front to restore height, and with the lines of trimming continuous from skirt to bodice. Materials for the scheme as carried out in the concluding picture were a gray silk-and-wool mixed suiting, and black satin ribbon. The yoke and collar were smocked gray chiffon over gray silk, and the sleeves were black taffeta covered with wrinkled black chiffon. This skirt appeared to have two overskirts, but the top one was effect only. While women are combating the overskirt in any form, it would be a more than spring rashness on the part of a designer to include more than one in even the most ingenious of gowns.

A Curious Forest.

The most extraordinary forest in the world is one discovered by Dr. Welwitsch, which occupies a tableland some six miles broad, at a height of 300 feet or 400 feet above the sea, near the West coast of Africa. The trunks of the trees of this peculiar forest are four feet in diameter, and yet they only attain a height of one foot, giving the tree the appearance of a round table. There are never more than two leaves, which attain a length of six feet and a breadth of two feet, the flowers forming crimson clusters.

No thistles grew in Australia till a Scotsman planted some seed out of a love for his old country. It was a very natural but foolish deed, as now the thistle has multiplied into millions, and gives a great deal of trouble.

Don't play cards with a woman who has winning ways.

A VEGETABLE OGRE.

The Wild Fig Kills the Tree That Gives It Shelter.

But of all the vegetable inhabitants of the tropical woods the strangest is that one whose seed, it is said, will die if it falls upon the ground, and which only grows when it finds a resting place on the rock or a fence, or on another tree, where there is not a particle of earth or moisture; and in all the West India forests this tree is the greatest criminal. It has a long and beautiful Latin name, which, it might be supposed, would have some subduing influence upon it, but it does not seem to. This plant is the wild fig.

Let us imagine that some hungry bird, taking in its beak one of these figs, flies to a neighboring tree, and, alighting on a lofty branch, eats the fruit. One seed is left. The sun is warm and the air moist, and after a while the tiny germ begins to sprout, and the minute leaves, breaking their thin shell, shoot upward—tender little innocent, putting up its slender arms in a "please-help-me" sort of way, while its spider-like legs are reaching out to get a firm hold on its aerial home. The little plant seems so harmless, and the hospitable forest giant cannot know to what a robber and monster it has given a resting place. After a while the fig sends up a stem, and its root, peeping over the edge of the lofty branch, finds the ground, 80 or 100 feet below. But nature has endowed this sprig with daring, nud, nothing daunted, the slender thread drops slowly and boldly to the ground, and here takes root.

As the plant grows it lets fall other long feeders, one by one, which descend to the earth. Some of the tentacles have by this time found that the tree itself affords an easy descent, and one day a root starts along the branch, and, reaching the trunk, trips lightly down its spiral stairs, and thus reaches the soil. Others, finding this way so easy, follow, and so the roots increase in number and size, nourishing their master above. It has now grown in strength and vigor, and, wrapping themselves around the trunk of the tree that supports them, the roots strain and press upon it cruelly. It is a struggle for life, but their forest host is doomed. Slowly and surely they envelop it. The embrace of the fig is death. At last the great tree dies, and little by little, rotting branch by branch, it falls to pieces, and its place is taken by the ogre that has strangled it.

The wild fig belongs to the same family as the banyan. It is found in the East and West Indies and in Australia, and has the same destructive habits everywhere. Sometimes it grows to an immense size. The wood is soft, and the natives make bowls, trays and spoons out of it. The fruit is about as large as an apricot.—St. Nicholas.

National Guard Equipment.

The national guard of the State of New York is now furnished with the latest and most complete equipment used by any soldiery. It is a result of long study by militia officers and demonstrated by experience to be the best of its kind. In heavy marching order this equipment weighs not more than thirty-five pounds, and when in action is, of course, laid aside. In full it is as follows: A Merriam pack, haversack, canteen, web belt, mess kit, blanket, poncho and overcoat. The pack has been devised to do away with the old and cumbersome knapsack.—Washington Post.

A New System of Locomotion.

The tricycle cab or "Heyde" cycle, so named after its inventor, is a success in Berlin. The machine is a "rear-steerer," and between the two front wheels is a comfortably cushioned seat for the passenger, while the driver works the machine from the rear. The new system of locomotion has met with much favor, and five hundred of these tricycle cabs are now in use in the German capital.

A CHEERFUL WOMAN.

From the Democrat, Brazil, Ind.

Every woman cannot be beautiful, but a cheerful face often supplies the deficiency. But no one can be cheerful and bring joy to others unless they have perfect health. Fortunately, science has placed this priceless boon within the reach of every woman, as the following incident proves:

Mrs. Amanda Robinson, wife of William Robinson, farmer and stockman, near Howesville, Clay County, Ind., is 32 years old and had for several years been in declining health and despondent. For three months she was not only unable to attend to her domestic duties but too feeble to be up and about. To-day she is in good health and able to attend to her household affairs. She relates her experience as follows:

"I was afflicted with female troubles and was in a delicate state of health. I lost my appetite, grew thin and was greatly depressed. After taking various remedies without being benefited I was induced by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

A Priceless Boon.

"Early in the summer of 1897 I procured five boxes of them and before finishing the second box I began to improve and by the time I had taken the five boxes I was able to go about my usual work and stopped taking the pills.

"Our daughter Anna, 12 years old, was also afflicted with decline and debility. She lost flesh, seemed to be bloodless and had no ambition. She took two boxes of the pills and they restored her appetite, aided digestion and brought color to her cheeks. She is now in the best of health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People the best medicine we ever had in our family and recommend them to all needing a remedy for toning up and rebuilding a shattered system."

Baby Every Year.

Nineteen children in twenty years of married life is the record of one British mother reported in the Lancet. She never had twins and was able for thirteen years to nurse her babies without intermission. The Lancet describes her as a "thin but not worn-out looking woman."

The Death Rate.

While it is quite true that the proportion of deaths from malaria as an immediate cause is proportionally small, yet physicians are thoroughly convinced that it causes maladies of a fatal character, and begets dangerous nervous prostration. This malady is eradicated and prevented by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Compressed Flour Bricks.

In England much interest is taken by the army and navy authorities in a new method of preserving flour by means of compression. With hydraulic pressure apparatus the flour is squeezed into the form of bricks and experiments are reported to have shown that the pressure destroys all forms of larval life, thus preserving the flour from the ravages of insects, while it is equally secure from mold.—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE DAWN OF WOMANHOOD.

Earnest Words From Mrs. Pinkham to Mothers Who Have Daughters, and a Letter From Mrs. Dunmore, of Somerville, Mass.

The advent of womanhood is fraught with dangers which even careful mothers too often neglect.

One of the dangers to a young woman is belated menstruation. "The lily droops on its stem and dies before its beauty is unfolded;" or she may have entered into the perfection of womanhood with little apparent inconvenience or disorder of health. But suddenly the menses entirely cease.

Mother, puberic malady is taking hold of your daughter, and quick consumption may follow! Take instant steps to produce regular menstruation.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is certain to assist nature to perform her regular duties, procure it at once; there are volumes of testimony from grateful mothers who have had their daughters' health restored by its use. If personal advice is desired, write quickly to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. It will be given you without charge, and it will be the advice of abundant experience and success.

Read the following from Mrs. Charles Dunmore, 102 Fremont St., Winter Hill, Somerville, Mass.:

"I was in pain day and night; my doctor did not seem to help me. I could not seem to find any relief until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had inflammation of the womb, a bearing-down pain, and the whites very badly. The pain was so intense that I could not sleep at night. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a few months, and am now all right. Before that I took morphine pills for my pains; that was a great mistake, for the relief was only momentary and the effect vile. I am so thankful to be relieved of my sufferings, for the pains I had were something terrible."

WHAT A MOTHER SAYS

Of Dr. Hartman's Famous Family Remedy and Spring Tonic

Mrs. Hannah Lind, 1132 East Long street, Columbus, Ohio, is one of the many enthusiastic advocates of Pe-ru-na. She says: "For many years I was subject to nervousness, despondency and neuralgia, for which doctors and remedies seemed of no use. At last I was pesuaded to try Pe-ru-na. I found it to be exactly the remedy I had been so long in search of. It relieves the tired, depressed feeling felt in springtime at once. It never fails to restore to me natural appetite and the best of sleep. It has cured permanently my old despondency and neuralgia, and I wonder why so many people continue to suffer through spring and early summer when Pe-ru-na is such a prompt and perfect relief. As a family medicine I believe Pe-ru-na to have no equal." It relieves at once cramps, colic, prostration from heat, the ill-effects of sudden checking of the perspiration, and all other bad effects of hot weather. As a remedy for nervous prostration it has no equal, and the thousands of men and women of this generation who "have nerves" find it a priceless remedy.

POOR SOLDIER

Ligonier Daily Bulleton

Private George Slusser, of the Goshen company, did not take well to camp life at Indianapolis. He tried to get a pass to return home, giving all kinds of excuses. At last he started north. His money only carried him to Jonesboro where he started to drill to Goshen. The next day he arrived home on a freight still in full uniform. He gave as his excuse that he was afraid that he would not pass examination. George evidently got homesick.

SOLDIERS IN CAMP

And Co. K. is the Best of the Brigade

Thursday's Daily.

As already intimated the four regiments on the fair grouns were full as to numbers, or perhaps rather above the number. Add to these four regiments, the artillery brigade, the various staff officers, signal service, surgeons, ambulance men etc., it will be seen there were near 5000 men. When we stop to remember that at the great military parade made by the states and the United States at the World's fair opening there were in line only about 4000 all told, we can understand that Indiana made a pretty big showing at the drills and parades last Sunday.

THE PARADE DRILL.

Soon after the boys had had their dinners and things had settled down fairly to visiting they were called to "fall in" for the afternoon drills. They formed the companies and after a brief season of work, went to "battalion drill," in which the companies of each battalion, drilled by themselves. Then the battalions formed into regiments and later on all the regiments were displayed in the grand dress parade. The drills of all the larger bodies took place in the open ground in front of the grand stand, within the race track. From the start the tens of thousands of people in the grand stand watched and admired this magnificent spectacle. They saw, many of them for the first time in their lives, a large field, filled with briskly moving bodies of men all under perfect control, their uniforms showing dark blue in the sunlight, which flashed on their arms and accouterments, and still more sharply from the polished scabbards and bright sword blades that glittered all over the field. At this point it resembled the stirring view in the center field of the great panorama of the Battle of Gettysburg, which many of our readers have seen. It was an inspiring sight and many a sigh of regret went up as the patches of blue disappeared briskly from the field. There was but little time to wait till the grand combined spectacle of the dress parade and review came on. Then the entire regiments one after another moved out into the field, each with its band, its colors and its staff of regimental officers. The formations were rapidly made each regiment taking the position assigned. The second and Third were in place earliest and then came the Fourth, the First, owing to its location, and the way it had to go to get around into the field naturally had to follow the Fourth and was the last infantry to get in place, the first formation being along the north part of the grounds. Then came the Artillery of which there were three companies, then the march around to the south part of the grounds nearer to the grand stand, then as the companies, battalion and regiments were formed in proper order, came the review by the general commanding the brigade Gen. McKee and his staff. These were gorgeous in their epaulettes, and flashing swords, as well as the gaudy trappings of their spirited horses. Some, in fact many of them could not ride well, and some of the horses were not good riding horses, so that several gallant officers got a severe shaking up, and one or two came near being thrown. But altogether it was a pretty sight. All down the front of the long line of regiments they cantered, and as each new regiment was reached, the band of that regiment played, the men shifted their arms into position, and the cavalcade swept on to the next, whose band, again struck up a lively note. And so on it went all down the half mile of men. Then around to the rear, they passed and away on the extreme right or westend. Then after a short rest where they stood the call was made and one by one the regiments moved along the center of the field to the extreme west end of the grounds, then came around back to the east going near the track on the level stretch of ground in front of the grand stand, the three companies of artillery coming last of the large bodies of men. Then came the signal service corps, having but few men, they carrying the flags and other things used in that branch of the services. Following these marched the corps of surgeons belonging to the brifiade. They carried their square medicine and instrument cases strapped on something like haversacks. The last in the grand procession was the ambulance corps, in charge of the red cross order. This contained four men in the regulation uniform except that on the arm of the coats was the red cross which was also on the side of the ambulance. The last companies filed slowly from the grounds, and to their tents or the quarters in the buildings Then from over in the grounds where the artillery guns were parked, a big cannon boomed, and silence and rest came over the big camp ground. The day's pageant was over. The tired men went to much needed rest and the vast throng of people prepared to return to their homes. It had been such a military pageant as the state has not seen since the civil war, and such a one as will probably never be seen again.

Friday's Daily.

Much more might be said of affairs and persons at Camp Mount but these descriptive articles have already reached quite a length. So we will only add a few brief

NOTES.

The great number of excellent buildings on the fair grounds furnish good accomodations for every branch of the service. This gives good rooms for the various headquarters; for the storage and care of provisions, for the stabling of horses, not only those for use of officers but for the artillery horses as well. The trees furnish shade on warm days and the buildings shelter in times of rain. Altogether no better place could be had to turn suddenly into a military camp.

Everything possible is done to keep the camp clean and healthy. Each company cares for its own refuse from the tables, etc. by digging deep pits, into which the refuse is daily thrown and covered with a layer of [illegible] dry earth that was thrown out in digging it. In this way a trench will last some time, and then a new one can be made.

Co. I. of Waterloo has a man from Garret for Captain. But he is an original Waterloo man. It is Levi Denison, one of the Denison Brothers, ice dealers. He has for some time been a member of the company and since his removal to Garrett two or three years ago to accommodate their growing ice trade at that place, he has been driving up to Waterloo regularly to attend drill and other meetings. He is popular and will stick to his company though it will be a drawback to his business interests.

Capt. Gilbert of Angola, makes a fine looking soldier, and will stick to the boys and go to the front with them. He is an attorney and often comes to Auburn to practice in the court here. He is the present state senator representing the old district of Steuben and Lagrange and is really that troublesome "51st Senator," there has been so much talk about. If he goes into the service, that will vacate his office and leave only the constitutional number of 50 senators.

We met at Camp, besides so many Auburn boys, a son of L. C. Loveland of Newville and Charlie Weirick, son of Alf. Weirick of Garrett, Phil Holman of Cedar Creek, John Noel and many more we cannot recall.

At the grand review Sunday afternoon, one of the men in the First regiment fell from the heat and exhaustion. There was a quick, quiet signal and the ambulance was at his side. Two men jumped out, lifted the prostrate soldier onto a stretcher by "putting arms" under him, placed him gently and tenderly into the ambulance and took him north across the field till they reached the track. Then he was as gently lifted out and carried across the track to his village of white tents and placed in his own bed. "It was pretty near a sunstroke," answered one of the men in the wagon, "but he thought he could walk to his camp but we wouldn't let him" The ambulance men evidently wanted a little practice drill as well as the soldiers. But it was a humane act.

The cadets of the University of Vincennes in spite of their gray uniform are a fine looking lot of men. They are stalwart farmer boys who are students at the University.

Thursday's Daily.

—The Captain of the Columbia City Company at Camp Mount has sent home for ten recruits.

—The nickel social of the Presbyterian church will meet with Mrs. Forkner, tomorrow afternoon. A full attendance is desired.

—Columbia City went democratic by majorities running from 74 to 196. Kendallville went republican. All over the state, the voting was wild.

—Frank Kohr, the man who forged checks on the bank at Churubusco, goes to the pen on an indeterminate sentenced of one to fourteen years.

—Deputy Auditor Geo. Ralston, is suffering from an attack of rheumatism, which just struck him this morning. We hope it will not prove serious.

—Mrs. M. B Willis, went to Indianapolis this morning to visit a week or so with her son Lew. who resides there. Her daughter, Mrs. Will Eckhart and little son accompanied her.

—A man at Columbia City was so mad because a saloon man was on his ticket, that when he went to vote for the "other feller" he forgot the process of voting a "mixed ticket" and voted squarely for the saloon candidate.

—Kendallville had a war meeting Saturday evening last at which there were speeches and music as in the old days of the rebellion. At the close enlistments were called for and in a few minutes they had enrolled forty-seven names.

—Mrs. H. K. Scott came down from Angola yesterday afternoon, and after visiting her parents an hour or two, returned home on the evening train. She expects to go to Indianapolis today to visit her husband, who is adjutant of the Third Regiment.

—Our young friend Saunders Van-Auken, son of Hon. F. B. VanAuken, of Pleasant Lake is to be married at St. Clairsville, Ohio, May 11, to Miss Nina H. Mogan. Saunders is a young man of great promise, and the COURIER has only the best wishes for the future of himself and bride.

—If Ben Williams should come back now, he would admire the neat little grove of maples he took so much pains to set out. They are doing finely. The carp pond is in fair shape, and full of pond lily plants, but the water is not as high as it used to be, yet it is all kept in fair shape.

—Commissioners were in session today. They are arranging to put a new bridge across the little run that puts into Cedar Creek from the east crossing the street that runs south from Gas Addition near George Swanders. It washed out during the recent heavy rains, and became unsafe. They expect to put in a small steel bridge.

—Angola Herald:—Glen Clark, while riding with his brother in a road cart, last Saturday evening, was carrying a target gun which was accidentally discharged, shooting him in the breast. It is thought the result will not be serious, but had it struck him a little lower it might have proved fatal. Boys should not carry loaded guns that way.

—Wes. Lahnum came home last evening, being called home by the serious illness of his wife. He was accompanied home by three of the Auburn ladies who went down on the excursion Sunday; Mrs. Frank Joliff, Mrs. Capt. Lahnum and Mrs. Charlie Picker. Mrs Maj. Kuhlman remained, and will probably stay in the city till the boys leave for the front if they have to go.

—Mrs. Judge Best, and her sister Mrs. W. S. Best, started this morning over the B.&O on their return to their home at Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rose and Mrs. Warren Webster went with them as far as Chicago. They will be met at the Union Station in Chicago, by Mrs. Stough and a number of other old neighbors, so as to have a short reception for Mrs. Judge Best, who is still unable to get about easily, owing to injuries sustained by the fall she had sometime ago.

—Albion elected its entire democratic ticket last Monday, except one councilman.

—Commissioner Shoemaker says his son Scott is in a precarious condition, and he fears he will not be better at least not for some time.

—Rus Guilford has been employed off and on for a time making a number of shackles to put on the ankles of the prisoners who work on the streets. Rus can do any kind of work that comes up and is a handy man to have around.

—The Hicksville News has the following to say regarding one of the pioneers of Newville township. "Nathan Fuller, who went through the Mexican war as a youth, and who afterwards served throughout the Civil war, has by no means lost the fire of his youth."

—Charles K. Greene, a former treasurer of Noble county, and one of the several candidates for nomination for congress the first time Judge McClellan ran, is now in the gold mine business at Everett, Wash. He claims that the mountain districts up that way, are showing up valuable gold mines.

—Goshen city election went democratic, a very unusual thing in that stronghold of republicans, but there had been a great breaking of slates and old rings going on there recently. The mayor got 283 majority, and the others less, and one or two councilmen were republicans with small majorities.

—Charlie Borst starts for Vincennes next Monday to enter the great military school known as the "Vincennes University." He received his appointment as a cadet from Hon. C. M. Brown representative from DeKalb county. Charlie is a thorough student and good fellow, and we have no fears but he will keep close to the head.

—Charles Rugman is no better, to say the least. His eye is doing well and seems to be healing all right, but but it is believed the injuries on his head where he was pounded with a sandbag, have caused inflammation of the brain that may prove extremely troublesome. In the meantime all possible is being done for him and we can only hope for the best.

—St. Joe News:—Uncle Mose Perry met with a very serious and painful accident one day last week. While he was filing a saw the handle came off the file in such a way that the sharp point was pushed nearly through the palm of his hand, making an ugly wound. His arm and hand began to swell and it was feared that blood poisoning had set in, but at last reports it was a little better.

SAGINAW'S TURN.

Bert. Ellis, the Best Known Traveling Man in the Valley, Talks on a

SUBJECT OF PUBLIC INTEREST.

SAGINAW MICH.—Mr. A. G. Ellis, of this city, is probably the best known traveling man in Michigan. Nearly every one in Saginaw Valley knows "Bert" Ellis. For twenty years he has carried his samples and good nature to his many merchant friends, who are always glad to see him. But Mr. Ellis had trouble the same as other people. Twenty years of traveling, hardly two meals in the same place, or twice in the same bed, called at all hours of the night to make the next town, smoking probably to excess, are conditions which injured Mr. Ellis's health. He became nervous, his sleep broken, and restless; his stomach troublesome; his heart's action irregular, and his entire system debilitated. In speaking recently with your correspondent, Mr. Ellis said: "As the troubles I mentioned became more aggravating I decided to use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. The improvement in my condition was remarkable. I was able to secure restful sleep, my nervousness was overcome, stomach trouble corrected; theart's action became regular; in fact I became as well as ever, even in the face of the fact that I still smoke and continued to travel."

Mr. Ellis's experience is similar to thousands of traveling men and others who smoke to excess and are irregular and indiscreet in diet and sleep. There can only be one result—debilitated nerves. It is equally true that there is only one successful method of correcting such conditions.—Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer.

QUEER ELECTRICITY.

The Elkhart Review says that the city electrician noticed a queer thing the other night A couple of wires got crossed on the limb of of a tree, and made a big fuss and light till one burned in two. Then the wet tree, for it was a wet night, kept up the circuit and finally the earth became charged with electricity, for when the man approached the tree he felt, first a light shock, then a stronger one and he fell to the ground, doubled up and may have lost his life, but for the timely passing by of some men who managed to get him away.

A BIG BLUNDER.

A young lady recently whipped a editor of a western paper for getting a write-up of a concert company and a stock item mixed as follows: "The concert given by sixteen most beautiful young ladies was highly appreciated. They sang in the most charming manner, winning the plaudits of the entire audience who pronounced them the finest bred shorthorns in the country. A few are of rich brown color, but the majority are spotted, brown and white. Several of the heifers are able-bodied and fine limbed animals, and promise to prove good property.

HOME AGAIN.

The DeKalb boy gets home when the opportunity occurs. We were agreeably surprised this morning by a call from Job A. Reinoehl of Fairfield. We hardly recognized him at first. Job went to Los Angeles in December of 1895 and since then has been employed in a store at Alhambra, about 9 miles from that city. His brother-in-law, S C. Urey, had also gone there, but had gone in the hope of benefit to his failing health. Mr. Urey had been in the ministry for a time; but was compelled finally to give this up, and then when Mr. Reinoehl came back, he and his family came home also. They reached Ashley over the Wabash April 24 They bring word that the outlook for crops in southern California is not good. The usual rainy season of January and February, failed to bring much rain. And a recent letter shows they have had little or no rain this spring. This means a short crop Some things, like hay, have already rise in in price, that article being now $18 a ton. But when it gets that high, they can get plenty of it shipped in from other states. Mr Reinoehl met Mr. Eckhart several times, when the latter was at Los Angeles last winter.

Oaths of Volunteers.

Whether these volunteers consist of National Guardsmen or of enlisted men, they are required to take the following oaths:

I do hereby solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America, and faithfully against all enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and the orders of the officers appointed over me according to the articles of war.

This puts the men in the same category as the regular army so far as any foreign service is concerned.

MILLIONS GIVEN AWAY

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on H. B. McCord Druggist, and get a trial bottle free. Regular size 50 cents and $1. What Trustees May Do.

An important case relative to the powers of trustees, and which is of more or less interest to school patrons in this county, was recently decided by the supreme court of Indiana.

The trustee of a township can not be prevented by injunction from discontinuing a school in any of the school districts of his own township and redistricting the township so as to accommodate the children and other schools, where the number of children attending the different schools is so small that the interests of economy demand that they should be accommodated in fewer schools, and the new arrangement will not require any child to go an unreasonable distance to school.

The act of 1893, forbidding a township trustee to change the location of a school house does not affect his right to discontinue a school when he thinks it is for the best interests of the public. The plaintiff in the case at issue claimed to have eight children of school age and objected to having them assigned to a school further from his home than the abandoned school

BLOW TO WEDDING GUESTS.

The very latest fashion in connection with wedding cake is not to have it piled up on a table in the hall, with each individual little box tied with white satin ribbon, and the monograms of the bride and groom stamped in gold on the top of it, but to have a very large, ornamented bride cake on the table where the collation is served This cake is cut in slices and put into small wedge-shaped boxes, which fit one into the other, so that the whole affair, when covered with icing, sugar devices and figures, surmounted by perhaps an appropriate emblem for the occasion, looks exactly as if it had not been disurbed at all. When it is time to cut the cake, the bride places a knife into one of the crevices between the tiny boxes, and removes one herself. The rest are then handed about among the guests. There is perhaps, a good reason for this new style of serving the bride cake. It certainly does away with the possibility of one person carrying home more than one box of wedding cake to dream on.—From "Society Fads," by Patty de Peyster, in Demorest's Family Magazine for May.

No other liniment that I ever used did me so much good."

DEMAND FOR MUSICIANS

There is a demand for musicians in the Indiana Brigade. Colonel Studebaker, of the Third Regiment, says he thinks all the men who will apply and can play an instrument in a brass band can be provided with something to do. He says that the musicians who desire to enter the service should apply to the colonels, when they will be enlisted as any other soldiers are, and will at once be attached to a band. The Third Regiment would like to have enough men enlist to form a complete band. Twenty men are allowed to each regimental band, and they are under the supervision of the adjutant of the regiment. Each band has a drum-major. The adjutant fixes the hours of rehearsal. The government provides the musicians with uniforms, food and sleeping quarters. The bands play at guard mount, regimental and brigade drills and at reviews. During the time the soldiers have been at Camp Mount it has been demonstrated that band music will be popular during the war. All the bands have played Sousa marches and many popular songs, which the troops can follow in stepping off the time. National airs have also been heard, as well as "Dixie," and others which were familiar in the South during the rebellion.

SUPPLEMENT TO

The Auburn Courier.

Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana. Thursday, May 14, 1898

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Monday's Daily

As indicated in the COURIER Saturday the news going over the country that day proved to be correct Dewey's dispatches sent to Hong Kong, reached Washington Saturday evening. He had entered Manila Bay, just as the Spaniards had admitted, coming in the darkness of the early morning May 1. He showed no lights and though fired on at the harbor entrance, kept on At daylight he attacked the Spanish fleet and destroyed eleven of the thirteen The other two escaped up a river. Spanish lost about 1000 killed and wounded. We had eight men wounded none killed and damage of about $1000 done to our fleet

Dewey needs meno to land and hold the city which is at his mercy and has no doubt surrendered before this.

In the Atlantic, the Spanish fleet we were waiting for has been seen coming this way and as our fleet is looking for them, a fight may have already taken place or may take place at any hour. Both fleets are much stronger than those at the Phillippine Islands.

Reports are going through today that the fleets are fighting now. This may happen to be true, but it does not seem possible that we could have got news so quick, of a fight which may take place some distance from land

Our Volunteer troops are, a part at least to form a camp near Washington D. C. partly to defend the capital and to be ready whenever needed.

We will likely land a strong force on Cuba soon.

Volunteer Camp to be established at Chickamauga for a large body of men. Indiana soldiers may go there.

Reported sea fight off Cape Haytien, Santo Domingo Saturday evening. A big Spanisa cruiser said to be chasing a smaller American warship. But this is not yet confirmed.

Rumored that an American merchantman has been captured off Santo Domingo.

THE BABY SHOW.

Mrs. Barns reached home in safety yesterday evening after having assisted at the baby show at Columbia City Saturday. It was a wonderful affair. The total number entered was 175 and a great many were brought in after the lists were closed. Besides so many babies and mothers, the attendance of friends of the Fathbone sisters was very large and the large court room was filled to suffocation. A hundred babies were liable to "give tongue" at one and the same time, but after all were a pretty nice lot. They were divided into classes. Class A took in those under 6 months; class B from 6 to 12 months; class C from one to two years, there being a second and third in each Then there was a class for the best natured, and for twins, etc. etc. so that in all twenty-five prizes were given. The judges made up their record and escaped from the room, not daring to face the other 150 mothers. Still we hear of no especial disturbace.

Was 'Tother Way

It will be remembered that Mr. Ernst in examining the books of Steuben county reported that Lorenzo Taylor, one of the Ex-treasurers of that county, owed the county $190. A suit was commenced against him and his bondsmen and came to trial last week. After a full and fair trial, it was decided by the jury that it was the county that owed Taylor, finding a balance of $55 in his favor.

AN INTELLIGENT DOG.

Geo. Swineford heard some small boys say they had seen snipe in the creek bottom near the old cemetery. He took his gun and dog and started to find them Much to his surprise four birds were pointed by the dog a little south of 9th-st. bridge. The one he shot fell on the opposite side of the creek. He forced the dog in the water and finally got him to swim across. The dog got the bird and plunged in the water to return, disappearing from sight When he reappeared he still had the bird and swam with it to his master.

OFF EOR WAR

As noted in COURIER Saturday, the men who were enlisted by Mr. McIntosh, took the 9 03 a m train on the Wabash yesterday for Indianapolis. They were nineteen in all, including two re-enlistments of the boys who had come home the middle of the week, Tom Stoy and Frank Reesch. There was quite a crowd present to see them off, and bid them good by as well as send messages to the boys already in camp. The new men are mostly good sized, large men and will be apt to pass examination.

Timely Topics.

Written for the COURIER.

Free silver was a fine young man
And soon came into bloom,
But now he is closed like a clam
But he died a one too soon.

And now gold standard reigns supreme
The friend of all rich men.
But how does it come, he's neve seen
And in fact has never been.

But these were crowded both aside
When Klondike took the stage,
And many have gone there and died
For Klondike's all the rage.

But Klondike now may sink or swim
And lose his golden fame,
Now no one seems to care for him
All eyes are turned to Spain.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

There are so many islands in the Philippines that the exact number is unkuown. There are nine very large ones—Luzon, Panay, Zebu, Leyte, Bohol, Negros, Samar, Mindanao and Mindoro—with more than 1,200 smaller ones. They have an entire area of over 120,000 square miles and a population of about 7,500,000. And here again is found the old story—Spanish officials have ruled with a rod of iron, and the worm has turned. Manila' the capital of the Philippines and the chief city of Luzon, contains a population of 330,000, principally Spanish creoles, Chinese half breeds and the original natives. The bay of Manila, the largest and finest in the world, could offer anchorage to the united fleets of Europe.

VANDOLAH STABBED.

A letter from Hub Vandolah to his wife here says he was stabbed a few days ago at Princeton by a negro. There was a dispute and the negro broke a club over his head, and then stabbed him. He is now improving.

A CONVICTS LETTER.

He Wants to Fight for the Government of Uncle Sam.

Chaplain Carstensen, of the Second regiment, now stationed at Indianapolis has received the following letter from a convict in the Michigan City prison:

"Dear Chaplain—A state prison may be a rather strange place from which one offers his services of secretary or personal serveant, but conditions make it thus with me or not at all. For almost three years I have acted as secretary for the chaplain of this prison, and have been honored with the presidency of our prison Christian Endeavor society for two and one-half years. I have just turned my fortieth year, am strong and healthy. If you could use such an assistant, would you on the recommendation of ..... and othars equally well known feel like taking the liberty of asking Governor Mount to extend to me clemency to become your personal helper? My time will not expire until next year, but I am afraid by that time Spain opportunity and all will be gone. The charge for which I am serving time was for shooting with intent to kill, so there would be no occasion for keeping the lock on the chicken coop."

The letter excited much favorable comment at the regimental headquarters, and Chaplain Carstenseen said that he would look into the man's case, and if it was as he represented, he would go to Governor Mount with his letter.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

The five year old son of J. R. Baker, a B. & O. engineer was run over and instantly killed by a traction engine at Garrett Saturday evening at 6 o'clock. The little fellow was trying to get on from behind and failing in this, then ran around to one side when he was thrown off. The large rear wheel passed over his head crushing it. His brains were taken up with a shovel. It was one of the most terrible accidents that have happened there and should be a warning to boys everywhere.

atriotism of Roman Catholics.

(Times Herald.)

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Since the beinning of the war with Spain, and escially since the Jordon dispatches ecently attacked the patriotism of the oman Catholic hierarchy of the Unitd States. the archbishops and bishops ave been devising some method of aking their position clear before the eople of America. They have finally greed to issue a circular letter adressed to the clergy and laity of the oman Catholic church in the United tates. This letter will be read in evry church in the country next Sunday.

It declares that the duty of loyal merican Roman Catholics, next to heir duty to God, is patriotically to support their country in the war with pain. It directs the priests of the hurch to pray daily for the soldiers nd sailors who mav fall in battle, and or a glorious victory that shall restore eace. The circular has been indorsed y Mgr. Martinelli, apostolic delegate, nd reads as follows:

To the clergy and laity of the Catholic church of the United States, Greeting:—

The events that have succeded the lowing up of the battle ship Maine nd the sacrfice of 266 innocent victims he patriotic seamen of the United tates, have culminated in war between pain and our own beloved country.

Whatever may have been the indiidual opinion of Americans prior to he declaration of war, there can now e no two opinions as to the duty of very loyal American citizen. A reort to arms was determined upon by he chief excutive of the nation with dvice of both houses of congress and fter consultation with his cabinet oficers, but not until every effort had een exhausted to bring about an honrable and peaceable solution of our ifficulties with Spain. The patient almness, the dignified forbearance, the ubdued firmness of President McKinley during the trying time the intervened the destruction of the Maine and he declaration are beyond all praise nd should command the admiration of very American.

We, the members of the Catholic hurch, are true Americans, and as uch are loyal to our cõuutry and our lag and obedient to the highest decrees and the supreme authority of he nation. We are not now engaged in war of section against section or state gainst state, but we are united as one gainst a foreign enemy and a common foe. If, as we are taught by our holy church, love of country is next to love of God, a duty imposed upon us by all laws, human and divine, then it is our duty to labor and to pray for the temporal and spiritual well being of the brave soldiers who are battling for our beloved country.

Let us faithfully beg the God of battles to crown their arms on land and sea with victory and triumph and to stay unnecessary effusion of blood and speedily to retore peace to our beloved land and people.

To this end we direct that on and after the receipt of this circular and until the close of this war every priest shall in his daily mass pray for the restoration of peace by a glorious victory for our flag. We also direct that prayers for the brave soldiers and sailors that fall in battle be said every day after a mass. These prayers shall be said aloud with the people and shall be one Our Father and one Hail Mary and the De Profundis.

We pray that God may bless and preserve our country in this great crisis and speedily bring victory, honor and peace to all our people.

As this letter will reach every member of the Catholic church in the next week, the archbishops hope to accomplish much good by its means.

Third Regiment Items

The Third regiment of which Co' K. is a part, was the first one to fill and start south, probably today. The new recruits will be uniformed and armed at once. The state will furnish needed clothes to all.

Lieut. May of the Fifteenth regulars, who has been mustering them in, will be the new lieutenant-colonel, in place of Col. Bowman of Waterloo, whose health has been for some time, so poor, that he could not go.

The Third will probably be the first Indiana regiment to muster into the service of the general government, and will therefore become the 157th, the next will be the 158th, and so on. The reason they are numbered this way, is, that Indiana, as a state, sent five regiments to the Mexican war, then 151 to the war of the Rebellion, the first sent to the Rebellion, being number 6, and so on up to 156, and now we go with 157 etc.

MR. SAWVEL HERE

Reuben Sawvel came home this morning, on the B. & O. train accompanied by S. M. Dean, one of the prison guards. He is here as a witness in the trial of Perry Fair now going on at Angola. They came over four roads, on five trains. First they left Michigan City and under direction of the warden, went to Laporte over the L. E. & W. road. Then they took the Lake Shore to Kendallville, then the Grand Rapids to Avilla, then got a train that stopped at Garrett, and from there took the early freight to Auburn. Mr. Dean, like all the guards who have come down here, is a gentlemanly official. They bring word that Mr. Borst is having better health, and Frank Dills is enjoying good health. They went to Angola on the noon train.

Boys Come Back

Last evening the boys were rejected at the examination of Company K. came home. There were twenty-three in all, and the list includes not only those who were members of the company, and some of the recruits who went down last Sunday with Mr. McIntosh, but one or more, who were not directly attached but had been serving in some capacity in the camp. This is the list.

Geo Clark,	W. Cutter,
Tom Stov	Leonard Roby
Saxby McIntosh,	John Cupp,
Andy Wolf,	Walter Hosack,
Ira Livergood,	H. Lobmiller,
Dan Yingling,	Harry Green.
Len Yingling,	C. Kolbe,
Ora Miller,	Charles Weirick,
Wm Strouse,	E. J. Rickard,
Ed Mason,	Frank Carle,
Osa Maxwell,	Ora Smith,
Mort Reader.

Geo. Clark was not expecting to go unless as had been arranged that he should be clerk for Lobmiller, and when Lobmiller was rejected and the company was full any way, Mr. Clark was not examined, as he could not have gone any how, unless he had enlisted in some other company that needed men.

BUTLER.

Mrs. Jerry Barber is slowly improving from a long period of dangerous illness. Her brother Ira Richmond of Hart, Mich. is reported dangerously ill from lung fever.

Mrs. Hamilton of Angola Sundayed with her daughter Mrs. R C. Campbell She, accompanied by Mr. Campbell, his wife and daughter Vera, drove through to Napoleon, Ohio to visit friends there, the fore part of the week.

Considerable corn has already been planted but the cold wet weather of the past week prevented any germinating of the seed.

Brighter days seem to have come.

J. A. Campbell visited Auburn and Garrett last week.

The new town Board has met and organized and succeeded in making a patched up settlement with the ex-marshal.

John Wilson continues to deliver goods for A. S. Morse.

The books have not yet materialized and many jumbles will follow as quite a number of persons hold tax receipts which the books may show delinquent.

The young people's meeting at the Christian church last Saturday was largely attended. The excercises were interesting and instructive. The concert in the evening by the children of that school was a grand success, many of the little folks showing rare talent. It was conducted by Rev. Thomas assisted by Pearl Gates of Steuben county.

NEW INDUSTRY

A Plumbing Co has been organized in Auburn. Their are parties who have been following this line of work in Garrett, and will make a specialty of house plumbing and bath room work, and every thing in that line. They will occupy the room south of Fischler's, lately occupied by the Bazar store of Mr. Nebeluney. Anyone can see what demand there will be for work of this kind, when the waterworks are in. Everybody will need their services, anr this will add one active business to Auburn's industries.

WABASH EXCURSION.

The Wabash road will run an excursion to Indianapolis next Sunday May, 15, leaving Auburn at 5:30 a. m. and returning leave Indianapolis at 7 p. m. Fare for round trip from Auburn $1.50.

SHENANDOAH.

Great Production of "Shenandoah" at McVicker's Theater, Chicago.

The announcement that Jacob Litt is to begin his career as manager of McVicker's Theater, Chicago, with the finest production of "Shenandoah" ever given in this country is borne out by the authoritative statement that Mr. Otis Skinner, the well known star, has been engaged to play the leading role. Mr. Litt has prevailed upon Mr. Skinner to relinquish his starring tour and join the big company he is now organizing for the summer run of "Shenandoah," which begins Sunday, May 15th, at McVicker's. Great preparations are being made for this attraction by Manager Litt. Over two hundred people and fifty horses will be employed on the stage and the presentation will excel in scenic splendor anything ever before attempted. The cast is also a notable one comprising such well known artists as Mary Hampton, Nannette Comstock, Frank Burbeck, Louis Hendricks, R. A. Roberts, Augustus Cook, Lottie Alter, and many others. The present war excitement makes the production of this great war play at this time especially appropriate.

—Mrs. Ann Culbertson and Bert Robbins went over to Winona today, to get the cottage ready for occupancy. Mrs. Robbins goes Saturday.

—We had expected a treat, but were more than agreeably surprised at the marvelous skill of our sightless entertainers. Noter Dame, Scholastic, Ind. Dec. 5, 1896.

—Mr. and Miss McCay, brother and sister who are both blind gave an interesting entertainment in the Brownson reading room on Thursday. The program was mainly a musical one, interspersed with jokes and stories, which Mr. McCay got off in his one inimitable manner. We could not help but smile at the song, "A Jolly good laugh," and every Sorin Haller recognized the correctness of imitation of a Music Box. "The Bell's of St. Mary's" was greeted with delight. Specialties were introduced in honor of "Shamus," "Bostang," "Brownie" "Lengthy," and "Landers," which were duly appreciated by the audience. The vocal duet "Most Beautiful Night" was so suggestive that "Vic" went to sleep. The whole program, in fine, left nothing to be desired.

SIR:—Maybe you think we don't miss you, Saxby, but I tell you we do. Well, I will have to quit chewing the rag and get down to facts and make them small too. We now have a 157th regiment band, and J. This is the official list of names of officers and enlisted men of Co. K, 157th U. S. Indiana Volunteers.

Well, Saxby, I guess I will write a little more if I can think of anything. One good, big job I just got rid of was the pay and muster roll; I tell you it was an awful hard job; we had four sets to make out and the men had to sign all four of them and we worked last night till 12:30 and I stood up all forenoon and showed the men where to sign their names. We made out a return for shoes, stockings, shirts and underclothes today for the men, but we have to buy our own, I do not know yet what kind the officers will get The officers have to buy everything that they wear, eat and use. We just had orders to go swimming and you ought to go along—that is you ought to be here to go. Well, Saxby, old boy, I can't think of anything more, so good bye for this time.

Kindly remember me to all, especially to my folks.

Slugged the Nightwatch

(Kendallvill Sun.)

B. Kollman, the nightwatch, was found about two o'clock on Sunday morning, lying on the sidewalk on Main street, in an unconscious condition. A large gash was found on his forehead and he was otherwise bruised. Marshal Berhalter was notified and soon had Joe West of Lagrange, in custody, and Mr. Graves deemed the offense too serious for a fine and he was sent to jail. He had been employed in the galvanizing department of Flint & Walling shops for some time past He had been spending the evening and night at the billiard room in the Wehmeyer basement and it is presumed he was offended by the nightwatch, who had ordered the place closed a short time before. It was a dastardly act and demands severe punishment In further consideration of the matter the question naturally arises, "Why are not billiard rooms closed up before that hour?"

A Truthful Statement.

An excellent and invaluable remedy, for the cure of cough, cold and hoarseness, is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and Mr. Jas. Hadfield, 350 West St., New York City, verifies this statement. He writes: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is a most excellent remedy for cough, cold and hoarseness, and I take great pleasure in recommending it to all, who require such a valuable household medicine." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents.

HOW THE THIRD GOT THERE

Strenuous Efforts Put Forth to Be the Ranking Regiment.

Indianapolis Journal: When a member of the Third regiment rolled over in his sleep Tuesday night and waked up he chuckled at the march the regiment had stolen over the Second, and the elation at becoming a real United States soldier was doubled by the knowledge that when the Second and Third regiments and Battery A move to the South the Third will be the ranking regiment and Col. Studebaker in command of the body until it reaches the point of rendezvous and is swallowed up among thousands of troops from all over the country. Behind all this is a story, a cause, a story of a night of hard work and desperate effort to fill up all companies and make out the reports before the officers of the Second regiment had completed the corresponding work in their regiment.

Colonel Studebaker said Tuesday night: "It was a race and we won it. Monday I went through the regiment and explained the matter to the officers and the men. As a result all the new recruits were at once transferred around until the companies were filled. Then came the word from Lieutenant May that there was a great deal of clerical work in the way of making out extra reports to be done before the regiment could be mustered. I then detailed a big force of men for clerks and nearly all the night we labored together and the result was that early Tuesday morning I was able to take the reports to Lieutenant May and say, 'We are ready to be mustered.' We were mustered into the federal service first and, therefore, we will be the ranking regiment in the detachment."

The spirit of Colonel Studebaker induced competition between his companies for the honor of being the first ready to be mustered and Captain N. W. Gilbert, of the company from Angola, was the first to present his report to the colonel.

ALL FOR OUR COUNTRY.

Patriotism is vigorous in all parts of the country. Auburn is not behind in the procession either, for not only are our business houses and residences aglow with flags, but our boys, even our little fellows have caught the "spirit of '76." At the north end, the other day, little Charlie McClellan, Donald Schaab and Victor McCord, were sailing around with flags, and shouting with shrill voices, "Remember the Maine." And they can't get anyone to "be Spaniard" now. Yesterday little Edmund Richards came home from school boiling mad and crying as if his heart would break. "What is the matter?" asked his mother. And the answer, between sobs was, "Elton Yesbera and the other boys say I stick up for the Spaniards. And I don't no such a thing." There are plenty of lads coming on who are ready to take the places of those now at the front, if the war lasts long enough The spirit of war is abroad in the land.

It is if you are plagued by pimples or bothered by boils, if your skin is blotched by eruptions or your body eaten by sores and ulcers. You can have good blood, which is pure blood, if you want it. You can be rid of pimples, boils, blotches, sores and ulcers. How? By the use of

TROOPS AT TAMPA

Sampson's Fleet Bombards the Capital of Porto Rico.

THE FIRST REVERSES MET

In the Ill-Planned Attack On Cardenas—Dispute in Camp Mount.

Thursday's Daily.

Troops at Tampa being made ready to go to Cuba, and a force is being prepared for the Philippines. Large amounts of provisions and supplies of all kinds being purchased.

The battleship Oregon is nearing home and is now safe from capture.

It is believed that Havana will be shelled and taken, also Porto Rico, and both Spain and ourselves are getting ready to re-enforce the Philippines.

The ship that left Tampa with troops Tuesday, has landed them about fifty miles from Havana. It is believed another ship or two will follow with arms and supplies for the Cubans.

Nothing heard from Sampson's fleet nor from the Spanish fleet. It is now denied that the Spanish fleet went home. Some believe they are still on the ocean some where.

Reported today that a Spanish torpedo boats has been blown up.

Friday's Daily.

We have met our first reverse, in the ill-planned attack on Cardenas, a city of Cuba, east of Havana and east of Matanzas. Three of our small cruisers, the Hudson, Winslow and Wilmington made the attack, went into the harbor, found the Spanish ships anchored at the dock, and so having a chance to fire steady shots. The Spanish forts around the harbor, helped their ships and fire was concentrated on the Winslow. A shell exploded on her deck killing five men and wounding several others. The Winslow was towed out of range amidst Spanish cheers. It is thought the attack under such disadvantages was unwise.

Dewey sends another dispatch from Manila. He still holds the harbor and those forts he had destroyed at first and has possession of the arsenal and its stores. The stores, ammunition etc. he is putting on his own ships and is hauling up the best cannon on the sunken Spanish ships and putting them into ships of his own. He believes in saving all he can. He has also caught and destroyed the smaller gun boats that escaped from him in the great battle. He is evidently fortifying and making his fleet strong enough to hold his own even if a new fleet should get after him. But it is said that Spain has but two other warships on the Pacific.

Camp Mount is like a house divided against itself. The two regiments not yet mustered into the service of the United States are still under state laws and are commanded by Gen. McKee. But the two regiments now sworn in for Uncle Sam's service are under command of Col. Studebaker of the Third, now 157th U. S. The Governor says it is his duty to run the camp by having all under his orders and quotes law for it. He is probably right.

A German merchant ship was chased by a Spanish gun boat off Halifax evidently thinking it was an American, but she was fast enough to get away.

The battleships Iowa and Indiana were the first to engage the forts at San Juan, Porto Rico.

Reported now, that the Spanish fleet is headed toward the New England coast. If so, they may cause some trouble.

The cable from Manila to Hong Kong has been repaired now and news can be sent through.

News from the Phillippines that at a square fight between the U. S. ship Concord and a Spanish cruiser, lasting two hours, the latter was sunk.

Gen. Merritt will be made temporary governor of the Phillippine Islands.

Troops are moving from Chickamauga to Tampa.

Orders have been changed a second time, and now our Indiana men are to go to Chickamauga instead of New Orleans.

The other two regiments of Indiana National Guards were mustered into the U. S. service last evening, and that ends the Indiana National Guard. It also ends the senseless quarrel between Gov. Mount and the federal authorities.

Saturday's Daily.

Spanish steamer Rita has been captured and taken to Charleston, S. C. She had taken a load of coal from Spain to Porto Rico.

It is believed the Spanish loss at San Juan on Porto Rico, was heavy. Their forts were knocked to pieces and many houses were destroyed by stray shots.

The Spanish fleet did not go back to Cadiz. It has turned up at the island Martineque about 300 miles from where Sampson's fleet is at Porto Rico It is now said that both of our fleets, Sampson's and Schley's are to go after the Spanish fleet, and there is likely to be a hot battle soon.

DISCOVERED BY A WOMAN.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undertermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's drugstore. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. 4

U. S. BATTLESHIP INDIANA.

About the finest and most formidable ship in our navy is the one named for our state. A former Goshen man now on the Indiana writing from Key West, says of it:

As you can see by the heading, I am on one of the best ships in the navy, named after your state. I was lying in the harbor of Charlotte Amelia, in the island of St. Thomas, when we heard of the Maine disaster. I was in the training ship Annapolis, on a cruise among the West Indies. We four more ports to make before we had reached Key West, our first American port. The twenty-sixth of March I, with nineteen others, was transferred to the Indiana. We had sent all but three of our thirteen boats ashore, mess chests, and nearly everything aboard that was moveable We rigged up three auxiliary flagstaffs so in case of action we would have plenty of flags flying. We were kept very busy for a long time but when we left Key West for Havana the officers gave us all the time to ourselves we wanted. The fleet consisted of nine ships and four torpedo boats. We captured a ship before we had lost sight of land. The New York captured a steamer and sunk a Spanish dispatch boat the same day. That night the fleet scattered and prevented any ships from leaving or going into Havana. The Marblehead cut a cable connecting Cuba with Porto Rico, and the torpedo boat Porter went up under the guns of Moro Castle and heard the sentry pass the hail, "All's Well," and was back before they knew it. The Puritan was fired on from a fort at Matanzas and it took her just eighteen minutes to silence the fort's guns. We captured a Spanish steamer while we were on our way to Tortugas to coal up. Each enlisted man's share of the money that the ship brings will be about $500. That is only part of the prize money that we are to get. We are going to coal up either this afternoon or tomorrow and then join the flying squadron and proceed to Porto Rico to meet the Spanish fleet that is coaling up and taking on provisions. The fleet will consist of the cruisers New York, Brooklyn, St. Paul, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Columbia, Cincinnati, Marblehead, Detroit and Montgomery; the battleships Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Oregon and Texas; gunboats Helena, Wilmington, Castine, Machias and Marrietta; monitors, Puritan, Terror and Amphitrite; torpedo boats, Porter, Dupont, Cushing, Erricsson, Winslow and Foote; torpedo boat destroyers, Mayflower, Hornet, Wasp and Eagle. You can see we will have quite a fleet.

SAMSON'S DISPATCH.

The fight at San Juan on Porto Rico is officially told by Admiral Sampson in his report dated Feb. 12 at St. Thomas, one of the Danish islands just east of Porto Rico. He says:

A portion of the west Atlantic squadron, under my command, reached San Juan this morning at day break. There were no armed vessels found in the port. As soon as it was sufficiently light, I commenced an attack upon the batteries defending the city. The attack lasted about three hours and resulted in much damage to batteries and incidently to a portion of the city adjacent to them. The batteries replied to our fire without material effect One man was killed on board the New York and several slightly wounded in the squadron No serious damage was done to any ship.

SAMPSON.

LAYMEN WIN

The spring conferences of the Methodis, Episcopal church have all been held and the vote on the proposition for equal lay representation is: For 3,287, against 937. The vote last year was: For, 1,459; against 2,665. Fifteen foreign conferences are yet to be heard from and the voting of fall conferences will not begin until the first of September. The propositon, however, has already received 119 more votes than the necessary three fourths to carry.

OBITUARY

George Washington Garrett was born near Cedarville, Ind., on the 3d day of February 1865, and departed this life at the home of his mother in Cedarville May 12, 1898, at the age of 33 years, 3 months and 9 days George lived with his parents until 1892, when went to Iowa where he remained two years. In 1894 he came to Auburn, Ind., where he lived with his nephew, Milo Garrett and worked in the store. During his stay in Auburn he was initiated into the order of the Knights of Pythias, of which he was an honored and esteemed member at the time of his death. Another valiant knight has fallen asleep and passed through the dark chambers of death, into the spirit world. Let us who survive not only decorate his grave with flowers, but ever keep green his memory by recalling again and again the good things he has done. Let us cherish and emulate his virtues and throw over his errors the mantle of brotherly love and charity. In 1896 Mr. Garrett located in Goshen, Ind., and entered the grocery business, where he remained until the hand of affliction was laid upon him. After partial recovery he disposed of his store, and returned to the home of his mother who appreciated the privilege of ministering to his wants during his last illness. A mother's ministrations in the hour of sickness are appreciated above that of any other hand however kind and gentle Brother George was not married. He was an industrious, and honest young man, won the esteem and good will of all who knew him. He leaves to mourn his death a loving mother, three brothers and other relatives. The funeral services at Cedarville, Ind., May 15, at 10 a m Interment will take place in Leo cemetery. Rev. J. D. Bray officiating.

Dewey Says He Has Manila at His Mercy and Can Take It Any Time.

It Would Not Work.

Key West special: On board the Associated Dispatch Boat Kate Spencer, off Havana, May 14, 8 p. m.: Capt. General Blanco, two hours before sun down attempted to excute a ruse, which if successful, would have cleared the front of Havana of the six ships of that blockading station. The ships steamed out of Havana harbor and headed east.

Commanding Lilly, of the Mayflower, which was flying the pennant, made out the larger vessel to be the cruiser Alphonso XII and the smaller one the gunboat Legazpi.

He signalled the Vicksburg, Annapolis, Wasp, Tecumseh and Osceola to charge, echelon. They moved toward the fleeing Spaniards, keeping up a running fire. The Alphonso and consort circled in shore about five miles below Havana and headed back for Morro Castle. Our boats did not follow them in.

Capt. Lilly saw the Spanish hoped to draw them under the guns of the heavy batteries. As commander Lilly's ship came abreast of the Santa Clara battery the big guns opened and fired thirteen shells at a distance of five miles.

Dewey Captured the Callao.

The following was received by the navy department from Admiral Dewey:

Am at Cavit, maintaining a strict blockade.

I believe the rebels are hemming in the city by land, but have made no demonstrations.

There is a scarcity of provisions in Manila.

It is probable the Spanish governor will be obliged to surrender soon.

I can take Manila at any moment. The climate is hot and moist.

On May 12th, I captured the gun boat Callao attempting to run the blockade.

Have plenty of coal. One British, one French, two German and one Japanese vessels are here observing.

Is to Be a War Hospital.

Fort Thomas, opposite Cincinnati, is to be made a war hospital, under orders from Washington, to prepare for the care of 500 men. Hospital supplies have already reached the fort. The Surgeon General and hospital staff will arrive at an available time. The hospital will be in charge of Deputy Surgeon General W. H. Gardiner of the United States Army. Arrangements have been made to have special medical trains running between southern points and the fort.

The Spaniards Buy Coal.

Curacoa special: The Spanish cruisers Maria Teresa, Vizcaya, Almiranta Oquendo, Christobal Colon and the torpedo boat destroyers Pluton and Terror, which arrived off this harbor Saturday morning, are still here. Only the Maria Teresa and Vizcaya were admitted to port. They have bought coal, provisions and medicines and still remain in port. The other war ships are outside waiting.

Old Feud's Fatal Ending.

Near Osceola, Mo., William Piper shot and killed Major Sanford Trammel as the result of an old feud. The Major's son Clyde and Piper had quarreled and Piper was leveling his gun at the boy when the elder Trammel appeared and said: "Shoot me." Piper changed his aim, killing the old man. Piper and his wife, who furnished the gun, have been placed in the Osceola jail.

Seek for Gold.

The Schooner Dora Baum, with a party of fifty-three Chicago prospectors on board, has sailed from San Francisco for St. Michael's. The Chicago men carry complete outfits, including two small steamers for navigating the Yukon River, and the expedition is said to be one of the finest that has set out for the gold fields.

The Flying Squadron.

Commodre Schley's flying squadron stopped at Charleston, Sunday night, for orders, and then passed southward.

Are in Good Health.

Rome special: Rumors having been circulated in different parts of the continent to the effect that the King and Queen of Italy had been assassinated, an announcement was made that their majesties are enjoying perfect health.

The Oregon.

The American battle ship Oregon and the gunboat Marietta, having coaled to their fullest capacity, left Bahia bound north. Their destination is not known, but it is assumed that they will proceed direct to Key West.

Confederate Decoration Day.

Chattanooga, Tenn., observed Confederate Decoration Day. The graves of 9,000 Confederate dead were strewn with flowers in the presence of thousands of citizens. In the crowd were many United States army officers. They stood with uncovered heads during the exercises.

Washington special:

Admiral Sampson and the fleet of American warships that followed the cruiser New York from the Havana blockade have contributed a new chapter to the glorious naval history of the United States. San Juan de Porto Rico has gone down under the destructive and deadly fire of the great guns of the battleships Iowa and Indiana, monitors Amphitrite and Puritan and the cruisers New York, Montgomery and Detroit. Admiral Sampson says in his official report to the Secretary of the Navy that one man was killed on board the New York and seven slightly wounded in the squadron. No serious damage to any ships resulted.

REAR ADMIRAL W. T. SAMPSON.

The ancient walls and fortifications of the city that was founded nearly 400 years ago by Ponce de Leon crumbled before the matchless gunnery of the American bluejackets as if they had been constructed of paper, and their defenders were either killed or wounded by the 1,000-pound shells from the thirteen-inch guns of the monitors and battleships. Great breaches were shot through the walls overhanging the bay, and the monitors by working close to these were enabled to send their terrible broadsides right through the city itself. The fighting began right after sunrise Thursday morning.

When the sentries in the ornamental boxes that adorn the sea wall of the town got their first glimpse of the sea their hearts must have jumped into their mouths, for there before their eyes, steaming defiantly and majestically past the old lighthouse toward the mouth of the harbor, were the eight floating engines of war, for whose coming they had looked through weary and anxious night vigils. The Iowa, with her biggest guns protruding from her forward turret, and eager, impatient bluejackets gathered behind the breeches, waiting for the signal to shoot, led the way.

The ships glided into the harbor one after another, moving as noiselessly as

FORTIFICATION AT SAN JUAN.

Dewey ran the batteries of Corregidor when he stole upon Montejo at Manila. Their decks were cleared for action, every gun was shotted and every man was at his station.

As they neared the mouth of the bay Admiral Sampson's plan of battle began to be apparent to the dazed and seemingly paralyzed Spaniards. The Iowa swung to port, heading directly for the old-fashioned circular castle that has been known as the Morro of San Juan. The Indiana followed in her wake at a distance of about 300 yards. The New York went to Starboard, followed by the monitors Amphitrite and Puritan. The Detroit followed the admiral, and the Montgomery went with the battleships in the direction of the castle.

Presently the flags that conveyed the words, "Remember the Maine," the shibboleth of revenge to every man who sails under the Stars and Stripes, were snapping from the masthead of the flagship New York.

Scarcely had they been run up, and their import comprehended by the eager American sailors when "Fighting Bob" Evans replied to their command by banging away at the old castle with one of the Iowa's twelve-inch guns. He did not wait for the specific signal to commence firing. "Remember the Maine" was devised to remind the seamen of the treacherous murder of 266 of their fellows in Havana, and it was enough to precipitate the bombardment of San Juan de Porto Rico.

The Iowa's shell struck fair and plump, and a section of the castle nearly as big as the side of a gunboat crumbled as if the ground had sunk under it. The Indiana cut loose one of her cannon at the same mark, and before the effect of the shot could be seen the Iowa had swung broadside to the fortification and emptied every gun on her starboard side.

The shore guns began to reply. Half a dozen of them were fired at the same time from the turrets of the castle, but the men on the battleships were not sure whether they were aimed at themselves or the Yale, three miles away. The Spaniards were poor marksmen, and Admiral Sampson was not long in discovering this fact. He moved the New York to closer quarters. Her eight and six-inch guns, fired almost with the rapidity of Maxims, were soon pumping shot and shell into the fortifications with deadly accuracy and execution. The other cruisers followed the example of the flagship, raking the entire sea wall from end to end. The monitors began creeping closer and closer to the wall. The Puritan got within 800 yards of the castle, and at that range her big guns pounded one hole after another until the ancient defense looked as if it would fall of its own weight. The Amphitrite did similar service at the other end. The Iowa and Indiana concentrated their fire on the castle until its defenders were forced out and its guns silenced.

At times for a period of five, and even ten, minutes smoke hung in such dense clouds that the Spaniards could not see the ships, nor could the Americans see the fortifications. The gunners on the ships did not need the walls before their eyes to continue the execution which was begun with the first shot. They had the range of the wall. That was enough for them, and their shells, shrapnel and solid shot swept one position after another, destroyed guns, exploded ammunition, crumbled bastions and killed Spaniards just as if their targets were in plain sight.

It is to the credit of the Spaniards who defended San Juan that they put up a gallant and even dogged resistance. They stuck to their guns until they were destroyed or disabled, and if their aim was bad their courage was magnificent. They were frightfully handicapped by the masonry that was thrown up at every discharge of an American shell. The inhabitants of San Juan fled in terror as soon as they heard the first discharges of the guns of the Iowa and Indiana. The foreign consuls followed the refugees into the country, and the volunteers fled.

Location of San Juan.

San Juan is 1,000 miles due southeast from Havana, 500 miles from Cape Maisi, the eastern tip of Cuba, and only 1,600 miles from New York. The nearest port is St. Thomas, distant only sixty-nine miles. The city of San Juan is situated on an island in the bay and is connected with the main island by a bridge and causeway of ancient military construction. It is inclosed by a heavy wall of stone that is from fifty to one hundred feet high in places. The harbor is one of the finest in the world. It offers a safe anchorage to vessels of all sizes. Next to Cuba Porto Rico is the richest and most desirable of Spain's possessions. It possesses an ideal climate and vast resources. Its population is nearly 800,000, 90 per cent of whom are negroes and mulattoes.

The reduction and occupation of Porto Rico were determined on just as soon as the news of Dewey's victory came from Manila. The port of San Juan was the only harbor where a Spanish fleet coming to this side of the Atlantic for a fight could take refuge. Its capture leaves them to the mercy of the open sea and the American squadrons.

Only seven shots were fired from the guns of the American fleet before Morro fort was a crumbling ruin. Her guns were silent and her gunners killed or in flight. Then the attack on the land batteries began and the fortifications about the Government buildings and the palace were assailed. The cruisers did effective service here and soon the postoffice and the governor's palace were tumbled about the heads of the officials, the guns dismounted or abandoned. The town surrendered at 6 o'clock in the evening. The battleship Iowa fired 250 shots; the cruiser Detroit fired 180. During the last half of the bombardment the warships' guns did terrible execution.

RIOT IN MILAN.

Three Hundred Persons Reported Killed and a Thousand Wounded.

Sunday was a terrible day for Milan, Italy. The bread riots are increasing in violence, and in many cases the troops are powerless to repress the uprising. About 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon a veritable battle occurred in the Via Somtrarie. Thousands of tiles and chimneys were hurled from the roofs upon the troops, who were compelled to retire. A similar fight took place in the Via Torino, and it is believed that no fewer than 300 were killed and 1,000 injured. Eight thousand troops are quartered in the city. The law courts, schools and public offices are closed and guarded by artillery. The mobs are well organized. They marched in columns from the different city gates and converged upon the center of the town. The troops, horse, foot and artillery, bivouacked in the Piazzo del Duomo, and troops were pouring into the city throughout the night. Twenty-five of the sixty-nine provinces of Italy are now under martial law.

Augustin Says 618 Are Killed.

An official dispatch received at Madrid from Gen. Augustin, governor general of the Philippines, by way of Laban, Borneo, says: "The enemy seized Cavite and the arsenal, owing to the destruction of the Spanish squadron, and established a close blockade. A thousand sailors arrived here yesterday evening from our destroyed squadron, the losses of which number 618."

AID FOR DEWEY.

Cruiser Charleston Is Ordered to the Philippines.

The Navy Department ordered the cruiser Charleston, at San Francisco, to proceed at once to Manila without waiting for the City of Pekin. The Charleston is loaded with ammunition for Admiral Dewey's squadron. It was considered advisable to get this ammunition to Dewey as soon as possible that he may be prepared for any emergency. The campaign in the Philippines is to be carried forward at the same time with the campaign in Cuba and Porto Rico. Troops are to be sent to Manila as soon as they can go on board the City of Pekin. The purpose is to send enough troops to Manila to take possession and hold it. This

"WILL I EVER FORGET IT?"

Government will be responsible for order and peace in Manila. If 12,000 are not enough another 12,000 will be sent. Orders were issued by Major Gen. Miles, directing that all of the troops from the six States west of the Mississippi river, which had been intended for mobilization at Chickamauga national park and at Washington, D. C., proceed as soon as possible to San Francisco. Major Gen. Wesley Merritt, commanding the Department of the East, goes to the Philippine Islands in charge of the expedition sent to re-enforce Admiral Dewey. He is accompanied by Gen. Otis. In the event of successful occupation of the islands, Gen. Merritt will be made the military governor.

STARVATION REIGNS IN HAVANA.

Prices for Food Rival Those that Obtain in the Klondike.

The city of Havana is a sad sight. There are still a few of the reconcentrados about the streets now, but starvation has ended the misery of most of them, and their bones have been thrown into the trenches outside of the city. Starvation now faces the Spanish citizens themselves. Havana is a graveyard. Two-thirds of the inhabitants have fled. The prices rival those of Klondike. Beefsteak is $1 a pound. Chickens are $1 each. Flour is $50 a barrel. Everything is being confiscated for Blanco's army. Sleek, well-fed persons are daily threatened with death to make them divulge the whereabouts of their hidden stores of provisions. Several provision stores in the side streets have been broken into and looted.

Blanco has personally taken command of Mariena battery, and is directing the erection of new sand batteries all along the water front west of the entrance to Havana bay. Lieut. Gen. Perrado is making Guanabacoa his headquarters, and is planting new batteries and strengthening the fortifications as much as possible. Over 300 draymen are engaged in the hauling of sand from the mouth of Almandres for use in the construction of the earthworks along the coast. The streets are riotous with half-drunken Spanish volunteers crying for American and Cuban blood. At night the city is wrapped in darkness, all gas and electric lights being shut off by order of Blanco. Spanish soldiers are taking advantage of this to commit shocking outrages upon unprotected Cuban families. In spite of these direful circumstances Blanco ordered the decoration of the city, hoping to incite the patriotism of the populace.

Plan More Work for Dewey.

The administration is considering an informal way of giving Admiral Dewey more hostile work to do in the far East. While no definite program has been arranged, it appears to be the intention of the Government to send the Asiatic squadron which gained such a wonderful victory at Manila to Spain's other possessions in the Pacific, the Caroline and the Ladrone islands. Nothing will be done in this direction, however, until the military force of the United States has occupied Manila and left the American squadron free to go elsewhere.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND READY.

This Number of United States Troops Available for Armies of Occupation.

On Saturday the War Department reported that there had been mustered into the service of the United States 75,000 volunteers. With the 25,000 regulars now in the field, this gives an available force of 100,000 ready for service. Constant additions will be made until the entire force of 125,000 volunteers and 70,000 regulars is ready. This will enable the administration to send armies of occupation wherever needed and to maintain sufficient reserves for coast defenses. Every energy has been put forth by the War Department to get in motion the army of occupation for Cuba. Haste is necessary in this instance so that the department may next get in readiness the second expedition for the Philippines. After that will come the army of occupation for Porto Rico. Because of the large number of Spanish troops in Porto Rico it is very probable that at least 15,000 men will be sent in the first division and even a larger number may be necessary to hold the island.

SYMPATHY FOR THE SPANIARDS.

Resolution Introduced in Session of Congress of Mothers.

A resolution offered by Miss M. E. Hildreth, of Plymouth, N. H., extending sympathy to Queen Christina and the sorrowing mothers of Spain caused great excitement at Friday's session of the National Congress of Mothers in Washington. The proposition originated with Mrs. Deborah Leeds, of Philadelphia. She and Miss Hildreth consulted over it, and after much editing produced the desired paper. It fell like a thunderbolt on the congress, and Miss Hildreth met with continued interruption while reading it. When she had finished, Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett arose and offered an amendment. "I propose," said she, "that the congress extend its sympathies first to the sorrowing mothers whose sons perished in Havana, then to the sorrowing mothers of Cuba, and, if we have any left over, it can go to the mothers in Spain.'"

MASSACRES IN MANILA.

Oppressed Natives Seek Revenge on Spanish Masters.

According to Shanghai advices, massacres are reported to have occurred outside of Manila, the insurgents butchering even the Spanish women and children. It is reported that Admiral Montejo, the commander of the Spanish fleet, who escaped from Cavite by running along the shore to Manila with his two sons, was killed by the populace of the latter place. It is added that the Hospital of San Roque, filled with Spanish soldiers, was accidentally set on fire by shells from the Boston, and that Sisters of Charity were killed by a native mob while removing the wounded.

Spanish Warship Sunk.

A cablegram from Hong Kong, based on reports made by officers of a trading vessel that came from the Philippines, tells of a fierce battle off Iloilo between a Spanish gunboat and the United States gunboat Concord. The Spanish boat was blown up and sank with colors flying. It was assisted by land batteries, but no damage was done to the Concord or her crew. It is stated that there are only two Spanish vessels remaining in Asiatic waters. One is now in dry dock at Hong Kong, and, of course, will not be permitted to leave. The cruiser Boston is reported to be searching for the other with orders to capture or destroy it.

To Scrutinize All Messages.

The United States Government has notified all the cable companies that they are forbidden to transmit messages to or from Spanish officials, any code or cipher messages to or from the West Indies, Venezuela and Brazil, and all open messages that may convey information inimical to the interests of the United States during the war with Spain.

Army Engineers Needed.

The War Department will issue a call for 3,500 men to re-enforce the engineer corps of the army. The engineers will be drawn from the country at large, and no apportionment will be made among the States.

Plans for New War Vessels.

The naval board of construction is expediting plans and designs for a large number of war vessels authorized by the last naval appropriation bill. The plans for four monitors have so far advanced that a circular will be issued shortly asking bidders to submit proposals.

Gen. Schofield, president of the National Volunteer Reserves, says that organization is assuming immense proportions.

BATTLE AT CARDENAS

FIVE MEN KILLED ON THE TORPEDO BOAT WINSLOW.

Fierce Conflict with Spanish Gunboats and Shore Batteries—Solid Shot Disables Little American Vessel and a Shell Explodes in Midst of Her Crew.

American Blood Spilled.

Key West special:

The gunboats Wilmington and Hudson and the torpedo boat Winslow had a fight with the Spaniards in the harbor of Cardenas, Cuba, Wednesday afternoon with the result that five Americans were killed and a number wounded. The firing continued for thirty-five minutes, and was terrific. The Winslow was shot through and through.

The little American fleet entered the harbor for the purpose of attacking some Spanish gunboats which were known to be there. These latter, however, were not discovered by the American force until the Spaniards opened fire from a masked battery. Lookouts on board could see the main batteries some mile and a half ahead, but had no thought of a masked battery. The boat reached a point nearly 300 yards from shore when suddenly the shrubbery parted and heavy cannon boomed out. The Spanish were too close to miss. Heavy solid shot and shells hit all about the torpedo boat. A solid shot tore through her hull and the forward boiler blew up, but her men did not flinch. Another shot tore away her rudder and she drifted helplessly. The Hudson steamed into the harbor and took the Winslow in tow. The hawsers were scarcely fast when a shell burst directly over the damaged boat. Lieut. Bagley was instantly killed, and four of his men, who were working the rapid-fire guns, fell with him. The Wilmington had reached easy range about this time and opened with its heavy guns. The Spaniards turned their fire on the Wilmington, and it was hit by a dozen shots. Until the Winslow was safely out of the harbor the Wilmington bore the brunt of the battle. The Spanish batteries were silenced eventually and a number of men killed and wounded.

TROOPS TO CUBA.

Sixty Thousand Soldiers Under General Miles to Be Rushed Forward.

Washington special:

President McKinley and his advisers at the cabinet meeting Tuesday decided upon an immediate invasion of Cuba. Troops to the number of 60,000 will be landed, it is stated officially, as soon as arrangements for transporting men, ammunition and provisions are completed. The entire army stationed at Chickamauga park was ordered to the front. The First and Tenth Cavalry to New Orleans, the Second Cavalry to Mobile, the Third and Sixth to Tampa. The entire infantry goes to Tampa.

President McKinley, it is said, has constantly opposed immediate invasion, awaiting results of the expected engagement between Admiral Sampson's fleet and the Cape Verde flotilla, but upon the receipt of official information announcing the arrival of four Spanish cruisers and two torpedo boat destroyers at Cadiz he determined upon immediate invasion along the line suggested by Secretary Alger and Gen. Miles. Orders were at once sent to Adjt. Gen. Corbin countermanding that portion of the general order issued for the concentration of troops, horse, foot and artillery, at Chickamauga from the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Colorado, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Idaho, Wisconsin and North and South Dakota. These are ordered to proceed directly to Tampa, Fla., Mobile and New Orleans.

The transport Gussie sailed from Tampa for Cuba amidst a din of cheers, bearing the first regular troops of the United States to Cuban soil. The docks were thronged with enthusiastic people, who could only guess what was going to happen next and when it would occur.

The Gussie carried a large cargo of miscellaneous supplies for the Cubans. There were hundreds of cases of the old Springfield rifles, forty-five caliber, with accompanying ammunition, and there were also large quantities of old army muskets, such as were used in the civil war. Powder and ball galore went with them. Hospital supplies of every description went with the hospital attendants. Twenty-two Cubans, clad in the new canvas uniform of the United States soldiers, went with the two companies of the First Infantry.

U. S. CRUISER CHARLESTON.

CONGRESS

Fitting tribute was paid by the Senate to Commodore Dewey for the magnificent victory he achieved in the battle of Manila Bay. A message from the President was received recommending that a vote of thanks be extended by Congress to Commodore Dewey and the gallant officers and men of his command. Without a word of debate and without a dissenting voice the Senate agreed to the resolution carrying into effect the recommendation of the President. The Senate went farther, even, that that. A bill was presented increasing the number of rear admirals in the navy from six to seven in order that the President might nominate Commodore Dewey to the highest position in the navy within his gift, and that, too, was passed without dissent. In addition a joint resolution was unanimously agreed to directing the Secretary of the Navy to present to Commodore Dewey a sword and medal of honor and to have struck, in commemoration of the battle of Manila, a bronze medal for each of the officers and men who participated in the gallant fight. The resolution appropriates $10,000 to enable the Secretary to carry its provisions into effect. The greater part of the day in the House was consumed by war measures. The recommendation of the President that a vote of thanks be tendered Commodore Dewey and his associate officers and men was followed quickly with a unanimous vote, and with equal concert the House passed the bill creating an additional rear admiralship for the hero of Manila. The bill providing for the organization of a volunteer engineer brigade and enlistment of 10,000 volunteer troops immune to tropical diseases was passed after two hours of debate. The principal ground of opposition presented was found in the features giving to the President the appointment of all officers. The Senate bill authorizing the army to distribute food among the suffering Cubans and to arm the Cuban people was passed.

Four war measures were passed by the Senate on Tuesday. One of them provided for carrying on the additional work in the adjutant general's office; the second authorized the enlistment of a volunteer signal corps, two-thirds of the members of which must be expert electricians or telegraphers; the third was the so-called "immune bill," passed by the House of Representatives, and the fourth was a measure suspending existing law so additional hospital stewards can be appointed. The postoffice appropriation bill, carrying appropriations which aggregate more than $99,000,000, was passed, after a debate which lasted several days. The resolution submitting to the Legislatures of the various States an amendment to the constitution of the United States changing the date of the beginning of the terms of the President, Vice-President and members of Congress from March 4 to May 4 was adopted. The House, in session less than an hour, passed a bill appointing three commissioners to propose necessary revision of the statutes relating to patents, trade and other marks and trade and commercial names.

The House, by 184 to 11, on Wednesday passed a resolution for the election of Senators by popular vote, and refused, 48 to 90, to consider the Senate Bill restricting immigration. Mr. Loud called up the postoffice appropriation bill as passed by the Senate and upon his motion the House refused to concur to the Senate amendments and asked a conference. The House then went into committee of the whole to consider the Senate bill amending the revenue law providing for the disposal of abandoned imports turned over by importers to the customs officials. The bill was passed. The Senate spent the afternoon in discussion of the so-called railway arbitration bill. A House joint resolution declaring the lands within the former Mille Lac Indian reservation in Minnesota to be subject to entry under the land laws of the United States was agreed to.

After a prolonged discussion the Senate on Thursday evening passed the bill "concerning carriers engaged in interstate commerce, and their employes"—popularly known as the railway arbitration bill. The most important amendment to the measure was that offered by Mr. Hoar (Mass.), which provides that courts shall issue no injunction against railway employes which shall compel them to give their personal service to a company against their will. On the final vote only three Senators were recorded against the bill. A bill was passed removing all disabilities imposed by the fourteenth amendment to the constitution on persons who were at one time engaged in rebellion against the United States.

An Army 24,000 Miles Long.

A German military critic has been adding up the grand total of the continental armies, and, after noting that we can form only a vague idea of what is meant by tens of millions, he tries to bring home to his readers in another way the colossal growth of modern armaments. If, he says, we could have all the armies of the continent on a war footing and drawn up in one long procession, with their guns and ammunition and baggage wagons, the column would be rather more than 24,000 miles long, and, marching day and night, it would take nearly a year to pass a given point.

The Largest House.

Perhaps the largest house in the world is in Wieden, a suburb of Vienna. In this domicile there are 1,400 rooms, divided into 400 suites of from three to six rooms each, and they at present shelter 2,112 persons, who pay an annual rental of over 100,000 florins.

WE TWO.

Sit here with me,
My little girl,
And while the red
And gold flames curl
With pretty sparks
Far up the flue,
I'll stroke your locks
And talk to you.

The mother's eyes
Were just like yours—
Blue as the waves
On Naples' shores;
Her hair was brown,
Like yours, too, dear,
And rippled o'er
As pink as ear.

She used to sit
Beside me here,
When nights were harsh
And woods were sere—
Ah! she was fair,
Dear, very fair,
With firelight upon her hair!

The black midnight
Would find us still
Before the blaze
And here until
The crumbling sticks
Had spread in two,
We'd sit, my child,
And talk of you.

Now, little girl,
'Tis you and I—
Your mother went
When fall passed by;
And here we sit
And list the purr
Of burning logs,
And talk of her.

Up on the hill
Your mother sweet,
Rests quietly—
Her head and feet
Deep under the snow
From stormy skies;
But you, my pet,
Have her blue eyes!

The Child Spy.

His name was Stenne; little Stenne they called him. He was a gamin of Paris, pale and thin, who might have been 10 years old, perhaps 15; one can never tell the age of these children. His mother was dead; his father, an old soldier, patrolled a square in the neighborhood of the Temple. Babies nurses, old women, all those helpless persons who ran the risk of being trampled on in the crowded streets, knew Pere Stenne, and loved him, too. They knew that that fierce mustache, the terror of dogs and pickpockets, concealed lips that could smile, and that to provoke that smile one had only to say:

"How is your little boy today?"

And how he loved that little boy! How proud he was when in the evening the little fellow came to join him and the two made the round together, greeting everyone they met

With the siege, everything was changed. Pere Stenne's square was closed to the public. He was compelled to keep a constant lookout without his pipe or his son. When he spoke of the Prussians his mustache was a sight to see. Little Stenne did not find the new life so disagreeable, however. A siege! That meant fun for gamins. No school, no duties; vacation all the time, and the streets as lively as on gala days. The boys stayed out of doors, running about until night. He followed the detachments of troops to the fortifications, choosing those which had good music; he was very particular on that point. At other times he watched them at their drill.

The most interesting of all, though, were the games of chance the Breton troops made popular at this time. When little Stenne was not at the ramparts or at the shops you would be sure to find him watching a crowd play galoche at the Place du Chateau d'Eau. He never played it; it took too much money. He contented himself with watching the others, and with such expression! One in particular, a great fellow with a blue coat, who staked only 100-sou pieces, excited his admiration. When this boy ran one could her the coins rattle in his pocket.

One day, as little Stenne was stooping down to pick up a piece which had rolled under his feet, the fellow said in a low voice:

"That makes you squint, hey? Well, if you want me to, I will tell you where to get plenty of them."

The offer was accepted, and leading Stenne aside he asked the boy to go with him to sell French newspapers to the Prussians, adding that they could make 30 francs a trip. Stenne indignantly refused, and for three days he remained away from the place. Three dreadful days; he could neither eat nor sleep. At night he seemed to see the pile of galoches at the foot of his bed, and the 100-sou pieces gleaming in the faint light. The temptation proved too strong. The fourth day he returned to the gaming place, saw the big fellow, and agreed to go with him.

They set out one snowy morning with sacks on their shoulders, and the papers hidden under their jackets. When they reached the Flanders gate it was scarcely daylight. The large boy took little Stenne's hand, and, approaching the guard, who had a red nose and a kindly manner, he said, in a whining tone: "Please let us pass, kind sir. Our mother is sick and our father is dead. We are going to see if we can find some potatoes in the field outside."

He even shed tears. Stenne, much ashamed, hung his head. The sentinel looked at them a moment, then, glancing at the dreary white road, he said: "Pass on quickly," and there they were on the way to Aubersvilliers. How the big fellow laughed!

Confusedly, as in a dream, little Stenne saw the factories transformed into barracks, the tall chimneys, piercing the fog, partially broken off. From time to time they came upon sentinels, officers who were scouring the horizon with field glasses, and little tents, wet with snow, standing before dying fires. The large boy knew the way, and went across the fields, being careful to avoid the military outposts. Notwithstanding his precautions, they suddenly came upon a squad of riflemen. The troops were partially hidden in a ditch which bordered the Soissons railroad. This time they were not allowed to pass so readily, though the large boy told his story in the most pathetic manner. While he was weeping, an old, white-haired sergeant came out of one of the little tents and said:

"Don't cry, little fellow; we will let you go to hunt for your potatoes. But come in first and warm yourselves a bit; the little one looks frozen.

Alas! it was not the cold that made little Stenne shiver so. It was fear and shame. Inside the tent they found soldiers huddled together around a little fire, baking biscuits on the points of their bayonets. They made room for the children, and gave them a drop of their warm coffee; while they were drinking it an officer appeared at the door, called the sergeant, and, after a few words with him in a low tone, went quickly away.

"Boys," said the sergeant on re-entering, "there will be fun tonight. We have found out the Prussian countersign. I believe at last we are to capture that cursed Bourget."

Then followed an explosion of bravos and shouts. The soldiers danced and flourished their bayonets. Taking advantage of the tumult the boys slipped away. On leaving the trench they saw before them a plain, bordered one side by a long, white wall, defaced by bullets. It was towards this that they directed their footsteps, stopping often, as if picking up potatoes.

"Let us go back when we get to the wall," said Stenne.

The other boy only shrugged his shoulders and went steadily forward. All at once they heard a click and saw a gun pointed at them.

"Crouch down," whispered the large bay, throwing himself on the ground.

Once down he whistled; another whistle answered. Then they rose and went up to the fortification. Over the wall they saw two yellow mustaches under dirty military caps. The large boy jumped down beside the Prussian.

"This is my brother," he said, pointing to his companion. Stenne was so little that, on seeing him, the Prussian began to laugh, and he was obliged to take him by the arm to help him over the rampart.

Behind the wall were earthworks, fallen trees and great black ditches. In each ditch were the same yellow mustaches, which laughed as the little fellow went past. In one corner was a house protected by trunks of trees. The lower story was filled with soldiers playing cards, while soup was cooking over a roaring fire. How good it smelled, and what a contrast to the camp of the French riflemen. In the upper story were the officers. They had a piano to play on.

When the little Parisians entered they were greeted with shouts of joy. The delivered their papers to the enemy. The large boy amused them by his odd language and his low wit. They laughed boisterously, repeating his expressions, fairly rolling in the Parisian mire that was thus brought to them.

Little Stenne would have liked to talk, too, to show that he was not stupid, but something seemed to choke him. In front of him, standing apart from the others, was an old Prussian who seemed to be trying to read his thoughts, as the old soldier's eyes never left his face. There were tenderness and reproach in the gaze, as if the man had a boy about Stenne's age, and as if he would have said:

"I would rather die than seen my son in such business!"

The poor boy felt as if a hand clutched his heart so that it could no longer beat. In the distance he heard his companion ridiculing the national guard, mimicking their drill and going through other drollery. At last the boy lowered his voice, the officers clustered around him and their faces became serious. The wretch was about to forewarn them of the attack to be made that night. Stenne suddenly realized what was going on and called out:

"Not that! Not that!"

The large boy replied with a loud laugh and went on. Before he had finished all the officers were on their feet. One of them showed the door to the boys and exclaimed:

"Leave at once!"

Then they began talking rapidly among themselves in German, while the large boy walked out as proudly as a duke, jingling his money in his pockets. Stenne followed with bent head, and as he passed the old Prussian whose glances had hurt him so, he heard a sad voice say: "A bad business, this; a bad business!"

Once outside the boys began to run to get back as soon as possible. Their sacks were filled with potatoes which the Prussians had given them; they passed the French posts without being molested. There everything was being got in readiness for the night attack. Troops arrived silently and massed themselves behind the bank. How happy the old sergeant seemed as he placed his men! When the boys passed he recognized them and smiled kindly at them.

Oh, how that smile hurt little Stenne. He wanted to cry out:

"Don't go down there; you have been betrayed."

The other boy had said to him: "If you tell we shall be shot," so he was afraid. On reaching the city they went into a deserted house to divide their money. This was honestly done, and when little Stenne heard his gold pieces rattling in his blouse and thought of the game and galoche in store for him his crime did not seem very serious.

But when he was alone, poor child! When the large boy had left him outside his door, then his pockets began to feel heavy, and the hand which held his heart tightened its grasp. Paris no longer seemed the same place. People passing looked hard at him, as if they knew where he had been. He heard the word "Spy" in the noises of the street, in the beating of the drums along the canal. He entered the house, and was glad that his father had not yet returned. He went at once to his room and hid the crowns, which were so heavy, under his pillow.

His father had never seemed so kind and so cheerful as on this particular evening.

Encouraging news from the provinces had been received; things looked brighter. While eating his supper, the old soldier looked at his gun hanging on the wall, and said to Stenne, with his honest laugh: "Hey, my boy, how you would fight the Prussians if you were only big enough!"

About 8 o'clock they were startled by the sound of a cannon. "That is at Aubervilliers; they are fighting at Bourget," said the good man, who knew the names of all the forts. Little Stenne grew pale, and, pretending to be tired, went to bed, but not to sleep. The cannonade continued. The boy pictured to himself the French soldiers going at night to surprise the Prussians and falling into an ambuscade. He thought of the sergeant who had smiled upon him, and saw him stretched out dead in the snow, and many, many others with him. The price of all this blood was hidden there under his pillow, and it was he, the son of a soldier, who * * * He stifled his sobs. He heard his father walking about in the next room, and, at last, ope na window. Down below in the square the call to arms was sounded, and a regiment was forming to march to the scene of the firing. It was a battle, then; the miserable boy could no longer restrain his sobs.

"What is the matter?" asked Pere Stenne, going into the room. The child slid out of bed and threw himself at his father's feet. At the motion the crowns rolled out on the floor.

"What is that? Have you been stealing?" said the old man in a trembling voice.

Then, in a breath, little Stenne told him that he had been to the Prussian camp, and that they had given him the money. As he talked his heart grew lighter, and he felt comforted. His father listened with an expression of terror. When the boy had finished the old man hid his face in his hands and wept aloud.

"Father! Father!" exclaimed the child

The old man pushed the boy aside and picked up the gold.

"Is this all?" he asked.

Little Stenne nodded his head. His father then took down his gun, and, putting the money in his pocket, said:

"I am going to return it to the givers."

Without another word, without even a look behind, he went out and joined the troops who were marching past. He was never seen again!—Alphonse Daudet.

A JAGUAR'S TRICK.

The Clever Way in Which He Fooled the Caymans and Crossed a River.

Robert Wilson Fenn contributes to the St. Nicholas an interesting story about "The Jaguar and the Caymans." Mr. Fenn was camping on the banks of the Upper Magdalena River, in Columbia, South America, and this is what he saw.

We had finished our evening meal, and I was enjoying my customary smoke under the toldilla, or netting, and chatting with my Indian companions, when, suddenly, the most awful series of catcalls that I had ever heard disturbed our peace and the night air. A prolonged yowl, like the united voices all the cats on all the roofs of a large town, made the cold chills creep up and down my spine and gooseflesh to run all over me.

"What is it?" I asked one of the men. "El tigre, senor!" (The tiger, sir!) he replied; "ra a pasar el rio" (he is going to cross the river.) "Let him cross if he wants to," said I; "but what does he want to upset my supper and spoil my after-dinner smoke with his hideous noise?" Come and see, senor," he replied, and taking up his gun, motioned me to follow him. Softly we crep along the margin of the creek toward the river, and making our way through the spines of the overhanging bamboos, came out upon the narrow beach near the mouth of the creek.

Sure enough, by crawling cautiously along in the shadow of the bluff, we saw our musical friend squatted on his haunches, with head thrown back and mouth open, emitting the most blood-curdling serenades one could expect to hear, and looking for all the world like a gigantic tabby cat. But what connection such a noise could have with his passage of the river I failed to see.

"Anastasio," I said in a whisper, "doesn't the foolish fellow know that he will draw all the alligators together, and when he gets into the water he will swim off in sections? "Leave him alone," chuckled the Indian; "he knows how to get across." So, crouching down in the bushes on the bank of the river, we waited for his next move. I think we must nave been there about twenty minutes or half an hour, and I was becoming almost worn out with the attacks of the mosquitos, when the concert suddenly ceased. At the same moment the moon came out clear and bright from behind a cloud, and Anastasio, nudging my arm, pointed to the surface of the water in front of the jaguar. At first I thought there were a number of sticks in the water, but as the current was swift and they were motionless in their places, I was for a moment puzzled. "Caymanos" (alligators), whispered the Indian, and I saw that his eyes were better than mine. There were the ugly snouts of half a dozen of the big fellows, some well out of water, and some just showing their nostrils and the bumps over their eyes, but all ready for their expected prey.

But they were to be disappointed this time; for the jaguar, immediately upon the conclusion of his serenade started off up-stream as hard as he could run along the bank of the river, and when he had gone about 500 yards dropped softly into the water and swam safely across, while his baffled enemies were unable to make fast enough time upstream against the swift current to get him.

A Duelling Absurdity.

The latest absurdity is a duelling challenge sent by a Berlin student to Dr. Coing, president of the Senate Courts of Justice and head of the Board of Law Examiners. Dr. Coing disciplined the student, and the latter sent his brother, an army officer, to Dr. Coing with a demand for satisfaction with pistols. Dr. Coing refused to meet the student, but the matter will have to be submitted to a council of honor.—New York Tribune.

BENEATH his country's starry flag,
Where thousands stood before,
Prepared to fight till life shall flag
And darkness gathers o'er.
Garbed in his uniform of blue,
Ready to answer "Here!"
A man and soldier through and through,
He stands, the volunteer.

'Tis not the joy of clashing arms
That calls him to the fray,
'Tis not the love of war's alarms
That bids him haste away;
For him there's pain and grief and woe,
A wife—a mother's tear,
But loud his duty calls, and lo!
He comes, the volunteer.

O, mighty nation, proud and great,
Of strength he is a tower!
Behold him, warlike and elate,
In this, your darkest hour.
For you he lives, for you he'll die,
And sell his life blood dear,
And glory's gates will open on high
To greet the volunteer.

"SHOOT ON DOWNWARD ROLL."

This Is Uncle Sam's Standing Order to the Navy of the United States.

"Shoot on the downward roll." That is the standing order in the navy of the United States. The American practice, both in the army and navy, has always been to shoot low, and always to save ammunition until it was possible to use it effectively. In the navy the tradition to shoot low has crystallized into a standing rule, unwritten indeed, but none the less religiously observed, and its wisdom has been proved on more than one occasion of great importance.

The precise form of this unwritten naval rule is to "wait for the downward roll." This is the converse of the maxim obtaining in the British navy that it is best to take advantage of the "upward roll," which has been observed almost from the beginning of naval fighting by the gunners on English ships, and to which much of the power of England's "wooden walls" to defend the island was attributed in the days when England, and not the United States, was at war with Spain.

Necessarily the deck of a vessel at sea offers a much less satisfactory platform from which to shoot than the solid foundation provided in a land fort, since, even when the ocean is calmest, the vessel must constantly roll from side to side. Theoretically, the best time to fire would be at the moment between rolls, when the deck of the ship is perfectly level, and in a general way it may be said that an attempt is made to do the shooting at that instant.

It was noted by the sea fighters in the revolution that projectiles from guns fired when the ship was heeling from the enemy in the upward roll were hurled higher in the air than was intended, and that well-aimed shots were thus often sent harmlessly overhead, or, at best, took effect only in the rigging instead of the hull of the enemy, where they would do most damage. On the other hand, it was observed that shots fired when the vessel was heeling toward the enemy on the downward roll, though frequently striking lower than was intended by the marksman, almost invariably took effect.

MERITS OF SHOOTING ON "UPWARD" AND "DOWNWARD ROLL."

A Monkey's Accomplishment.

No creature but man has ever made use of fire. An African traveler, indeed, has told a story of apes making a thieving raid on a camp of natives and carrying torches to light their way, but this story lacks proof and is not accepted as true by zoologists.

There is, however, in the Philadelphia zoological garden a monkey who has learned to scratch matches perfectly well. This accomplishment he is willing to exhibit on any occasion. He has learned to hold the match by its middle part, so that his fingers are not burned by being too near the flame, and so that the match will not break by being held too near the other end.

This fact involves another—that he is aware which end has the sulphur and does not attempt to scratch the unsulphured end. He has furthermore learned that a rough surface is better to scratch the match on than a smooth one, and his care in looking for a rough place is very diverting.

But with all this intelligence the monkey has no notion of kindling another fire with the one that he has caused by the friction of the match. He simply lets the match burn out, and if he lights another does it for the pleasure of seeing it burn.

This monkey's keepers and the men of science who are experimenting with his intelligence hope to communicate to him eventually an idea of fire making and using, but from the moment they succeed in doing so—if they ever do succeed—it will be necessary to keep matches out of his reach.

THE VALUE OF PERSISTENCE.

How a Stranger Got and Kept a Good Job.

"I'm lookin' for a job. I'm a good feller and I'll work cheap."

This is the language in which an honest and rather simple looking man approached the head of a Chicago firm.

"Sorry," smiled the proprietor, "but we have nothing to offer just now. Call 'round again."

Jake, as he called himself, walked away a couple of blocks, and then faced about and returned to repeat his application.

"I been here," he said, "fur a job, and you told me to come again. I'm here."

The proprietor, being busy, did not recall the previous visit, and, after informing Jake that there was nothing for him yet, asked him to come again. This time Jake made a round trip of about half a mile, and again dropped in, offering his services as twice before.

"Persistent and looks honest," said the proprietor to his bookkeeper. "Wonder what he could do?"

"Might give him a chance to collect some of our impossible accounts," laughed the bookkeeper. "He's the kind of a man to keep pegging away, and even creditors can be worn out."

Jake was given some of the worst old accounts that could be hunted up and started out. By making forty or fifty calls on the same man on the same day he began to make an impression, and the firm is now getting a good deal of money that had long since been charged to profit and loss.

THE DE LA MAR CASE.

"Most Beautiful American" Sued for Divorce by a Jealous Husband.

The eyes of New York's moneyed set have lately been focused on the Paris courts, where Capt. Joseph R. De la Mar is trying to get a divorce from his wife, who has been proclaimed the most beautiful of American women. This sad climax adds to the interest of a romantic story.

De la Mar is past 50. He came to this country in boyhood from Holland and went to work on a Mississippi steamer. Time brought him to the highest post and gave him the title of captain. He went to Colorado, prospected and struck a bonanza. Twenty millions is the figure at which his wealth is estimated. From Colorado the American Monte Cristo went to New York. There, half a dozen years ago, he met Nellie Sands, the only daughter of a druggist without means. The girl was beautiful and he married her. They went to Newport and other fashionable resorts and tried to plunge into society, but what the beauty and winsomeness of the wife gained, the uncouthness of the husband counterbalanced. Society would not receive them, but it spread the fame of Mrs. De la Mar's beauty.

A few years ago the couple removed to Paris. There the American colony took them up and Mrs. De la Mar became a social pet. The French aristocracy showered favors upon her and many of the New-Yorkers who at home had snubbed her, were proud of their visits to Paris to acknowledge an acquaintance. Mrs. De la Mar's fame spread through Europe. The captain lavished wealth upon her.

De la Mar was extremely jealous of his wife and kept his eye on every man who talked with her. A short time ago he found some letters addressed to her by one of his intimate friends. They were innocent enough, but De la Mar became furious and made the letters the basis of his divorce suit. Sympathy is entirely with Mrs. De la Mar.

Amount of Food Contained in the Five Days' "Emergency Rations."

How many young men who are thirsting for war know what "emergency rations" mean? In the first place, what is an "emergency?" It is such an occation as requires troops to subsist on food carried on their persons. Emergency rations are rations for five days, that being the limit of the time during which the men can live on the ration and keep up their fighting strength. A day's emergency ration consists of 10 ounces of bacon, 16 ounces of hard bread, 4 of peameal, 4 of coffee or half an ounce of tea, 4 grains of saccharine, 64-100 ounce of salt, 4-100 ounce of pepper, half an ounce of tobacco. Put into five-day packages, the emergency rations are kept at all military posts ready for immediate use.

Like Mother, Like Son.

One of the most remarkable among the feats of the postoffice in finding people—and such feats are many—is recorded by a New York paper. A letter was received at the postoffice in that city addressed simply: "To my mother, New York, America."

The letter come from Ireland, but as there are in New York several women who have sons in Ireland, the postoffice people despaired of finding the right one. However, the letter was turned over to the deciphering department. Now it so happened that on the very day of its receipt there an Irish woman came to the general window and said:

"Have ye a letter from me b'y?"

The fact that a woman with the cast of mind required for such an inquiry should come at that time, struck the clerk, who had heard of a letter for a woman whose name was not given, as something more than a coincidence. It was quite possible that such a woman might be the mother of such a son.

So he took the letter, observed the postmark, and asked the woman where her "b'y" lived. She gave the name of the place with which the letter was stamped. Some other questions were asked and the answers noted down. Then the clerk gave the woman the letter, on the condition that she should open it on the spot and return it if it were not for her.

She opened it, and lo! its contents proved conclusively that it was really from her son in Ireland.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Did Not Prove the Minister Guilty—Panhandle Railway Mulcted for Damages—Officers for Dentists—Woman Chews a Baby.

Hugging Is Not Proved.

Rev. Mr. Fusion, a retired minister of the Baptist Church at Fairbanks, has been tried by the church on a charge of slandering Rev. Mr. Mugg, a man who recently became pastor of the church. Mr. Fusion was accused of having said that Mr. Mugg was seen with his arms around the waist of a married woman. At the trial the young married woman denied that Mr. Mugg had encompassed her waist and a woman as positively testified that she had seen it done. There was much other conflicting testimony, and the verdict was that no slander had been circulated and yet that it had not been proved beyond doubt that Mr. Mugg had hugged the woman. The church is now trying to determine if there are to be more proceedings or if Mr. Mugg is to continue as pastor.

Verdict Against the Panhandle.

In the Circuit Court at Noblesville, for the second time, a judgment was rendered against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for damages for ejecting passengers from its trains. Some time ago Mr. and Mrs. George League bought first-class round trip tickets from Tipton to Indianapolis, which were marked "good only for ten days." They attempted to return from Indianapolis to Tipton after the ten days had expired, and were put off the train at Noblesville. Suits were brought for damages and several weeks ago Mrs. League got a judgment for $800, and now Mr. League has been given damages in the sum of $100.

Indiana Dentists Adjourn.

The Indiana Dental Association adjourned a two days' session at Muncie, after electing the following officers: President, Dr. D. M. Hiatt, Marion; vice-president, Dr. J. H. Morrison, Connersville; secretary and treasurer, F. R. Henshaw, Middletown; board of directors, D. L. Stine, Indianapolis; A. T. White, Newcastle, and Frank Martin, Muncie. The next meeting will be held in Marion the first week in May, 1899. There were three women dentists present.

Woman Chews a Baby.

A Lafayette woman named Lanahan, while intoxicated, savagely attacked a 2-year-old nephew residing with her. The child was seriously bitten all over its body, many ugly wounds resulting on the face, neck and arms. It was in such a condition that its clothes could not be put on to remove it to a hospital and it had to be wrapped in a blanket. The baby's condition is serious, blood poisoning being feared.

Glass Workers' Wages Reduced.

The wages of the American plate glass employes in the plant in Madison County have been reduced from 5 to 25 per cent, the reductions affecting about 500 men. Many of the men have refused to work and it is feared a general strike will result.

Within Our Borders.

Mrs. Edward Newby of New London died suddenly of heart trouble, aged 76.

Forty dogs got after a flock of sheep on T. J. Dyer's farm near Kokomo and killed forty-three.

A plant has begun operations at Terre Haute in which mechanical corn huskers are manufactured.

All the available walnut trees in Vigo County have been purchased by a Terre Haute gunstock factory.

The annual convention of the Indiana State Republican College League has been postponed until fall.

At Indianapolis, an application has been made for a receiver for the Big Four Building and Loan Association.

C. P. Chastain, a grocer of Sullivan, has assigned for the benefit of his creditors. J. Hurley Drake is assignee.

At Bedford, John Burgess, a white man, shot Spurgeon McGinnis, colored, in the head, causing wounds that will prove fatal. Burgess gave himself up.

The body of an unknown man was found in the river at Madison. He had a sandy complexion, heavy red mustache, fairly well dressed and was about 35 years old and five feet six inches high. The body was buried by the coroner.

Jack Herrington, a South Bend stonecutter, killed himself, first attempting to murder Mrs. Teresa K. Vahlert, with whom he boarded. The man was madly in love with the woman, who had rejected his frequent proposals of marriage.

Mrs. Eliza Hulen, aged 100, the oldest person in Knox County, was burned to death at her home in Edwardsport. She was partially paralyzed and in lighting a pipe her clothing caught fire and her charred body was found shortly afterward by the family, who had been in the field at work.

Davie Hedrick, a deaf mute, was shot in the head in the woods not far from Pendleton. His throat was cut in a fiendish manner. A man named Thamer Cory was with him at the time of his death and is held at Anderson as the murderer. Cory had taken the mute's money from his pocket.

The managers of the Penn Plate Glass Company, the anti-trust concern, whose plants at Irwin, Pa., were destroyed by fire three weeks ago at a loss of $750,000, have begun a wholesale reduction of salaries and wages at the American plants in Madison County, which they secured recently at a cost of $700,000. One hundred and fifty polishers walked out, and it is feared all employes will follow their lead, and a serious state of affairs will result. Many men are coming from Irwin to fill the positions.

Scott Brothers, druggists and stationers, with two stores in Kokomo, made an assignment. J. C. Dolman was made assignee. Assets, $10,000, with $4,000 liabilities.

Richard H. Green, aged 75, one of the pioneer residents of Jeffersonville, was found dead in bed. He was a civil engineer and worked the greater part of the day.

The Democratic convention to nominate a State Senator for the joint district of Cass and Pulaski counties was held at Logansport and Judge Maurice Winfield was nominated on the first ballot.

James Harris, who escaped in 1886 from the Frankfort, Ky., penitentiary, where he was serving three years for housebreaking, was arrested at New Albany. He had been living there since his escape, and had married and was a respected citizen.

Mrs. William Bates of Hartford City captured a pickpocket after an exciting chase, while watching the circus parade. The crowd came to her rescue and the pickpocket's confederate was also caught. They gave the names of Harry Rodgers and Frank Wright and are believed to live in Peru. Mrs. Bates' pocketbook, containing $500, was found on one of the men, who are now in jail.

GIVE US CREDIT.

Several of our exchanges are way off in their compliments to the newspaper offices for men furnished for soldiers. They crrdit Saxby McIntosh to the Dispatch, though he has not been employed in that office for two years. All his recent work has been in the COURIER office. The COURIER, if anyone, should be credited. If so, it would make four men from this office. George Everett, foreman, and John Richards. The latter was under age and was not allowed today. McIntosh failed to pass examination. But Everett is at the front and ready to whip half a dozen dons any day. The COURIER had another man engaged to take Everett's place but he was in the Ohio militia and went with the rest. The only DeKalb papers that have furnished men for the war are the Press and the COURIER. The Press editor sent his own son, a young man of great promise. We hope the boys from both offices will come back in good health. Their places will be kept open for them.

WAR NEWS OF TODAY

Wednesday's Daily.

Our government now watches the news sent out over the cables that go to all the islands about Cuba and beyond, as they would otherwise send valuable news to the Spaniards.

It is believed that Spain has 80,000 soldiers in Cuba, They are now located altogether in towns or scattered in strong pickets along the coast between the towns, so as to prevent our landing. There are now no Spanish soldiers in the interior or at least very few.

The latest in diplomatic circles is a talk of a triple alliance, between the United States, Great Britain and Japan. It does not seem probable, however, that this will be done.

The Spanish fleet is reported from a dozen places, with ships in number from 9 to 27. Nothing certain known, but must be soon.

Gen. Merritt criticised by Secretary Alger for saying he would not go to Manila, unless he could have more regulars. There may be trouble, as Merritt was one of the court martial that kicked Alger out of the service for cowardice during the rebellion.

Have difficulty to get ships enough to carrythe men from San Francisco to Manila.

The War Department tells nothing. But it is known that Sampson's fleet has started, south going in the passage between Hayti and Cuba and that The Flying Squadon is heading for the south around the west and of Cuba. With other warships also centering in the Caribbean, it looks as if Spain's fleet would be cornered., It may have been done already and we must wait for correct news.

Wild reports of battles at sea may turn out to be true or may not. The fleets will naturally get together soon.

Preparations for invasion of Cuba, going on.

Famine in Manila may force them to surrender.

Wm. J. Bryan is raising a regiment in Nebraska and will be its colonel.

Report that we may not invade Cuba till after the fleets fight.

COURT NOTES

Tuesday's Daily.

As noted yesterday, court began at 10, a. m., with Judge Roby in the chair and a few attorneys present. Much work was started up or called for, but as usual much of the work called for, was not ready. This, Tuesday, morning, work began in earnest, with nearly every attorney in the county in attendance. From Waterloo were W. H. Leas, Wm X. X. McDonald, J. F. Shuman and Gen. Blair; from Butler, Ed Fosdick and A. J. Baxter; from Garrett, Mr. Gengler, Mr. Sharpless and Mr. Mount. Our own attorneys were all present, including J. E. Rose who has been in ill health for some time, and P. V. Hoffman, who has just returned here after an absence of several years. D. M. Link, C. E. Emanuel, J. H. Rose, P. D. West, E. D. Hartman, F. L. Welsheimer J. E. Pomeroy, J. W. Baxter and C. M. Brown. We have a lot of able and active attorneys, and we hope we have not missed any.

Charlie Crew has his old job of court bailiff, which he has learned to perfection and we are glad to see him hold. And for grand jury bailiff is our old Waterloo neighbor, S. Z. Dickinson. It is a short job and does not pay much, but he is as much entitled to what there is in it, as anyone we know of. He handles the work well and will do it faithfully.

Court is not very exciting and probably will not be this term. This forenoon the Judge kept them very busy answering "Roll Call". He called the roll of cases, of which there are a hundred or so to be considered, and each attorney answered for the one in which his client was interested. Of course, at this stage of the work, but very little is finished up. The Judge calles the case of Jones against Smith. Then the attorney of Jones and of Smith say whether they or their clients are ready, and if not ready now, a date will be set at which they expect to be ready to try the case. Then an estate may be called up, and some attorney who represents the administrator, executor or guardian, responds, and indicates what step, if any, should be taken in the matter as it now stands. If the Judge agrees with him the entry is made, and the step will be taken at a date set. If the Judge is not satisfied that the proposed step is for the best, he says so, and then he and the attorneys and sometimes the parties, talk the matter over and finally agree on the course to be pursued. A great deal of good to parties. often comes out of these consultations, for attorneys are anxious to serve their clients properly and the Judge, as an impartial arbiter, looks to the interests of all parties.

Then come up many calls on the appointment of administrators or guardians, the giving of bonds for them, or if they have been appointed at some other time, they are to be continued if their work has been properly done, or discharged if not properly done, or if they find they cannot continue in it. And there are always some administrators who have finished all the matters connected with their duty to an estate, and are ready to make a final, or closing settlement. This is carefully looked over by the clerk, or possibly by the judge and if found satisfactory, the administrator is discharged and the matter has been closed never to be called in question unless very serious reasons should demand a re-opening.

We have given this part of the court work so much space because so many people ask why we do not give more court news on such or such a week. And when we say there was but little to report, they are apt to think the court has done nothing. But in fact the court has done a good deal of important and necessaey work. But there is so much of it that would not interest readers, that it has not been published. We must remember that we cannot always have such interesting cases as we had last year. We hope we shall not have. But when there are real cases, that can be reported, and that the public really cares for, the COURIER will have them.

Wednesday's Daily.

We note the plainer steps that have been so far taken:

PROBATE DOCKET.

P. D. West, guardian of Emily Buchanan, non. comp., continued two years.

F. E. Goode, filed his current report as guardian of the Elizabeth Charles heirs.

Wm. H. Houston resigned as guardian of the Dora Houston heirs, and John Jackman appointed.

W. C. Patterson, guardian of Geo. Johnson was continued twe years.

Isaac Dittmar, trustee of John A. Ditmar estate, was allowed to leave the matter off docket till May 99.

Isaac Hirschler executor estate of Lisette Myers, final report approved and he discharged.

A partial report has been filed by Sylvester Kutzner in the Fred Groscop estate.

Henry Aldrich, ad., John Blaker estate, continued one year pending the sale of realty.

Geo. D. Weaver resigns as trustee of Catherine Weaver estate and Geo. Crooks appointed. H. H. Weaver files rppraisment as executor in same estate.

Geo. Lanning files his report as to posting notices and proof of publication in Amanda Benninghoff estate.

Henry Aldrich filed report in the Rebecca Eddy estate, and was continued one year.

Belle Ocker files report in W. E. Sargent estate.

H. C. Rohm for Frederick Rohm estate, continued till next term.

Same for F. M. Hines, for the Henry Hines estate.

Geo. E. Muhn was continued one year in the Ellen Muhn estate.

Sol Barney administrator of the Geo. Barney estate was continued to the October term for final report.

The Edward Eakright estate was all set over to the widow.

Mrs. Kate Wood objected to the appointment of Geo. E. Gage as executor of the estate of her late husband, Dr. Fred B. Wood. She was herself appointed and gave bond $1,000.

ADJUSTMENT OF ESTATES.

A. H Perfect & Co. given a judgment of $27.77 against administrator in Ellen Muhn estate.

D. Z. Hoffman allowed $6.72 in the Jerry Plum estate.

S. H. Hine, treasurer given a judgment of $434.48 against the Martha Kelley estate for taxes due the county.

M. Kiplinger ad. of Martha Kelley estate files appraisement of property $2600 and gives bond of $6000 with Ab. Kelley, Theo Imhoff and H. K. Leas as security. Property ordered sold at public auction in usual way, after notibe given and the $434.48 due on taxes taken out of first money received.

CHANGE OF FIRM.

The big firm of Bishop & Lackey was changed today by the retirement of Mr. Bishop, Mr. Lackey having purchased his interest in it. This change was made necessary because of Mr. Bishop being so largely interested in the Buggy Body Factory of which he has for some time, been president. He will now be able to give his entire time to the factory. He has, since Maj. Kuhlman went to the front, been a great deal tied up at the factory and this made it all the more difficult for him to stay in the store. Mr. Lackey who now has full control of the store is also an exceptionally able business man and will continue to make the big store as popular in the future as it has been in the past.

ON THEIR WAY SOUTH.

The Indiana troops, half of them started from Camp Mount at about 5 p. m. yesterday, and the rest will go today. They had expected to get started earlier but there was a good deal to do to get ready. Then came the state paymaster, to pay for their time from the date they left home till last evening. As far as the privates and non-commissioned officers were concerned, this war easy to do. But the commissioned officers were called on to pay back the rated value of their uniforms, saddles, etc., etc. The state had furnished these and retained the right to take them back or receive their rated value in cash As their original cost was much greater than what they can now be had for and as many of them had been in use several years, the wearers made a vigorous kick. But it did not do much good. So they had to pay or take off the clothes. A blouse was put at $14; pantaloons at $6; camp hat at $1; saddle at $12; martingale at $4, and other articles accordingly. By the time they had settled with the state, they had paid out near $40 and many were nearly out of money.

The boys walked into the city, making a march of six miles, going down Meridian street. They were cheered all the way and many boxes of provisions were handed to them as they passed. At the Union Station, they took the Pennsylvania road with three large trains, thirty-four cars in three trains. They will be eighteen hours on the road, and are there by this time. The last regiment, the old First, may go today, or on change of orders, may wait awhile.

It took about $25,000 to pay the four regiments And now they begin to draw pay from Uncle Sam at the rate of $16.50 a month and be boarded and clothed.

STILL BIGGER EXCURSION

The Wabash excursion that left Auburn yesterday morning was bigger than the previous one which had proved so popular. Nobody supposed the patronage this time would be as great as it was two weeks before. But in spite of the bad weather which kept many at home, Mr. Zent sold 212 tickets. Had the weather been as pleasant and promising as it was two weeks before, there would have been at least fifty more tickets sold. There was but one train run this time, and so, they were of course, more crowded. After leaving Peru, there was a second train that took up passengers on that road. They arrived at the camp grounds, about 11:30, and put in an hour or two visiting the boys and eating from the big lunch baskets that had been provided, for everybody wanted the soldiers to have a home made lunch before they started for the field. The visit was brought to an early close by the boys having to get ready to march and to be paid off by the state. Then a great many of the visitors went down into the city, and by waiting there for their own train home, they got to see the boys as they marched to the station and took the cars. There was no chance for leave taking, however as your Uncle Samuel does not seem to sympathize much with such things. On the trip home, they had the usual experience of slow running and reached Auburn at about half past three this morning. It did not rain for them till they had got down town there toward evening.

FLAGS GO UP

Religion is free, we are glad to know, but patriotism comes high, now and then. The present time is an instance of this. American flags are in demand everywhere, and the price, goes up rapidly and steadily. Flags that a few days ago sold for $5 are now $8, and both factories are away behind on orders. Marion Willis, who deals in flags here, informs the COURIER that he has to wait several days on all orders he sends in, so as to give the factory time to make their orders up and then get his made. Cuban flags cannot be had, or at least they have none made and cannot say when they will get to them. There are only two factories in the United States where flags are made, and of course they can put up the price list as they please. So it will be seen that it it costs something to be patriotic and is liable to cost more.

—Col. Studebaker of the 157th is now the rauking Colonel just as he should be. The United States goes by the date of the commission and the governor should have done so, too. —Not long ago a man living in a western town made the assertion that it costs a good deal to rear a boy, and then proceded to add; "I opened an account with my oldest son when he was born and kept it faithfully, charging him with every cent paid out on his account, exdept board, while home The boy was 21 not long ago, and I nearly paralyzed him by handing him a bill of $5,948.60, being the amount paid out to keep him alive and reasonably happy."

—It will be remembered that Mary Loveland, a couple of years or so ago, married Frank Jones who lives northwest of town. Last year they were divorced, and it appears that since then she has married the Mr. Otto who used to live here, but is now a citizen of Corunna. Now we hear that they have separated and she is cooking at the Kelley House in Kendallville. If this is so, surely she has had an abundance and a variety of experience in a short time.

$1000 REWARD

For the apprehension and conviction of the parties who composed, printed and distributed the following libelous circular:

To Members of the Associated Bicycle Clubs

FELLOW RIDERS: We, the committee appointed by the Executive Committee to make a complete and searching investigation into the rumors which have recently gained circulation to the effect that the "RAMBLER" bicycle, manufactnred by GORMULLY & JEFFERY for the past nineteen years, during which time it has stood high in public favor, is now being manufactured out of inferior material and put together in a very inferior manner, and therefore unsafe for any other than boulevard riding, make the following statement:

As the matter was deemed important to both ourselves and the firm of manufacturers' whose reputation for years has been of the best, your committee decided to make a complete investigation and give GORMULLY & JEFFERY every opportunity to maintain the reputation so long enjoyed by the "RAMBLER" wheel.

Upon our visit to the offices of GORMULLY & JEFFERY we were very courteously received as the representatives of the Associated Bicycle Clubs, but upon our stating our errand and that we would like to be given the opportunity to inspect the factory and construction of the "RAMBLER" wheel, we were very plainly told that such request could not be granted and that it was none of our business as to how the wheel was manufactured. Mr. Jeffery talked very presistently of his high business standing and stated that the "RAMBLER" had been nineteen years on the market and that the rumors (which he acknowledged were in circulation) were instigated by rival manufacturers. We informed him that we could very easily find out whether or not the "RAMBLER" was a safe wheel to ride if he would give us permission to watch the construction of a set of them, but he declined.

Our next move was to place one of our members, who is well known to you all, in the factory as an employe in the assembling department. He made application and secured emplpyment in the course of a few days and thus had an excellent opportunity to keep his eye on the building of the "RAMBLER" wheel. He spent ten days in the factory and then tendered his resignation, at which the foreman expressed regret, stating that he was one of the best workmen in the room.

Our report is as follows: "The 'RAMBLER' wheel of to-day in no way compares with the 'RAMBLER' of a few years ago. Not only is the material used in its construction of a poor grade, but the workmen are a very inferior lot. Very few mechanics are employed in the factory and none of the men who were with GORMULLY & JEFFERY when they made the wheel famous are with them to-day, on account, we are informed of, the low wages paid.

"We therefore advise all members of the Association to let the 'RAMBLER' alone as it is an unsafe wheel to ride and will not stand road work."

This recommendation is made after a very careful study of the material used and method of manufacturing the "RAMBLER," and we are assured that the reports are true in fact and not instigated by jealous rivals as GORMULLY & JEFFERY assert.

Respectfully,

JOHN CARLSON, OKIE M. CHESMAN, HENRY AHRSON, Committee.

NOTE

For refutation of these falsehoods, and the claim that such a committee was appointed, we refer to the president of any associated cycling club in the U. S. A.

RICH ISLAND GROUP.

THE ORIENTAL COLONY WHICH IS LOST TO SPAIN.

The Islanders, Their Natural Wealth and Their Love of Loafing and Smoking—Manila, Its Antiquities, Dirty Streets and Variety of Evil Odors.

The Philippines.

The victory of the American fleet at Manila awakened interest in the rich islands which that victory has taken from Spain. The Philippines have been a Spanish colony ever since their conquest in 1565, which was effected by a fleet bearing an armed force from the western coast of Mexico. The Spaniards did not accomplish their conquest without difficulty, for, although the natives were poorly armed, having only the weapons common to savage peoples throughout the world, they made a stout resistance, and all the military strength and strategy of the Spaniards were needed in order to subdue them. The islanders have since shown, by oft-repeated insurrections, their objection to Spanish rule, and between 1565 and the insurrection of the present year it is said there has hardly been a decade in which Spanish troops have not been called upon to pacify one or another of the disturbed provinces.

There are 1,200 islands in the Philippine group, the greater number of which, however, are mere dots or islets, inhabited by only a few families. Insignificant as are most of these, the larger islands are of very respectable dimensions, the total area of the entire group being 116,000 square miles. The islands are all of volcanic origin and each has a mountain range. The largest volcano on the islands is Mount Mayon, which travelers describe as being most beautifully situated. It is a perfect cone. There are few large rivers, but many small ones. It rains considerably in the islands and rainfalls are exceedingly heavy, a fall of eight inches in twenty-four hours having frequently been noted.

LOCATION OF THE PHILIPPINES.

EMILIO AQUINALDO.
Insurgent leader of the Philippines.

A torrid heat prevails all the year round. The mean annual temperature of Manila is about 90 degrees, which indicates that in summer the thermometer stands above 100 regularly every day, and hugs the century mark pretty closely during the night. Even in what is called the winter season a temperature of 65 to 85 degrees prevails, so that a Philippine winter would be deemed a tolerably warm American summer. The heat is rendered almost unendurable by the moisture in the atmosphere, for day and night, from year's end to year's end, the air is almost saturated; the perspiration of the body does not dry, but stands in large drops, which fall off on the slightest movement. The heat is so intense in summer that Europeans frequently tumble over with heat apoplexy. Even the Spaniards do their business in the early hours, whiling away the heat of the day in sleep. Late in the afternoon Manila begins to awaken.

The group is rendered a valuable possession from the fertility of the soil and the variety and abundance of its products. Despite the fact that the natives work only under the most urgent provocation, and then only for so long a time as may be necessary to satisfy their simple wants, the plantations of the island produce an immense wealth. The government reports of 1894, the latest available, declared the exports of the islands to be $32,000,000, while the imports were $28,000,000, chiefly of rice, flour, wine, dry goods, petroleum and coal; the exports were of hemp and its manufactures, sugar, coffee, tobacco leaf, cigars and indigo. How greatly the amount of exports might be increased under a proper form of government which did not tax the energy and almost the life out of the people cannot be conjectured, but it is certain that with proper encouragement the Philippine Islanders would become an industrious and wealthy people.

A Mixed People.

The population of the Philippines is probably the worst mixed of any group of islands, even in that part of the world. The islands lie about midway between the continents of Asia and Australia. The Negritos, or aborigines, are closely analogous to the natives of New Guinea and Australia. But the Negritos, long before the coming of the Europeans, had become an unimportant factor in the population, having been driven back into the interior and mountainous portions of the islands by the Malays. When Magellan discovered the islands, in 1521, he found all the coasts settled by Malays. But the Malay Indians by no means monopolized the better parts of the islands, for among them there was a large admixture of Chinese, Japanese, Hindus, Siamese and other Asiatic coast races and tribes, so that the Malays themselves were a sort of composite race. To the present day the heterogeneousness of the population continues, and although the Spanish have political control of the islands, only about 5,000 of these foreigners, and they chiefly officeholders, are to be found on the entire group. The fewness of the number of their conquerors naturally serves as a constant irritation to the natives; that 5,000 strangers should rule, with despotic power, a population variously estimated at between 9,000,000 and 11,000,000 is not to be endured even by ignorant Indians.

The city of Manila is a typical eastern metropolis. It is on the east side of a wide bay, which furnishes a tolerable anchorage, but not a secure place of refuge for shipping. The city itself is, as in most eastern centers of trade, divided into a new and an old town, the latter being fortified with walls in mediaeval style, and containing warehouses, storehouses, offices and an enormous native population, while the new town, much better built, with edifices more modern in style and construction, lies without the walls. A small stream, which during the rainy season becomes a mighty torrent, runs through the heart of the town and divides the two sections. The old town has narrow streets, badly paved, reasonably filthy, well provided with varieties of odors, teeming with East Indians of every age, color and previous condition of dirtiness, whose principal occupation seems to be keeping out of the sun, smoking cigarettes and chewing betel nut. In the interval of smoking they load and unload the vessels, most of which are the street cars, in which everybody—men and women—smokes. A car is usually drawn by a single pony managed by two drivers. One beats the pony and the other holds the reins and blows a tin horn. On the rear platform stands a pompous conductor, who collects a copper all around every time the car passes a section post. These section posts are somewhat less than a mile apart. The conductor is particularly careful to look after the due balance of a car, fore and aft. He will not allow more to stand on one platform than on the other. If there are eight in front and six in the rear, or vice versa, somebody has to stumble through the car from the heavier end to the lighter. This precaution is necessary to prevent derailments. Other precautions still more necessary are omitted. Thus, a woman carrying a little small-pox patient is as welcome as any one else.

TOWN OF CAVITE, NEAR WHICH DEWEY'S FLEET ANCHORED.

The villages consist of collections of huts made of wattles and reeds, thatched with grass. The native naturally feels more secure in these than he would in houses of stone, brick or wood. Earthquakes and typhoons are common. The grass hut can stand the heaviest earthquake shock, and the tremors which bring down a stone building in ruins do not affect the slender structure. When an earthquake occurs, as it does in some portions of the islands from two to seven times a week, the native is amused to see the Europeans jump up and run en dishabille out of their homes for fear the walls will fall upon them, sits under his grass roof and enjoys the sensation, for even if his home does fall he crawls out from under his load of hay, and with the assistance of his wife and neighbors sets up the poles and recommences housekeeping, as though nothing had happened.

Next to the church, the greatest Sunday and holiday resort in a Philippine village is the cock pit, usually a large building wattled like a coarse basket, and surrounded by a high paling of the same description, which forms a sort of courtyard, where cocks are kept waiting their turns to come upon the stage when their owners have succeeded in arranging a satisfactory match. It is claimed that many a respectable Malay pater familias has been seen escaping from the ruins of his burning home, bearing away in his arms his favorite bird, while wife and children were left to shift for themselves.

One of the worst features of cockfighting, outside of its innate brutality, is the betting, universal among the spectators of the game. The sums stated are often very high, and their payment, which is rarely shirked, may involve the ruin of the loser.

THE HARBOR AT MANILA.

A PRINCIPAL STREET IN MANILA.

The native population finding its employment about the shipping, while those not thus engaged have all the occupation they want at their homes, in the manufacture of the coarse goods known as manilla bagging and sacking and in the making of cigars, of which many millions are annually exported to China and India.

Manila affords the stranger many interesting sights, not the least among which are the street cars, in which everybody—men and women—smokes. A car is usually drawn by a single pony managed by two drivers. One beats the pony and the other holds the reins and blows a tin horn. On the rear platform stands a pompous conductor, who collects a copper all around every time the car passes a section post. These section posts are somewhat less than a mile apart. The conductor is particularly careful to look after the due balance of a car, fore and aft. He will not allow more to stand on one platform than on the other. The villages consist of collections of huts made of wattles and reeds, thatched with grass. The native naturally feels more secure in these than he would in houses of stone, brick or wood. Earthquakes and typhoons are common. The grass hut can stand the heaviest earthquake shock, and the tremors which bring down a stone building in ruins do not affect the slender structure. When an earthquake occurs, as it does in some portions of the islands from two to seven times a week, the native is amused to see the Europeans jump up and run en dishabille out of their homes for fear the walls will fall upon them, sits under his grass roof and enjoys the sensation, for even if his home does fall he crawls out from under his load of hay, and with the assistance of his wife and neighbors sets up the poles and recommences housekeeping, as though nothing had happened.

Next to the church, the greatest Sunday and holiday resort in a Philippine village is the cock pit, usually a large building wattled like a coarse basket, and surrounded by a high paling of the same description, which forms a sort of courtyard, where cocks are kept waiting their turns to come upon the stage when their owners have succeeded in arranging a satisfactory match. It is claimed that many a respectable Malay pater familias has been seen escaping from the ruins of his burning home, bearing away in his arms his favorite bird, while wife and children were left to shift for themselves.

One of the worst features of cockfighting, outside of its innate brutality, is the betting, universal among the spectators of the game. The sums stated are often very high, and their payment, which is rarely shirked, may involve the ruin of the loser.

PAID HIS BILLS IN FIGHTS.

Debtor Whips a Landlord and Lawyer Until They Call It Even.

In relating a fight he once had with a man from Illinois, S. H. Piles, of Paducah, says: "At that time I lived in Smithland. W. P. Fowler was judge, I was sheriff, J. W. Code was clerk, Blount Hodge was there and Ben Barnes, Dr. Sanders, T. C. Leech, Judge Bennet, J. W. Bush and many others of the old-timers lived there then. I kept a hotel called the Waverly House. The man from Illinois put up with me. I gave him one of the best rooms. He stayed several days. I got uneasy about my bill and asked him for it. He said that I was in a h—l of a hurry, and that he would pay it whenever he got ready. I very foolishly told him that if he did not pay me right then I would take it out of his hide. He pulled off his coat and said he was ready to settle, and we went at it. We fought for some time, and I thought I had whipped him, but I am sorry to say that I was mistaken.

"He resisted a short time and jumped on me again. When we fought out this round I again thought I had whipped him, but alas! I was again mistaken, for he rested for a time and came at me again. By this time I was very tired of the fight. He got me down on the floor, and after thinking about it for years, I think I was whipped. When he let me get up I told him he did not owe me one cent, and could stay at the Waverly House free of charge as long as he wanted to. This man from Illinois had a lawsuit in our court, and David Greer was his lawyer. David had the suit up in nice shape, and expected a big fee, but, alas for David! This man from Illinois, flushed with victory after getting through with me, concluded to settle with David as he had with me. He went to David's office and told him he had settled his bill with Sam Piles, and now he was ready to pay him his fee in the same way. David got up out of his chair and backed himself up in the corner and told the man from Illinois that he did not owe him one cent, and also told him that if it would be unpleasant for him to stay longer with me that he could go home with him and it would cost him nothing to stay as long as he desired to; but the man from Illinois had not completed his mission at Smithland as yet. He owed Tom Robertson a livery stable bill; he called on him to settle. Tom told him he owed him nothing. He then called on Mr. Cade, and he told him the same thing.

"The last time I heard from this man from Illinois was that he was fighting the livery stable man at New Liberty, Ill., to get his horse out of the stable without pay, and he did so."

ROME'S PINCIO LOVE MATCHES.

A Way in Which Youths in the Eternal City Pick Out Their Brides.

It is probable that the Pincio sees the inception of half the marriages in Rome.. It is a curious sociological fact, but the explanation of it is simple. It has been commented upon by numberless writers, that Italians are exclusive, though not in the usually accepted sense of the word. They are proverbially open and friendly, especially to strangers, the commercial value of whose visits to their land they appreciate. But this cordiality, even to their own countrymen, has its limit. In no country more than in Italy is a man's home his castle, and, except in the highest circles and where there is no poverty to be concealed, he is chary of his hospitality. This is especially true of Rome and Naples. Therefore, if neither she nor her parents receive many visitors, how is the Roman girl of the bourgeois class who is not "in society" to meet the inevitable lover for whose advent and her consequent emancipation from parental tyranny she longs more ardently than young women usually do? The answer is: "The Pincio."

On Thursdays and Sundays, when the band plays (uncommonly well, by the way), and the park is in consequence crowded to overflowing, the signorina who is the fortunate possessor of a becoming costume dons it, and demurely acompanies her mother to the municipal pleasure ground, where each expends 10 centimes for the temporary right to a comfortable chair, ingeniously constructed so as to be springy, though fashioned entirely of iron. If she be a wise maiden, she will so maneuver that the chairs will be placed on the main pathway, where everyone must pass. This being achieved, she may await developments. And if she have pretensions to beauty, she will not long be left in anticipation. The young men who pass will gaze at her approvingly; and finally one, to whom she may especially appeal, will detach himself from the crowd and take up his stand before her. Thus is initiated the first chapter of the romance. From that moment, without a word or sign, and even with scarcely a look from her, he becomes her swain and faithful knight. Week after week he sees her at the Pincio; he even follows her about the streets. Having ascertained her abode and her name, he generally soon manages to find a mutual friend who performs the introduction. The rest is obvious. Or, if they do not happen to have acquaintances in common, when the silent love-making has progressed far enough, a demand for the damsel's hand is made directly to her parents.

A Wonderful Fluid.

A German chemist has prepared a fluid that has the power, when injected into the tissues of a plant near its roots, of anesthetizing the plant. The plant does not die, but stops growing, maintaining its fresh, green appearance, though its vitality is apparently suspended. It is also independent of the changes in temperature, the most delicate hothouse plants continuing to bloom in the open. The composition of the fluid is shrouded in the greatest mystery, but it is said to have a pungent odor and to be colorless.

"Well," said the great importer, "you want a position as tea-taster, do you? Have you ever had any experience in this business?" "No," the applicant replied, "but I've boarded around and eaten at restaurants so long that I know I'd be a good one at it. I could tell the genuine tea right off, because it would be so different, you know."—Chicago News.

You know what you say about your poor kin? Well, that's the way your folks who have money talk about you.

"OLD ABE," THE WAR EAGLE.

The Patriotic Bird that Saw Hard Service During the Civil War.

It is unlikely that there will be any mascot during the war with Spain who will gain a popularity as great as that enjoyed by "Old Abe," the war eagle, says a Chicago paper. No more famous bird ever lived. Everybody has heard of him. Poems and songs were written in his honor. Old Abe was bought for a bushel of corn. Afterward Barnum offered $20,000 for him; but, of course, the offer was refused. His captor was an Indian who found him in 1861 on the Flambeau River, near the line between Ashland and Price counties in Wisconsin. The bird was young then, and the Indian sold him to Daniel McCann, of Eagle Point, for a bushel of corn.

The bird's military experience began a few months later. He was given to a military company which had just been organized by Capt. John E. Perkins for the Eighth Regiment. The eagle was sworn in by putting around his neck red, white and blue ribbons, and on his breast a rosette of the same colors. James McGinnis was made his attendant. The name of Old Abe was given to the eagle at Madison in honor of President Lincoln. The bird's fame spread quickly and even before they went to the front the men of Company C were known as Eau Claire eagles, and the Eighth Regiment, of which it was a part, was called the Eagles in honor of Old Abe. Old Abe was with the regiment from the time it was mustered in, and he never left it. Quartermaster Billings made him a perch in the shape of a heart, patriotically and properly adorned, and there he stood at the head of his regiment. No general attracted so much attention on the way South as did Old Abe. He occupied a conspicuous place with the colors, for Company C was the color company, and the color bearer and the bearer of Old Abe marched side by side.

OLD ABE.

During the war Old Abe did gallant service. It was his nature to be greatly excited in the midst of turmoil, and to become calm when it was over. He always announced the approach of the enemy by a note of alarm, and during the battle would hover in the air, watching the outcome of the contest. He became as famous among the Confederates as among the Union army. The men made him a rallying cry and the sight of the bird would give them new courage for battle. So well was this understod that at the siege of Corinth the rebel general Price ordered his men to seize or capture the bird, and he declared that he would rather capture Old Abe than a whole brigade. But although wounded at the battle of Corinth and afterward before Vicksburg, as well as en route from Memphis to Helena, he survived the war.

Old Abe came home in 1864 with his company on a furlough. After his return to his native place, which is now known as Price County, it was resolved that he should be presented to his native State, and on Sept. 26 the company made the gift. To-day the eagle, stuffed, stands in the War Museum at Washington.

WAITING FOR RELIEF.

Whaler Officer Travels 2,000 Miles to Bring Aid to Arctic Colony.

George Tilton, third officer of the steam whaler Belvidere, traveled 2,000 miles over snow and ice to bring aid to an Arctic colony. His companions and the crews of the Orea, a steam whaler, the J. H. Freeman, a steamer, and the Rosario, a schooner, and from four other vessels form the colony on the Son Morse islands. They were the ships caught in the "young ice" off Point Barrow.

When the ships' crews had been rescued from the ice that crushed the vessels; when the provisions had with infinite labor been transported to the island where the men had to live; when the wood and the sails left from the wrecks had been built into huts for the 360 men who had been wrecked, Tilton started for civilization.

He had to kill some of his dogs for food, and he had to quench his thirst by moistening his lips with a little snow. He had two guides, an Eskimo and his wife. Coming over the glaciers the trio had to be lashed together to avoid being separated in the blizzards. Three times Tilton was all but frozen, but the vigorous action of the Eskimo saved him. It took him nearly five months to reach St. Michael, where he met Lieut. Jarvis, of the relief expedition.

A Famous Castle.

Part of Dunvegan Castle, Skye, the ancestral home of the Macleods, dates from the ninth century, and is believed to be the oldest inhabited house in the country—private residence, of course, we mean. The castle is a fine old pile, built on a promontory at the head of Loch Follart, and must have been a place of great strength in the days when the Macleods and Macdonalds were at constant warfare. One of its cherished treasures is the fairy flag, the palladium of the house of Macleod. Legend invests it with marvelous qualities. Three times only, however, could the virtues of the flag be utilized. Twice, we are told, it has been unfurled with magical results. Its last reserve of power must only be employed if the clan is "ever on the verge of utter extinction," and of such a calamity the contingency seems far removed.

NEW OUTING GOWNS.

BRILLIANT WAISTCOATS AND YOKES MUCH IN EVIDENCE.

The Useful Outing Dress of the Sensible Girl Is "Easy" in Fit—Tailor Gowns Are Made to Fit Like a Glove.

Hints as to Late Styles.

New York correspondence:

PERSISTENT effort toward comfort and sense is noticeable in what are styled outing dresses. This year's change is toward distinctly "easy" dressing, and that means wide walsts. The season's stylish widener is a squared-off jacket that is almost "box" for comfort, and yet that follows the curves of the figure and so escapes the awkwardness of boxed flatness. This jacket can be drawn close in front, but it will always be easy. It is especially pretty when worn open, thus showing the bright lining, and in the dainty deviation from tailor severity that is pictured here had the jacket tied in front with ribbons that kept it from flying, and that still allowed the shirt waist beneath to show. All the goods suitable for outing rigs are available for such jackets, and silk lining isn't an essential, but is quite as much of an addition as such lining is anywhere. Tan cloth machine-stitched and held and lined with lavender silk was used for the original of this ketch. Under such a jacket a fancy bodice, an elaborate shirt waist or something of strictly tailor finish may be worn. The skirt must be plain, the correct outing dress never permitting a draped skirt. As a rule the skirt is set on a wide belt that serves as outside belt as well as band.

The rulings in tailor gowns meant for show rather than for utility are very different, and their glove fit gives none a chance to complain of widening. It is in such rigs that the brilliant waistcoat announces that it has come to stay.

Navy blue—which really is a much darker shade than most shops will admit it is—is a fine shade to fit with a scarlet waistcoat, especially if a touch of scarlet shows in the braid trimming, and these were the specifications of the left-hand gown of to-day's large illustration. Broadcloth, taffeta and black braid in which was a little scarlet were the materials. In other gowns of this sort gray braided with silver takes a white broadcloth waistcoat front and dainty silver buttons. Any of the popular burnt-brown and orange-tobacco colors make up handsomely with yellow for the waistcoat, while the more conservative mode color looks well with a gray-brown cloth. As a rule the lining of the skirt should match or harmonize with the waistcoat front, and it is well to allow a band that matches to show at the foot of the sleeve in cuff fashion.

But brilliant colors are wanted somewhere by many wearers of tailor rigs, and when a waistcoat effect doesn't furnish it, then a bright yoke may do it. As in the two examples shown, the top of the dress where the yoke begins is finished by braid scrolling, and the yoke follows all the curves. Sometimes shoulder caps are made part of the yoke, and very often the yoke extends here and there below the regular line in the loops and curves the scrolling makes. Cloth is usually chosen for these yokes; when silk is used it is likely to be tucked or puffed. Of these two, the first was mauve silk and wool mixture trimmed with bright red broadcloth and black braid, and the other was brown suiting topped with burnt orange ladies' cloth and finished with black braid.

In view of the loud and general cry no longer than three months ago that tailor rigs were to be untrimmed, the prevalence of such costumes is significant. Evidently women wouldn't back up the designers. And there are other devices of trimming that are more profuse and newer. One of these, a downright novelty, appears in the next sketch. This notion makes use of the basket weave so popular now as a foundation for embroidery of the old cross-stitch type. A handsome decoration consists of shield front, cuffs, collar and perhaps bands for the sleeves or epaulettes for the shoulders. That sketched included a belt and a finish for the edge of the jacket below the belt. Its dress goods was pale blue, and the trimming was canary basket cloth stitched in dark blue.

MAROON CHEVIOT AND CADET BLUE HOP SACKING.

Handsome panel pieces are also provided for skirts, and, as this picture indicates, a deal of such trimming is permissible; but a less amount than that shown wil be quite as effective.

The apron front skirt hangs so prettily that it is pushing the plain skirt hard. Its most tasteful form is shown in the final illustration. The apron portion fits perfectly, following the hip line closely and below the apron, the line of which is usually marked by strap or braiding; the skirt is set on in umbrella fashion, flaring gracefully to the hem. You should know that such a skirt is beyond the skill of the ordinary dressmaker, and that a badly made apron skirt or Spanish flounce skirt, as they are sometimes called, is a dreadful botch and cannot be remedied.

TRIMMINGS THAT HOLD IN TAILOR GOWNS.

This last picture shows, too, a pretty modification of the tight-fitting jacket bodice which allows the front breadths to fall loose below the waist line, the waistcoat beneath fitting closely. Almost all bodices that are not bloused are made in jacket fashion. A few waists of the old-time basque design are appearing. The line of the jacket is sometimes continued on the skirt by braiding, thus breaking the plainness of the skirt without taking from the height of the wearer.

AN EVEN NEWER SORT OF DECORATION.

Hornet as a Friend of Science.

According to the Revue Scientifique (Paris), M. Phisalix, an authority on the venom of insects and reptiles, has discovered that the poison of the hornet in sufficient quantity is an antidote for that of the viper. In his experiments M. Phisalix extracted the poison from the stings of the hornets and then inoculated guinea pigs with it. The result is said to have been entirely satisfactory to all concerned except the hornet, which, under this method of treatment, is deprived of the pleasure of using his sting and noting for himself the effect of the operation. If the hornet were permitted to apply his own poison to the victims of snake bites, the same beneficial effects could be obtained, and this energetic agent of science would be accorded the satisfaction that arises from the performance of a congenial act.—Baltimore Sun.

Value of Woolen Mills' Waste.

The waste liquids from woolen mills threatened, like Tennyson's "brook," to "run on forever," till science came to the rescue. The recovered product called "magma" is caught in canvas bags and subjected to hydraulic pressure. It yields an oil, which, when distilled, is a combination of cloth oil (used in wool and jute spinning and in soap-making) and stearin, from which candles are made. There is also a black refuse, valuable as a fertilizer; a hard pitch, unequaled as a lubricator in iron rolling mills, and a light spirit oil, used to dissolve rubber.

Aborigines Practiced Dentistry.

Charles Noel, who has been examining a number of Indian mounds near Portsmouth, Ohio, while recently excavating a mound on the Feurt farm, five miles from Portsmouth and on the banks of the Scioto river, found a skeleton which partially crumbled away when brought to the surface. Enough was saved, however, to show that the aborigines practiced a form of dentistry. All the teeth in the skull were sound save two, and these were filled by pearls.

In proportion to its size a fly walks about thirty-five times as fast as a man.

Explosive Sea Shells.

Walking along the beach on Mobile Bay, a young woman, a relative of the writer, picked up a handful of little shells, left by the tide, and among them several shells of a small marine "snail," the largest of which was probably a half-inch in diameter, and the smallest some three-eighths of an inch. She dropped them into her pocket and forgot all about them until several days afterward, when an unpleasant odor in her wardrobe attracted her attention to them. On taking them out of the pocket some fell on the floor, and in recovering them she placed her foot on one. The act was followed by an explosion, quite sharp, and loud enough to be heard all over the floor on which her room is. Astonished, she concluded to try another, and the same result followed. The shells were then brought to the writer, who on examination found the mouth of each firmly closed by a membrane of greater or less thickness, formed by the drying of the animal slime. This had probably occurred soon after removal, from the moisture of the beach, and the little inhabitant of the shell dying, the gases of decomposition had quite filled its internal space. On exerting a little pressure by squeezing the shell between two blocks of wood quite a loud explosion was produced, the fragments of the shell being thrown several feet. Subsequently, on trying the experiment, out of a dozen shells only two failed to explode. The conditions most favorable to success in making the experiment seem to be removal from the beach in very hot, dry weather, which causes the slime to be exuded in greater quantity than usual and dries it up rapidly as it exudes.

The Clove Tree.

The clove tree is a native of the Molucca Islands and belongs to the far-spread family of myrtles. It is a tall, very handsome evergreen, with ovate, oblong leaves and purplish flowers, arranged in corymbs on short, jointed stalks. The flowers are produced in great profusion, and when they appear, which is at the beginning of the rainy season, they are in the form of elongated, greenish buds. These unexpanded buds are the cloves of commerce, which derive their name from the Spanish word clavo, "a nail," so called from the real or fancied resemblance of the bud to a nail.

Sometimes the clove fruit appears in commerce in a dried state, under the name of "mother cloves." It has an odor and flavor similar to cloves, but is much weaker.

The flower buds are beaten from the tree and are dried by the smoke of wood fires and afterward by the sun. If the buds remain on the trees the calices gradually swell, the embryo seeds enlarge and the pungent properties of the cloves are to a great degree dissipated.

Cloves consist of two parts, a round head, which is, in fact, the flower rolled up, enclosing a number of small filaments, and the four points that surround the flower and form the flower cup of the unripe seed vessel. When they are soaked for a short time in hot water the flowers soften and readily unroll, so that all of the parts may be seen.

The entire clove tree is highly aromatic, and the footstalks of the leaves have nearly the same pungent quality as the calyx of the flower.

Court of Peter the Great.

With all his grossness and his violence, Peter the Great of Russia had the foresight to see that without liberty for women there is no civilization. As a young man, before he assumed the imperial crown, his favorite diversion was to frequent the foreign quarter of Moscow, in which the cleanliness and the elegancies of western life were to be found in the houses of German and English merchants and engineers, and where he met ladies in social life. One of the great Czar's first innovations was to have evening parties at court, at which Russian ladies were ordered to appear in full dress. These entertainments seemed a little stiff at first, for the Russian nobleman's idea of enjoying himself in the 17th century was to get intoxicated, and he was possibly balked by the presence of his female relatives; but stay-at-homes were punished, and gradually a party without women would have seemed incomplete. It is curious, however, to remember that the ladies were not allowed to be abstemious, and that Peter the Great's ideal court lady was she who could drink the hardest and longest. And the favorite beverage in those days was brandy!

Attendance at Berlin University.

There are at present at Berlin University 5,921 students, 2,000 of whom are studying medicine, 1,291 law, 448 theology. The theological department is on the decline, and has the least students of any time in the past five years. There are over 500 foreign students in this university, 100 from the United States.

Nervous Spells and That Tired Feeling Cured by Hood's.

"My health was very poor. I had nervous spells and did not sleep well at night. When I arose in the morning I was tired and exhausted and did not feel any more rested than when I retired at night. I knew I needed a medicine to build me up, and I concluded to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the first bottle had been taken I felt so much better that I procured five more. I am now taking the last one, and I have not felt as well and strong for years." H. P. JONES, 223 E. Mulbury St., Kokomo, Indiana.

AN ANCIENT CUSTOM.

From Republican Traveler, Arkansas City, Kan.

Pilgrimages to some shrine of St. Vitus, to cure the disease known as St. Vitus' dance are no longer made. The modern way of treating this affliction is within reach of every household, as is shown by the experience of Karl A. Wagner, the 11-year-old son of George Wagner, of 515 9th street, Arkansas City, Kan. The father tells the story as follows:

"Over a year ago," he says, "Karl was taken with St. Vitus' dance and continued to grow worse; during five months he was under a physician's care. His tongue became paralyzed and we could not understand a word he said. He became very thin, lost the use of his right leg and seemed doomed to become a hopeless invalid. We had about given up hope when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended to my wife by a lady whose daughter had been cured of a similar affliction by the pills.

"I bought a box of them at once and soon noticed a change for the better in Karl's condition. I was so well pleased that I bought more of them, and when he had taken five boxes the disease disappeared.

A Hopeless Invalid.

"That was six months ago and there has been no return of the disease. The cure was effectual and permanent, and I feel satisfied that no other medicine could have produced so marvelous a result. We feel rejoiced over the restoration of our son, and cannot help but feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the most remarkable medicine on the market."

No discovery of modern times has proved such a blessing to mankind as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions, they restore strength and health in the exhausted patient when every effort of the physician proves unavailing.

Birds that Exercise Ingenuity.

Birds building on high trees are not so wary about the concealment of their nests as hedge-builders and those that seek the springing corn or grass land for the shelter of their homes, trusting to the loftiness of situation for security. A nest placed upon the ground is in constant danger of exposure. A browsing animal might destroy it. Then, the scythe with one sweep occasionally lays bare one or more nests, thereby endangering the eggs or callow nestlings. This renders the parent birds very wary, and causes them to practice great ingenuity in their efforts to protect the young birds.

The skylark has been known to carry its eggs or offspring to a place of safety after an exposure of the nest, and it has been said that its long hind claw—the use of which has puzzled many naturalists—is specially adapted by nature for more easily grasping and transporting its treasures from the source of danger. When the young birds are too bulky to be thus removed, the parent bird carries them on its back, though this mode of removal is a somewhat difficult one.

War with Spain.

As war with Spain has broken out the officials seem to think that all that will be needed is warships, torpedo boats and other instruments of destruction. But really what will be needed more than anything else is a good supply of "5 DROPS" (manufactured by the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., 167 Dearborn street, Chicago Ill.) to knock out the Rheumatism which is sure to grip our soldiers and sailors in the miasmatic climate of Cuba and the surrounding islands. The truth is that something to heal and cure is precisely what is needed right now in the desolated "Queen of the Antilles." Those 200,000 reconcentrados reported dying by hundreds need provisions, but they need good medicines fully as much. If Miss Barton, of the Red Cross relief work, was supplied with "5 DROPS" she could save many a sick Cuban. These miraculous "5 DROPS" conquer many of the worst diseases, such as Rheumatism, Neuralgia, the excruciating Sciatica and the other diseases for which it is recommended. The War Department should see that there is an abundant supply of "5 DROPS" in the medicine chests.

A Curious Lake.

In the midst of Kildine, an island in the North Sea, is perhaps the most curious lake in the world. The surface of its waters is quite fresh, and supports fresh water creatures and fresh water vegetation; but deep down it is as salty as the bluest depths of the sea, and sponges and salt water fish live and have their being, to the delight and despair of all scientists.

TRIALS OF SALESWOMEN.

Mrs. Pinkham Says Standing Still is One of Woman's Most Trying Tasks.

Have you ever thought why it is that so many women or girls rather walk for an hour than stand still for ten minutes?

It is because most women suffer from some derangement of their delicate organism, the discomfort from which is less trying when they are in motion than when standing.

So serious are these troubles and so dangerous to health that the laws in some states compel employers to provide resting places for their female employees.

But no amount of law can regulate the hard tasks of these women. Customers are exacting, and expect the saleslady to be always cheerful and pleasant. How can a girl be cheerful when her back is aching, when she is sadly down pains? No matter how sweet tempered she is naturally, her nerves give way under the pain after a while. Employers, however, don't want cross and snappy saleswomen. Cheerfulness is very important capital, and no one can be amiable when racked with pain.

If you are ill or suffering, write without delay to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and tell her all about yourself. Your story will not be new to her; she has heard it many thousand times and will know just what you need. Without doubt, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, it has done such wonderful things for suffering women. Do not hesitate to write her all the little things that make you feel miserable. Your letter will not be seen by any man, and Mrs. Pinkham's advice will cost you nothing.

Read this letter from Mrs. MARGARET ANDERSON, 463 Lisbon St., Lewiston, Me.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For years I had suffered with painful menstruation every month. At the beginning of menstruation it was impossible for me to stand up for more than five minutes, I felt so miserable. One day a little book of Mrs. Pinkham's was thrown into my house, and I sat right down and read it. I then got some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills.

"I can heartily say that to-day I feel like a new woman; my monthly suffering is a thing of the past. I shall always praise the Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me."

—Phil. Noel was up through here today to pay for the fine horse he bought for his son, John Noel. At the time he took the horse down, last Sunday, Eli Shull took one to Maj. Kuhlman.

—MARRIED:—At the Lutheran parsonage Saturday evening, May 7, by Rev. J. D. Brosy, George Rogers and Milmatte Carmer. This young couple will make their future home in Auburn.

—A letter from Mrs. Barns leaves het at Indianapolis, at Mrs. Ensley's Wednesday forenoon. She had been to Camp Mount and seen many of the boys, but was about to start for Bloomington when the note was written.

—It appears that young Decker escaped from the jail on Sunday, but nothing was said about it. He slipped out when the jailer went into the cells for some purpose. It has not been so very long since the keys were carried off bodily by that Elkhart boy. It would be well for those in charge to be more careful. We have a strong, sound jail, but it is getting to be too common for prisoners to get out.

—Ft. Wayne Sentinel:—A Warsaw man studded his cement sidewalk with a large number of rare coins. It was an unique and pretty display while it lasted, but some nights ago an unannointed wretch under coyer of darkness pried the coins from the cement and where they once nestled are only some unsightly holes. The man is indignant, of course, but he is only reaping just retribution for thrusting temptation literally under the foot of the wayfarer.

—The markets in New York City which were formerly supplied with vegetables from New York and New Jersey, now receive their supplies largely from the South, which through recent developments in rapid transportation, refrigerator cars and other modern developments are able to place the products of their favored climate in the markets of the great cities in competition with those located nearer, one result plainly apparent being a reduction in the price of farm lands in the States adjacent to these great business centers.

—Issac Oohs, of Ligonier, was in town today. His son Jake, who is in Co. L at Camp Mount, has been promoted to first lieutenant, and is one of the best qualified young officers in the regiment. He had been a member of the Jackson Guards at Jackson, Mich., before he came to Ligonier. The youngest son, Herman, whom Auburn people will remember as a little boy, is a member of Co. G. Third Texas regiment. We were shown a recent letter from him, dated at Austin, Texas; saying he is well, and that the soldiers feel proud of the ovation paid them when they started for camp. He is 1st corporal.

—Frank Joliff came home last evening for a furlough of a few days, and will probably return on Saturday, unless called sooner. He says the boys are anxious to go to the front as soon as they can. He says that young Thomas, son of J. R. Thomas, after being rejected by the examining surgeon, went over to another company, joined them, and when the examining surgeon reached him, he passed all right. This looks as if there was some poor work being done. He does not believe the regiment will be moved for several days, as the men are not yet all equipped. Still they may be taken south and the new outfits sent to them.

Friday's Daily.

—Mrs. Lige whose death was reported in the COURIER yesterday died of heart trouble. She had been afflicted with it for several years. When she took sick Wednesday night, she died within 15 minutes.

—MARRIED:—last evening at the home of Wash. Douglas, ½ mile west of Auburn, at 8:30 by J. D. Brosy. Charles W. Niles and Jessie Douglas. A umber of friends were present to witness the marriage. After the ceremony, we were invited to a fine and palatable epast, which was enjoyed by all present. Mr. and Mrs. Niles will make their future home in Auburn. We all unite in giving them our best wishes.

—The Shoe and Leather Reporter, referring to the foreign demand for American boots and shoes and leather, says that the demand for our boots and shoes which comes from Europe and Australia is steadily increasing. January exports of leather and manufactures of leather were more than fifty per cent. in excess of those of January of 1898, thus showing a foreign demand for our leather as well as our manufactures from it.

—C. E Hadsell of Ft. Wayne was in the city this forenoon, going north again on the noon train. He is in the oil business traveling on the road and was here to interview our business men. He staid last night with Arthur Grube as he had been a partner of the late Jeff Grube in business at Fort Wayne. Mr. Hadsell is a son of Austin Hadsell and is therefore a nephew of Byron and C. J. Hadsell of this county and of Carson and Marshall Hadsell who have moved away.

EARLY DAYS IN INDIANA

Rev. McCoy's Trip From Fort Wayne To Niles In 1823

In Rev. Isaac McCoy's "History of Baptist Indiana Missions" is an account of a journey which that missionary and several companions made from Fort Wayne to Carey Mission, near the present town of Niles, Mich The party started from Fort Wayne on April 22, 1823, and six weeks were spent in making the journey. It is probable that they traveled not far from the old Fort Wayne road. Frequent mention is made of the Elkhart river (written Elkheart) and Rock creek (probably Rock Run) is also spoken of. They started with several wagons and had a drove of cattle and sheep. The road was almost impassable and the streams were high, so that it was an extremely difficult matter to travel and much more so to transport the merchandise and to drive the cattle and sheep. Quoting Rev. McCoy's own words: "At Elkhart river we halted and made a periogue, of large canoe, out of a single tree, intending to transport some of our loading down that river and the St. Joseph to our place. The road along which we had thus far come was at this time considered, even by the government express from the military post at Chicago, to be impassable. But the want, at our station, of such property as we carried with us had impelled us to make extraordinary efforts to get thus far."

They ferried their wagon and their sheep across the river in the canoe. The horses and cattle swam. A short distance below the landing place, a spot was selected upon which the party could camp and there the stock were gathered together. Three men had been left to load the canoe with what merchandise was to be transported down the river. The party in advance had scarcely settled themselves in their camp when they saw the loaded canoe coming down the river, and hurried to the bank to assist in landing it. But it became entangled in a tree-top in a place where the current was very swift and was capsized. The whole load was turned into the river and everyone plunged in to save whatever he could. They managed to save eight barrels of flour, two barrels of corn meal, a little seed corn, a box of dried fruit and some clothing. Some of these articles had floated about two miles down the river before they were rescued. One barrel of flour, one of salt, a quanity of potatoes, and a number of other articles were lost, and besides much of what was saved had become much damaged.

"Our potatoes," says the narrative, "and some of our corn were for seed for the coming season; the articles designed for food we were confident we should greatly need at the station. Weary and wet, we surrounded our little fire in the woods, talked over our misfortunes, and felt that it was to us all a sorrowful evening."

On the next day, they again loaded their canoe and started it down the river. Three of the men accompanied it, leaving only Rev. McCoy, a hired man by the name of Wright, and an Indian boy to travel by land. These three selected a camping place some distance down the river and again pitched their tent, waiting for the canoe and the other three men to arrive. Meanwhile Rev. McCoy visited an Indian camp and tried to buy some meet but did not succeed. All that he could purchase of the Indians was a pound and a half of sugar.

Much more could be said concerning this expedition, but this is sufficient to show the readers of this paper what privations were endured by those who traveled over this now beautiful section of country before it had become the home of white the man.

PERRY FAIR TRIAL.

Judge Powers went south on the forenoon train and brought word that the Perry Fair trial was about over. All the witnesses were examined yesterday, and when he came away, the lawyers were making their pleas. Among those who went from here yesterday and testified were W. H. McIntosh, who also carried up the books of the county clerk; L. Bowers, Miss Effie Hines, Frank Hogue, Charles Raut, and M. B. Willis. All that were called on testified yesterday and the most of them came home on the afternoon train. There are various opinions as to the case, the most of them being that Fair will be cleared. But of course no one can tell as it lies with the jury alone. There is no doubt in the minds of anyone, but Perry knew what was going on, whether he got any of the boodle or not. And that he probably got some of the boodle is to be inferred from the fact that he raised at least, those two orders. If he was in the business of making orders and did not get anything out of them it would be something remarkable. But in this particular case he was charged with raising two county orders. If the charge is confined to this one thing it is doubtful whether he can be convicted as it is well known that he did not pass the orders he had forged They were found in his possession before he had passed them or got them cashed. They were the two orders to jurors for jury services, one of about $19 and the other of about $29, which at first were good, but he raised each one of them $100. We may not hear from the case before going to press today.

As we go to press Mr. Baxter returns. He says the jury had been out about fifteen minutes when he came away.

Dog Tax Trouble

(Goshen Democrat)

The county assessors are collecting comfortable side rolls of dog tax per day, and yet there is trouble to come. Many of the owners of the dogs are promising to pay later. Others are saying that they intend to kill the dogs. This latter will not save them, as the tax is for last year and not in advance. There is a mistaken impression among number of dog owners. They think that the assessor is authorized to pull a gun and shoot a dog if the tax is not paid instanter. The law specifies that the assessor shall hand to the township trustee on June 5th, a list of all such taxes uncollected, and the trustee places the facts in the hands of the prosecutor, and this means that a fine and costs of about $15 will be assessed against the recreant owner. Mean while, and thereafter, if ownership is repudiated, the canine runs the streets according to his own sweet will. It is the intention of the assessor to give the owner all the accommodation possible, and prosecution will not be made except upon necessity.

School Population.

The school enumeration has now been completed and Supt. Coe has made up his report. He compliments the trustees on their promptness in submitting their reports to him. There have been fewer transfers than last year, and the total number has increased 14. The following is the list, and shows the comparison between last year and this:

TOWNSHIPS	1897	1898
Butler	244	237
Concord	531	516
Fairfield	361	383
Franklin	359	361
Grant	134	136
Jackson	445	454
Keyser	414	402
Newville	187	179
Richland	443	441
Smithfield	212	307
Stafford	131	144
Troy	165	168
Union	109	105
Wilmington	347	343
TOWNS.
Ashley	145	162
Auburn	765	845
Butler	512	539
Waterloo	370	342
Garrett	968	932
Total	6,982	6,996

From this it will be seen that the corporation that has gained most, is the town of Auburn, which shows again of 80 over last year. Garrett fell back 36; Waterloo, 28; Butler gained 27; Ashley gained 17.

JURY DISAGREED.

A phone from Angola just before noon says the jury in the Perry Fair case had been discharged as they could not agree. They had stood 8 for acquittal and 4 for conviction, all the time from 1:30 p. m. yesterday to 11 a. m. today, 21½ hours.

FALSE REPORT.

The COURIER has exercised a great deal of care as to telegraphic reports flying over the wires, especially as to those coming in late. So when the report came yesterday at nearly 4:30 that Sampson's fleet had met and nearly destroyed the Spanish fleet, we gave it out as a "rumor" omitting the particulars given in the dispatch. But about the time the COURIER was fairly on the streets, people read the news, and then as it was supplemented by still further telegrams, giving details, everyone went wild. There were cheers, then cannon firing, then whistles blew, and then church bells rang. This was kept up for some half hour, or until Rus Guilford's little cannon got tired and his powder was used up. But all the evening it was the talk of the town. It came to be believed that Sampson had met Spanish fleet, and captured all of them and sunk nine. This morning the truth began to come in. What Sampson had done, was to bombard the forts at San Juan, the chief city of Porto Rico He had every thing his own way, destroyed the forts, and scared the people out of the city and took one or two Spanish ships.

THE 15th REGULARS GO.

Two Auburn boys will get to see something of the world. Daisy Bumpus today received a letter from Bert Rickard at Fort Wingate, New Mexico in which he says his regiment the 15th U. S. Regulars, nas received orders to go to Manilla, Phillippine Islands to furnish a land force for Admiral Dewey. This is the same regiment in which Will Snell is. They had been at Fort Bayard, for some time, but were lately sent to Fort Wingate to be nearer to such Indians as were likely to be troublesome.

TOOK A LIFE TIME.

But Was Amply Rewarded—The Knowledge Acquired Graciously

DEDICATED TO HUMANITY.

Many years ago Dr. Wheeler, then a young man with keen perception of physical needs, noted the lack of knowledge in the treatment of nerves, and through them the entire system. He determined to devote his life and direct his efforts to the study and treatment of that mysterious and subtle structure. He followed his determination well and successfully, and as a result the world is endowed with a remedy, Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, which is a specific for all nervous troubles. It remained for Dr. Wheeler to present and develop the fact that disease is a result of a debilitated nerve system; that strong nerves make health. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is, beyond all doubt, the true remedy for sick nerves. W. A. Emmons, Pettysville, Ohio, endorses this statement. He says:

"Last summer I was stricken with sleeplessness and nervous prostration. I could get no relief, and was growing worse when Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was recommended. The first bottle helped me and the third one restored me to perfect health. During my sickness I lost 20 pounds, which I soon regained after the use of this valuable medicine."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is not an experimental compound, neither is its virtue confined to the treatment of special sets of nerves, but through the entire nervous system, restoring strength to all the vital organs.

WANTED TO GO.

An Exchange Has The Following Item of War News:

A deaf mute walked up and handed in a carefully written application, giving his name as H. C. Anderson. In this petition he said: "The crucial test of valor is on the battlefield and not by loud mouthings of vaporings. You are well aware I am deaf, but I beg you will leave this out of your consideration for I have eyes to see and hands for action which I assure you I will endeavor to use to the best advantage within my power."

He seemed greatly disappointed when told by the recruiting officers that his services could not be accepted.

North Indiana Ahead

We have already spoken of the new numbers of the Indiana regiments. The Third which hails from this corner of the state, is no longer the Third but as it was the first one to be sworn in to the service of the United States, it becomes the "157th Ind." But Co. K is still Co. K. And not only is this section of the state ahead, but the state itself leads the other states in readiness to move and in active preparations. It is said there is considerable lagging behind and discussing going on between the federal authorities and the several other states of the union, as to whether the men can be called out of the state or not. This, as plainly shown in the COURIER recently, is all unnecessary. When these state troops are mustered into the service of the United States, they by that act become for all intents and purposes, soldiers of the regular army, and all talk of refusing to go outside the state or the United States is nonsense They will have to go to the ends of the earth if ordered to do so by the President and Secretary of war. Any other condition would be impossible. But Indiana has not asked to be excused from going anywhere, and will not ask it. The governor says so, and the men said so when they enlisted. And other states will say so, as soon as they will come to find out that this is a real war and not a political campaign in which to reward friends and punish foes. It will be but a few days when other states will get over their foolish ideas, stop bothering the authorities at Washington and sail into line behind the great state of Indiana.

THE OLD QUESTION

As long as we can remember, the northern and southern parts of the of Michigan have been talking of a divorce. The south part which is completely cut off from the north part by the waters of the Great Lakes, is an agricultural country, while the north is mining and timber. So it has at times been difficult for the two sections to agree. And then at the height of each disagreement they would talk about a separation, and the making of a new state out of the north part. But they have never got beyond the period of mere talk. But every little while, some other party gets at it and talks in favor of a new state up there. Not long ago, as well posted a paper as Harpers Weekly favored the idea and gave good reasons why it would be a wise move. The COURIER has often explained this question, and will now only give an excellent little note from a paper at Milwaukee, which, as Wisconsin is one of the states involved, will be taken as good authority. It reads:

The ordinance of 1787 gave fundamental laws to the territory now covered by the five states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. The act was one of treaty between Virginia and the confederation preceding the constitution, and hence is still law of these five states, which was to remain forever unalterable, save by the common consent of the people of the territory and the people of the original states.

The Ordiance of 1787 said that not less than three nor more than five, states should be made out of the territory known as "The Territory Northeast of the Ohio," without consent of the parties above named, that is, the people of the original states. So as there are already five states, a sixth connot be made except by concent of these five, and by the United States.

THE SHOW.

There was a mystery connected with the show that came here yesterday and gave a performance in the afternoon and evening. They did not advertise except by putting up bills, and the tickets were given out only by various business firms in town. They were not sold at the tent. The people who had made purchases at the various stores got a ticket for a certain amount of money invested. Then with these tickets they could go over east of Madden's to where the tent was pitched and go in. There were no ticket sellers. But after getting inside, the game was plain. There were plenty of seats but these tickets did not give them seats. They gave them nothing but admittance. So the unlucky holders could stand up all evening or pay ten cents for a seat. Most of them paid and as the attendance was good the show got a big sum of money. Then came the usual "concert" at the close. This was ten cents more and caught the usual number of lovers of that sort of comic performance. Of course they could have got more yet by advertising and getting people to come in and buy tickets at the tent, but that was not their plan and would not have suited the merchants who were handling the tickets. So, as may have been noticed, the papers said nothing about the show, in fact knew nothing about it except what was seen on the bills. It was a pretty cute arrangement after all, and is is said the show was fairly good.

A Peerless Liniment.

As a pain destroyer and cure for rheumatism, Salvation Oil is the peer of all liniments. Mr. Wm. H. Brown, proprietor of Striebinger House, Cleveland, O., writes: "I suffered from rheumatism for twelve years and my last attack kept me in bed, unable to walk. I used Salvation Oil and soon was up and about. As a pain destroyer this liniment has no equal." Salvation Oil is sold everywhere for 25 cents. Try it and be convinced.

The Auburn Gun Club

Several new members have been added to the Auburn Gun Club and regular shoots at the trap will be held during the summer, oue each week. The history of the Club is interesting, its leading members being the pioneers of the country. The first club of which there is no record shot at glass balls. In May 1889 the new method of shooting at clay pigeons was adopted. At that time the membership consisted of G. A. Bishop, Geo. Shugers, G. S. McCord, S. C. Swineford, H. W. Ford, A. C. Robbins, Aathur Steele, H. B. McCord, Chas. Weaver, Geo. Grund, Dr. J. H. Ford. Eight of these are still active members. Those lately admitted are W. H. McIntyre, Walter C. Hartman, Geo. Swineford and S. C. Snyder, making a total membership of twelve. The best score made by the club as shown by the score book is 20 out of 25 birds, by Arthur Steele. No doubt the contest this season will be interesting. There will be two classes, A and B. At the end of the season, a medal will be given to the one making the best score in each class. The members of the club will have the first trap shooting Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Madden's field. This is considered one of the best fields for trap shooting in the country.

BURGLARY

Last night the hardware store of Culbertson & Boland was broken into and quite a lot of articles taken. On going into the store this morning, they saw that some one had been in there, and an examination showed that four revolvers, a dozen or so razors and four or five dozen of pocket knives had been taken. The thieves had gained entrance by taking out a pane of glass in the rear door. There is no clue. Mr. Boland and Marshal Potter hunted for them this morning, and at the Junction, they searched two hoboes, but found nothing.

BUTLER.

Mrs. R. C. Campbell and mother, Mrs. Hamilton of Angola returned Saturday from their visit to Napoleon, O. They drove across the country and report fine prospects for wheat and grass.

Seventy-eight tickets were sold from Butler to Indianapolis last Sunday. Low rates to the capital and the sight of citizen soldiers proved an attractive feature.

Fred Gengnagle has completed a very large barn on the Jacob Moughler farm one and a half miles south of Butler, now owned by him. R. S. Kester did the work.

Herman Sargent has completed his course in dentistry and has opened an office over Stone's drug store.

Rev. Frech was alone last Sunday upon the quarterly meeting occasion. Rev. Hutson, presiding Elder, gave the other charge his personal attention.

Dr. Casebeer of Ft. Wayne Suudayed with Butler friends.

James Dirrim and Andrew Casebeer, both past ninety years are our oldest citizens; yet they still get around with more than ordinary ability for persons of their age.

The regular session of the Butler schools closed last Friday. The commencement exercises will take place later on. The school has been a success in the main; some ripples of a contrary nature have appeared but most likely a large amount of good has been accomplished.

Delegates from the M. E. Sunday school to the county Sunday school convention, May 31st and June 1st were selected last Sunday. A very profitable time is anticipated. The convention meets at Auburn.

TOWNSHIP CAUCUSES.

The democratic voters all over the county should not fail to remember the caucuses to be held Saturday of this week. Read the call of the county chairman which we publish, then go to the caucus and select for delegates, good and reliable men. Then let all study over the list of candidates and give us at the convention the best set of candidates we ever had. There is plenty of good material to select from, and if we don't have a good ticket it will be the fault of the delegates.

'SQUIRE WALTER'S COURT.

Auburn is able to have two or three courts at work at the same time. This forenoon a man under the influence of drink, was arrested for indecency or something of that sort and taken before his Honor, 'Squire Walter, He was fined $1 and costs. He said his home is at Wabash, and said he had money in the bank there, giving his name as Johnson. But the Justice declined to accept his check for the necessary amount, and he is now ccoling off in the county bastile.

DeKalb Co, S. S. Association.

Our people should not forget the coming meeting of the DeKalb Co. S. S. Association which is held in Auburn at the M E church May 31 and June 1st. There will be a valuable program in which appear the names of such workers as Rev T. M Guild, Rev S H Yager, Mrs C B Jones, Rev Cain, Rev E E Campbell, Rev R A Montgomery, Rev J M Haines, E A Zerkle, Rev J M Dustman, Rev J R Lenhart, Rev J S Smith, Mrs Ehlers Rev Wingard, besides the special music under the direction of Prof A F Myers of Toledo. Mr. Myers will use his new book "The Seed Sower" and will furnish books enough for all the audience to use. Schools who expect soon to get new song books should wait till they see "The Seed Sower"

SEDAN.

The ground in this vicinity is thoroughly soaked and corn planting is retarded for several days. However some of the more lucky farmers have completed planting and the outlook is good for a bountiful crop of hay, oats and wheat.

Quite a number from this place visited Camp Mount yesterday among whom were the following: W. H. Crane, Roy Crane, M. S. Delong, M. S. Delong, Merl Delong, Henry Schuster, O. L. Wheaton, J. W. Bateman and Ralph Bateman. They report a good visit with the boys, there being eleven Sedan boys in the 157th Regiment.

C. M. Reynolds and family spent Sunday visiting relatives in Fairfield.

Len Shipe of Ashley was through Sedan yesterday,

We noticed Capt. Hartman from Auburn on our streets several times last week.

O. L. Wheaton was chosen by the republicans of Fairfield township for Congressional Delegate to Ft. Wayne. We did not learn who the Judicial delegate was.

Geo. Morrisson and wife and Geo. Casselman and wife visited in the Wiseman family at Sixteen Sunday.

There is too much Sunday visiting and altogether too much Sunday fishing by Sedanians for the good of the church and Sunday school

An expedition to land arms for the Cuban rebels, was prevented by a force Spaniards.

First troops for Manila may sail today.

It is believed the Queen of Spain wants peace.

We tried to cut the Spanish cables that lands on the south of Cuba. Cut one but failed to get the other. Lost a man killed and several hurt. Suppose Spaniards lost several.

Heavy firing heard out at sea on coast of Massachusetts Saturday. Cause unknown.

Tuesday's Daily.

Gen. Merritt don't want to go to Manila with troops that are nearly all volunteers. He says trained men will be needed and he will have no chance to train or drill them.

President McKinley has ordered our fleets to destroy the forts etc. along the coasts of Cuba, so that they will not be so much in our way when we land men or supplies. He has been told the truth about this, that we should have stopped this fortifying long ago. We have been too slow in our movements on Cuba. When war was declared, we could easily have landed an army there. We have sat still and waited, till now we can't land anything.

Sampson's fleet is reported to be still out somewhere near Cape Haytien, waiting to see which course the Spanish fleet will take as it comes north from Curacoa.

The most remarkable campaign of modern times, is that at Manila. A naval commander destroys a whole fleet and without men enough to land a force captures strong batteries and arsenals, then uses the war material in all for his own ships, getting even their coal. He is just far enough away from headquarters to be free from red tape.

The Spanish warships have been ordered away from Port of France, Martinique Island and from the Dutch islands south of there. But in the first case they had already got coal, which was all they care for.

About 11,000 volunteers have reached Chickamauga.

Spain's new cabinet is substantially agreed on It is for war, not peace as at first reported.

Hawaii does not remain neutral, but stands by Uncle Sam. That gives us a chance to give our ships coal there.

The cables connecting Panama with the islands at the south end of the Caribbean sea have been cut. Probably by the Spaniards to prevent news of the location of their fleet

Both Manila and Havana said to be short of provisions.

HOME AGAIN

Mrs. Barns returned yesterday evening from her trip to Bloomington. Mrs. Emanuel not returning till today. They had a nice trip and everything enjoyable. The meeting of the clubs from all over the state, was well attended, the total number of delegates present being 325. The number of new clubs that have joined the state union the past year, is 45. They met many former acquaintances and made many new ones. The addresses were fine, the music grand, and the discussions of great interest. Among those present was James Whitcomb Riley, who recited some of his poems. They also met Mrs. Emma Mont McRae, Mrs. Virginia Meredith, Mrs. Jacob Dunn, wife of the editor of the Indianapolis Sentinel, Miss May Wright Sewell and other notables. After the meeting was over Mrs. Emanuel went to visit friends at Delphi, and Mrs. Barns stopped in Indianapolis and had a good visit with the families of Mr. Ensley and Mr. Houser. At Mr. Ensley's she witnessed the grand march of the troops down Meridian street into town. It was an inspiring spectacle. She could recognize a number of the boys as the column swept past. They were loaded down with all the things usually carried on a march and looked as if the seven-mile tramp had been a pretty hard one The street for miles was lived with people watching to see their soldiers go by and cheer them on their way. She also went down town to see them take the train. But there the crowd was so great that no one could have a chance to see them, much less talk to them. But she had already visited them in camp and had a talk with many of them. The two ladies came home in love with Bloomington and her people, with the clubs and the work done, and with the treatment accorded to them everywhere they went.

COURT NOTES

Thursday's Daily.

The case against Perry Fair, on charge of raising or altering two county orders, has been dismissed "for reasons filed." We did not see these reasons but suppose they are those the COURIER has already given, that Perry never passed the altered orders and cannot therefore be punished. The mere act of forging is not a punishable offense, it appears, unless the person also passes or tries to pass or sell the forged paper. As the attorneys must have known this, it seems folly to go the expense of suit after suit to prosecute him. As we said, we believe he had a hand in getting away with the money of the county that was in the treasury, and for which his father's bondsmen had to suffer. And for this he should be punished, But in order to punish him for that it is necessary to have proof and we do not understand that there is any proof. So while we may have our own fixed belief as to his rascality it is well to secure some proof of it before we put the county to any needless expense. Perry will no doubt go free.

The petit larceny case of State vs. Richard Abrams, is ordered off the docket. This is the case we reported so fully at the time. He had stolen hides, etc. at Butler, but was allowed to go out on promise of good behavior. It seems he was in earnest for he went home and joined church and is said to be doing well.

The case of Gemberling, one of the Elkhart lads who were up last term for breaking into cars on the Lake Shore road was called up. He had been sentenced to 60 days in jail, but there was an effort being made to send him to the Reform school. But this is now dropped and he will serve out his time and go free, Overleas, the other Elkhart lad is still here, his sentence being for 120 days. Both lads are now working on the streets under the guidance of Marshal Potter. They are both good, faithful hands, though we believe they never did any work before. The third boy is the one who stole the entire outfit of jail keys out of the sheriff's bed room and ran away with them. He had not been heard from.

The old ditch trouble between J. D. Boyd and others and A. D. Moore and others was called up and Moore's side asks for a jury.

Partridge vs Hursh & Melching, a replevin case was called but Judge Roby would not serve as he had been counsel in the case. And the same entry is made in another case, Harden vs Purman.

G. E. Bursley vs Davinney is ordered off the docket

Nickey vs Penland, an injunction case, has been dismissed by agreement.

In several divorce cases, one party defaulted. That is did not appear which means they will not fight the case when it comes up. Of these cases Daniel F. Butler vs Sarah F. Butler, she defaulted. Arley Kelso vs Geo. Kelso, he defaulted. In the case we spoke of the other day, Matthias Otto vs Mary (Loveland) Otto, she defaulted These cases, we suppose will be called up and the divorce asked for, granted.

The case of Clayton Mallory vs McFadden has been dismissed.

Today the grand jury visited the Poor Farm, and this afternoon were discharged and went home.

Friday's Daily.

Ba" VanAuken was called up yesterday afternoon before Judge Roby, as he had been indicted by the grand jury. Mr. Moody is his attorney and when the case was called, VanAuken pleaded not guilty. So he will be tried as soon as a suitable date can be fixed by the judge.

We understand the grand jury brought in a number of indictments all of which will be called up in due time. There was no court today.

It appears we did not fully understand the Perry Fair matter when we made our report of the court yesterday The case that was dismissed here in Auburn, was not the one that was recently tried in Angola but is one just like it and it was not thought necessary to keep two similar cases running against him. He will probably be tried again and many believe he will be convicted. It is thought that it was sympathy that saved him this time, and not a doubt as to his guilt.

Saturday's Daily.

Since our last report, the court has been working but part of the time, but a considerable work has been done.

The case of L. J. Blair vs. Ora Fusselman, for damages was called up and continued till next term.

John Blaney vs. Christ and Mary Brechbill for foreclosure of mechanics lien. Plaintiff asked change of venue to some other judge, which was granted.

Arley Kelso gets a divorce from George Kelso and custody of child. He is to pay $1.00 a month till the child is 18 and pays costs of the case.

Shull vs. Shull and others, to set aside deed and quiet title. Rose & Rose are for the plaintiff and P. D. West represents one of the defendants, Josiah Shull.

P. V. Hoffman was appointed guardian ad litem to look after the interests and rights of the minor Worman heirs in the case of J. I. Fair vs. Worman and others.

The Metzler divorce case came up Thursday. It appears by the testimony of Clement Metzler, of Garrett that when he married his wife, Mary, some years ago, she appeared all right, but that soon afterwards she showed signs of some mental trouble. This grew worse till she had to be sent to the asylum four or five years ago. He showed letters from the officers at Longcliff, which stated that she was now so bad that her recovery was impossible. She could not live long, they thought, and at least would never be sane, her mind being now a blank. It would appear that it was for these reasons that he wanted a divorce. His attorney was Mr. Sharpless, while Mr. Gengler represented the interests of Mrs. Metzler. The judge will hear arguments on the case.

Mary Watkins was given a divorce from George Watkins and custody of the children. He is to pay her $500 alimony; $50 in 30 days; $100 at the end of two years, and $50 at the end of three years. He is to give security for the performance of this.

The divorce case of Rose Vealey vs. Aaron C. Vealey was withdrawn.

The Freyer divorce case was held for further evidence.

Heroic Ensign Bagley

By the kindness of Mrs. Ehlers, we have a copy of the Raleigh, N C. Observer, in which are editorials on the lamented Ensign Bagley, who lost his life by the explosion of a shell, during the ill-timed attack on Cardenas. Mrs. Ehlers during her work at Raleigh became acquainted with Ensign Bagley's mother and her people generally, and holds them in high esteem. And it seems that the young officer was himself, an admirable man, possessed of many good qualities besides the bravery and daring that cost him his life. The Observer, is full of accounts of the funeral which took place there May 11, and of the resolutions of respect, etc, which were passed by various bodies of the citizens of Raleigh. And from scores of leading citizens came words of condolence, to the bereaved mother, and testimonials to the worth of the dead hero.

To give an idea of theses spontaneous tributes we quote one only. It is from Col. Eugene Harrell and reads.

North Carolina has furnished the first martyrs for three wars. In the Revolution the first blood poured out in the battle for liberty was in Alamance, March 31st, 1775, nearly a year before hostilities, began. In the war between the States, in 1761, young Wyatt, of Edgecombe county, was the first man killed in the line of battle, at Bethel. Now Ensign Bagley, at Cardenas, lays down his life in the battle for Freedom It is a sad record, but a proud one. The name of Worth Bagley is baptized in fame. North Carolina's record, writ by the blood of these heroes, is that she is always among the last to go into a quarrel, but once in she is ever responsive to duty.

Captain H. S. Chadwick—"Every Spaniard in Cuba is not worth this boy's life. My men are greatly wrought up over his death, and want to go to the front and avenge it. I believe we will spend Sunday in Tampa."

His funeral was one of great pomp and sadness. All flags were half mast, and all business suspended. His father was a confederate soldier, Major W. H. Bagley.

And there is another touch of sadness connected with his heroic death. When he was at the Naval Academy at Annapolis as cadet, there were in the class five whose names began with "B." One after another, four of these died or were killed by accident or otherwise, and Young Bagley was left as the last. He often alluded to this sad record, and said he felt sure the last "B" would soon follow the others. Just before the attack on Cardenas, he had told a friend that he felt a premonition of his coming fate, yet he went into the death trap cooly and unhesitatingly at the command of the superior officer of the little fleet, although he must have known what the British troopers of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, all knew, "that someone had blundered," When the Spaniards on shore and ships all centered on his little boat, he must have felt his fate was drawing near. When it was plain that the boiler was disabled, and the boat helpless, he called for the nearest ship to tow him out of the range saying, "This is getting to hot too be comfortable?" The rope was thrown, he caught it, and just at that moment the shell exploded in the midst of the littie group helping him. Much of his head was torn away and he died instantly.

A. J. Baxter Drops Dead.

John W. Baxter received a telephone message from Butler this afternoon at 2:30, that his brother, A. J. Baxter, had just dropped dead. He had just been out to pasture to take a colt out there, and it is possible may have been overcome by the heat or taken with heart failure. He was over here yesterday in as good health as usual. No other particulars were given.

ED. SMITH DEAD.

Edward Smith, the ice dealer, died last night at his home in Pleasant Lake. It will be remembered, he went home, sick, a week or so ago, and at one time he was reported as improving but it seems he was not. The funeral will be at 10 a. m. Sunday by the Masons. His age was about 40.

TODAY'S WAR NEWS.

Thursday's Daily.

The total number of volunteers now mustered in is over 96,000. It will be but a few days before the entire 125,000 called for will be in camp.

The plan now is, to take possession of all Cuba, except Havana, and that will then be so cut off and surrounded, that it can safely be taken by siege. This is the course that should have been taken a month ago. We are losing valuable time.

We are laying our plans to cut all the cables controlled by the Spaniards, that lead out from Havana. We have two cables and they have three.

It now looks as if it would be a week before ships sail with troops for Manila

Later reports show that Sampson did a considerable damage to the forts at San Juan on Porto Rico, but did not kill many.

The fleets are still lost to the public. Both nations refuse to tell where they are for each is trying to outwit the other. After the battle is over, we shall hear more.

Latest talk is to raise a few regiments of colored troops, in the belief that they can stand the climate of Cuba better than white men. If we keep on with this policy of delay, the climate of Cuba will not hurt anyone a great deal.

We now have about 16,000 soldiers in camp at Chickamauga.

The troops of western states are being rapidly concentrated at San Francisco in order to make an army for Gen. Merritt to take to the Phillippines. But there seems a vexatious delay for some cause, in getting ready to sail.

Dr. Mary Walker wants the President to send her to Spain, claiming she can influence the queen to stop hostilities.

All the great city papers are praising the promptness of Indiana in putting the first regiment in the field and being the first state in the union to send its full quota to the front

Several battleships including the Oregon are to be added to our two fleets.

The President is aroused to the necessity of pushing the war more vigorously.

Claimed that food supplies keep coming into Havana in spite of the blockade.

Friday's Daily.

In our eagerness to watch for a battle between the opposing fleets, we have overlooked several good sized battles on land between the Spanish troops and the Cubans under Gomez In one of these, Gomez whipped a body of 1600 Spaniards, and got possession of the greater part of the "Trocha" that was arranged across the eastern part of the island. The Cubans have generally been successful in these fights.

Gen. Lew Wallace will go with the army to Cuba as a correspondent for Harpers Weekly and Bazar.

A big train load of military stores went quietly across the country over the B. & O. this week. It was hardly known when it went through this county. It was largely made up of cannon such as field artillery and ammunition. No one seems to know where it was going. But it went west and is believed to be for the Phillippine Islands.

It is reported from Spain that their fleet we are hunting for here, has reached Santiago, on the south side of Cuba. This is the city the Cuban insurgents are trying to starve out by cutting off supplies from the country.

It is believed that Spain is getting a big fleet ready to sail east, through Gibralter and the Suez Canal to go to Manila and drive out Dewey. It will pay our government to hurry up that relief that is to start from San Francisco.

All the defenses of Havana are being rapidly strengthened, and if we wait long enough it will be a hard job to take them. They have also strengthened or built anew the defenses along the north side of the island for a hundred miles or so east of Havana.

Blanco now claims to have 60,000 men in Havana alone. That is very doubtful. He will find it takes something besides mere men, to stand a siege from big guns at sea and on land.

The new Spanish Cabinet has taken control and is fully at work.

We have cut two more cables on the south side of Cuba.

It is now probable that the two fleets will come together and have a battle now almost any day.

Saturday's Daily.

The Spanish fleet is now at Santiago de Cuba, at the southeast part of the island, and, if it has gone inside the bay, it is probably safe, for the bay has a long, narrow entrance, difficult for the fleet of an enemy to get in. But it is likely our fleet will stay outside and keep them bottled up. But if they do come out, then the big fight is sure to come off.

It is now believed the Spanish fleet approached Cuba under cover of darkness and waited until day began to break and were then piloted into the bay on which Santiago is situated. They in this way escaped the notice of our ships, which were certainly not far away. They probably have landed troops and material. If so, this may strengthen that part of Cuba for them.

U. S ships bombarded Guantanino, a considerable town on the coast of Cuba. Not known as to the damage done.

The latest reports from the interior are that the Cuban insurgents are closing in on Havana from the land side. This means a step toward helping U. S. troops to land and draw lines of investment about the city.

The Spaniards are now claiming that their fleet, after a brief rest, have left Santiago de Cuba, and are again on the sea. This is not generally believed, however, but if true, then we may be sure Sampson has gone in pursuit of them.

There is a rumor, though only a rumor, that no land forces will be sent to Cuba until the big naval battle is fought.

Our ships at Key West have left, going toward the west of Cuba, as if either expecting to meet the Spanish fleet or else join Sampson's fleet on the south side.

After all, there is little of real facts known, though a battle may take place any hour.

FAST TIME TO COLORADO.

A new through Sleeping Car line between St. Louis and Colorado Springs will be established over the Wabash-Rock Island Short Line, May 15th, 1898. The time will be the fastest made with through service between these two points by many hours. A through Sleeper will leave St. Louis on Wabash train No. 3, at 9:20 a. m., arriving at Colorado Springs the next morning at 11 00, with a direct connection for Denver, arriving at 11:30 a. m. This is the fastest regular through service ever established between St. Louis and Colorado. Returning, the Sleeper will leave Colorado Springs at 2:45 p. m., and arrive at St. Louis the next evening at 6:15.

Patrons of this line will avoid the only unpleasant feature heretofore attendant on Colorado travel, inasmuch as the trip through Missouri's fertile fields will now be by daylight, and the unattractive portion of Kansas will be traversed during the night, with the mountain scenery to greet the tourists in the morning.

The fast time of this line will naturally commend the Wabash Route to intending Colorado tourists.

Particulars will be gladly furnished on application.

The Chaplain's Letter

Camp Geo. A. Thomas,
Chickamauga, Tenn.

Co. C, 157th Reg. Ind. Vol.

Write the boys cheerful letters. Nothing is more depressing than discouragement from home. The boys are brave fellows and getting along all right. Don't plead with them to come home. They can't do it, and such appeals only make it harder for them.

Dont pity them and call them "poor fellows!" They don't want pity, but instead the folks at home should glory in their sturdy manhood. Let the boys feel that you are proud of them, and that while separations are hard, you wouldn't have them do less than discharge their full duty at whatever cost. Let them feel that at home you rejoice that your boys' names will be on the Nation's honor roll. Writing thus you will help the boys instead of making it harder for them.

The general health of the camp is very good, and all are in excellent spirits. If I can be of any service to the home folks I will be glad to have advice at any time.

In the fear of God and in love of the boys among whom I work, I will try to do them good. CHAS. S. MEDBURY, Chaplain 157th Reg. Ind. Vol.

OBITUARY.

Abbie Floy (Tubbs) Lahnum, beloved wife of G. W. Lahnum, was born in Steuben county, Indiana, October 8, 1875, and died May 9, 1898, in Auburn, Indiana, aged 22 years, 7 months and 1 day and loved by all who knew her. She was especially remembered by her schoolmates and classmates for her loving disposition and kindness of heart. She was married January 19, 1895; and leaves two sweet babies, Johnie and Donald; husband, father, mother, five sister and one brother to mourn her early departure from this life to meet Christ who came on earth to save us here beyond death. It is sweet to remember that before she died she requested some of God's people to pray for her and before passing away said, "It is all right; I am ready; good bye, I am going," and then closed her eyes in the beautiful sleep of death—beautiful because her face wore in death the expression of peace and rest with God. How grand to know we can meet her over there if we live right while here.

Brief services were held at the house at eight o'clock, Wednesday, after which the funeral party left by carriages for Mt. Zion church, in Steuben county, where the funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Joe Bumpus, of Syracuse Indiana. The church which was beautifully decorated with flowers, was filled with friends and relatives who deeply mourned their loss. After the service at the church her body was laid to rest in Mount Zion cemetery.

ON TO MANILA.

The Cruiser Charleston Receives a Grand Ovation

Passing Through the Golden Gate Out of San Francisco.

The Cadiz Fleet to Attack American Cities.

Government Powder Mill at Hammond, Ind., Destroyed.

The Charleston Is Off.

San Francisco special: The Charleston is well on her way to Manila. The big cruiser passed through the Golden Gate Sunday morning, receiving a tremendous demonstration.

Spain Straining Every Nerve.

Capt. Strong of the brigantine Energy, just arrived at St. Johns, N. F., from Cadiz, reports a fortnight ago the greatest activity prevailed in the naval arsenal. Two Hamburg-American liners, the Columbia and Normannia, auxiliary cruisers, now named Rapido and Patria, are being rapidly armored and warships are refitting in the harbor, loading stores and ammunition. Capt. Strong is convinced that when he was in Cadiz the Spanish Government fully intended to send this fleet to attack the American coast cities on the north Atlantic, preferably Boston. He says his crew dared not venture ashore.

Another American Powder Mill Blown Up.

Three thousand pounds of powder at the plant of the Economical Smokeless Powder Company, four and a half miles from Hammond, Ind., blew up, killing one, injuring three and demolishing the building. The dead: Arthur E. Booth, Chicago. Seriously injured: John S. Piper, Frank Haise, Carl Porter. The mill had been running only three days, and was about to begin work on a Government order for 35,000,000 cartridges. The officers are unable to determine the cause of the explosion.

Manufacturer Ends His Life.

Charles L. Baker, manager of the Baker Carriage Compay of Des Moines, Iowa, shot and killed himself in his factory. He had been worried over business troubles for some months, but recently $10,000 of the company's stock was sold to a wealthy capitalist and the business was placed in better condition, without disturbing Mr. Baker in his position. He was unable to execute orders fast enough, however, and the condition of his mind from ill health and the long strain was such that he gave way. He leaves a wife and a 15-year-old son.

Commission for Barker.

Walter S. Barker, who was the American Consul at Sagua La Grand, Cuba, it is understood, is to be commissioned a Colonel of an immune regiment to be sent to Cuba with the invading party. Consul Barker had a long service in Cuba and is entirely familiar with the topography of the island. In addition to commanding a regiment, Mr. Barker is to be placed in charge of all the supplies to be distributed among the reconcentrados. Consequently he will be among the first American forces to be landed in Cuba.

Six Drowned.

Ten men attempted to cross the Allegheny River on a raft near Springdale, Penn., and when in the center of the stream the raft was swamped by the rough current and the men were precipitated into the water. Four men succeeded in reaching the shore, but the others were drowned. Their names are: William Anderson, John Quinn, John Heesh, Frank Stepp, Newton Neal and Edwin Owen.

A Murderer Hanged.

Thomas Nulty was hanged at Joliett, Ill. He was convicted of murdering his three sisters and one brother, because there were not accomodations in the house for a wife whom he proposed to marry.

Thought Him a Ground Hog.

Harry Harmer while hunting ground hogs four miles south of McConnellsville, Ohio, fatally shot his cousin, Charley Harmer. The latter had concealed himself behind a rock, and the former seeing his cap mistook it for a ground hog. The bullet entered beneath the right eye and lodged in the left cheek.

Collision at Sea.

A dispatch from Key West reports that the patrol boat Sarasota collided with the pilot boat Blanche, and sank near Fort Taylor. No loss of life.

Disastrous Fire.

The business section of Attleboro, Mass., was wiped out by fire. Fourteen factories, occupied chiefly by jewelry manufacturers, a dozen dwellings and store-houses burned. The loss is estimated at $1,100,000. Fully 5,000 people are thrown out of employment.

Cause Great Loss of Life and Property.

A special from Constantinople says: A great fire is raging in the Stamboul quarter of the city. The flames are spreading rapidly, and hundreds of houses are destroyed. The loss of life is great.

OREGON SAFE AT LAST

SECRETARY LONG MAKES THE WELCOME ANNOUNCEMENT.

Battleship Left San Francisco About Seven Weeks Ago and Has Traveled Over 13,000 Miles—Spanish Fleet to Go to the Philippines.

Dons Didn't Get Her.

Washington special:

Secretary Long gave out the welcome information Wednesday that the battleship Oregon, the second largest craft in the American navy, had successfully completed her long trip from San Francisco, making the entire circuit of South America, and was safe. The rigid secrecy of the navy department was relaxed only enough to make known the best news the navy department had received since the battle of Manilla, as it meant not only the Oregon was out of harm's way from a concerted attack on this one ship by the whole Spanish squadron in southern waters, but also that her great fighting strength would be added to Admiral Sampson's force.

The Oregon left San Francisco before the war had opened, and at that time it was not admitted that she was to join the ships in Atlantic waters. She stopped at Callao for dispatches and then went round the Horn and up the east coast of South America. In all the trip covered 13,000 miles. The last stretch, from Bahia to the Windward islands, was followed with anxiety by naval officers, for, by a strange coincidence, the formidable Spanish squadron of armored cruisers and torpedo boats approached the Windward islands at the very time when the Oregon was due there. It had been suspected that the Spanish admiral would try to intercept the battleship with his superior force, and before leaving Bahia Capt. Clark of the Oregon was warned to keep a close lookout for the Spanish fleet. In reply

COMMODORE W. S. SCHLEY.
In Command of the Flying Squadron.

Capt. Clark expressed his confidence in being able to hold his own single-handed with the Oregon against all the Spanish cruisers. The only apprehension he felt was as to the torpedo boats under the Spanish admiral's command. Notwithstanding Capt. Clark's assurances, the navy department continued to feel that a meeting between the Spanish squadron and the American battleship on such unequal terms was far from desirable, and might bring most serious results. For this reason the official information reaching the authorities telling of the Oregon's safety was a source of most hearty congratulation.

MAP SHOWING OREGON'S LONG TRIP.

BEGINS TO YIELD.

War Fever in Spain Rapidly Assumes a Less Acute Phase.

The war fever is decidedly abating in Spain, according to reliable reports, and the long-winded debates in the cortes, revealing the helplessness of the country, has contributed thereto almost as much as the defeat at Cavite. A distinctive feature of the present crisis is that there is not a single public man who inspires the smallest confidence, and the proposed tinkering in the ministry is simply viewed by the masses with despairing indifference. This circumstance and the opinion daily growing among thinking men that Spain is drifting toward defeat may at any moment determine the formation of a peace party. But it is still premature to speak of peace. The subject can only be whispered in Spain. The memory of Cavite, calling for vengeance, is too fresh for peace yet. Peace, if Spain is to initiate proposals for it, can only be had after more fighting. The Atlantic fleet must either be knocked to pieces or gain a partial victory as a set-off against Cavite before the idea of peace with honor can really take root in the land of Don Quixote.

To Dislodge Dewey.

Gibraltar advices state that the first-class battleship Pelayo, the armored cruisers Emperador Carlos V., Alfonso XIII., Vittoria and Giralda, the auxiliary cruisers Rapido, Alfonso XII., Buenos Ayres and Antonio Lopez and three torpedo boats, now at Cadiz, are ready for sea, and are expected to sail for the Philippines with 11,000 troops.

DEFENSES OF HAVANA IN DETAIL.

128,000 MEN READY.

Great Volunteer Army Mustered in for the Cuban War.

Washington special:

Nearly the whole of the 128,000 volunteers have now been mustered in. There will yet be slight delay in filling out some of the quotas, but the great volunteer army is substantially complete.

The army is not yet in condition for an immediate forward movement, however. Not all of the volunteers intended for the invading army have gotten as far as Chickamauga, and fewer have arrived at Tampa. The war managers have found the national guards woefully deficient in arms, ammunition, uniforms and other equipments, and artillery batteries are reported without guns, carriages, horses or harness. The war department is bending all its energies to remedying these deficiencies, but it takes time. It has establish a supply depot at Chickamauga, and will probably have another at Washington.

The war department finds the country is short on the modern arms adopted by the regular army. It finds difficulty also in getting rations promptly because of the unexpected emergency. Some of the Chicago packers even went so far as to reimport cargoes of provisions that had been sent to England. In foreign countries, where large standing armies are to be counted on all the time, there is ample provision for meeting the demands of the soldiers.

There is a tendency to criticize the President and the war department for the slowness with which the volunteer army is being organized, but neither of them is to blame. The President will insist on having the raw recruits properly equipped organized into brigades, divisions and corps before ordering a movement on Cuba. Military men say this may take two or three weeks, but the government is applying Yankee energy to push the work as rapidly as possible. This frank statement of the unsatisfactory condition in which the national guard has been found must not be taken as a reflection on the patriotic militiamen. They have given their time and money to the service and are now offering their lives, and if their equipments are lacking it is not their fault.

As a Base of Supplies.

Hawaii will not declare neutrality, President Dole considering such a course as a breach of good faith. He is confidently expecting the United States to raise its flag above the islands and use them as a base of supplies. Hawaiian senators indorse President Dole's stand, and the measure only needs ratification by President McKinley.

Shot Down Without Mercy.

It appears from information brought by the Empress of India that the Spanish did a little bombarding on their own account in the Philippines about a fortnight before Admiral Dewey silenced their fleet. About the middle of April, says a Manila report, Spanish troops met no opposition on landing, the rebels having absconded before a shot was fired, taking with them, it is said, $200,000 in cash. About thirty natives were killed in the bombardment, but no European casualties are reported. Cebu, which ranks third in the cities in the Philippines, was wrecked by the bombardment. A massacre of rebels by the Spanish also preceded Admiral Dewey's arrival.

PANIC REIGNED IN CIENFUEGOS.

Bombardment by the American Ships Terrified the People.

Information has been received at Key West from Cienfuegos giving a graphic account of the excitement in that city when the encounter occurred between Spanish soldiers on shore and the cable-cutting expedition which resulted in the death of two and the wounding of five Americans. The Cuban city was panic-stricken, the church bells were rung and the alarms were sounded on all sides. At the Hotel Siervo de Oro there was a riot and fight between Spanish volunteers, who refused to serve on patrol duty for the defense of the city, and the Spanish authorities, who were trying to force them to serve. When the Marblehead began shooting and knocked the lighthouse to splinters men, women and children fled to the country, many families leaving their houses open and abandoned in the haste of their flight. Since then many families have moved to Santo Quintern and Rodas, small towns near Cienfuegos. The Spanish government is unable to control the exodus.

RAN THE SPANISH GANTLET.

Uncle Sam Will Make Gunpowder from Captain Fulcher's Sulphur.

The British steamship City of Truro, Captain Fulcher, which sailed from Licata, Sicily, the day war was declared by Spain, with a cargo of 2,600 tons of sulphur for the United States, has arrived safely in port at New York. Sulphur, because of its use in the manufacture of explosives, is one of the articles declared by Spain to be contraband of war, and the Truro's cargo was liable to seizure by any Spanish cruiser or privateer hovering about Gibraltar. Captain Fulcher was warned to keep a weather eye out for suspicious-looking craft and get out of the Mediterranean as quickly as he could. The only armed vessel he sighted was an American cruiser playing a searchlight off Shinnecock, Long Island.

SPAIN IS ANGERED.

Doesn't Like the Speech Made by Joseph Chamberlain.

The speech made by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the British colonial minister, at Birmingham Friday night, has produced very unfavorable comment in Madrid. His references to Spain have created a bad impression. Prime Minister Sagasta and Senor Gullon, minister of foreign affairs, held a conference on the subject, after which Senor Sagasta said: "If we had said what Mr. Chamberlain said Europe would have regarded us as reckless." Both the prime minister and Senor Gullon believe the speech indicates that a war is being prepared for with an Anglo-American alliance.

SPANISH CABINET QUITS.

Members of the Sagasta Ministry All Resign.

All the members of the Spanish cabinet have resigned. The liberal cabinet under Sagasta was formed shortly after the death of Canovas Del Castillo, who was assassinated Aug. 8, 1897, by an Italian anarchist named Golli. Gen. Azcarraga, the then minister of war, was first appointed president of the council and for a time the cabinet remained unchanged. But Sept. 29 it resigned and Sagasta assumed office Oct. 4, confronted by the troubles in Cuba and in the Philippine Islands.

The minister of marine, Admiral Bermejo; the minister of war, Gen. Correa, and especially the minister for the colonies were repeatedly attacked in parliament and out of it and rumors of resignations tendered or to be tendered were industriously circulated. The difficulty, it appears, is to find men who are willing to assume office under the conditions which now prevail in Spain. An empty treasury, internal disorders and the loss of the Philippine Islands, Cuba and Porto Rico are not the only problems confronting Spanish ministers, and it is not astonishing that under the circumstances a military dictatorship under possibly Marshal Martinez Campos has been discussed.

The new Spanish cabinet has been formed as follows:

President of the Council.....Senor Sagasta
Foreign Affairs.....Leon y Castillo
War .....Lieut. Gen. Corres
Marine .....Senor Aunon
Colonies .....Romero Giron
Finance .....Lopez Puigcerver
Interior .....F. R. Capdepon
Justice .....C. Groizard
Public Instruction.....Gamazo

SPANISH FLEET AT CADIZ WHICH MAY GO TO THE PHILIPPINES.

SAFE AT SANTIAGO.

ARMADA EVADES SAMPSON AND REACHES PORT.

Madrid Report Says Spanish Ships Have Reached Harbor on South Coast of Cuba—Admiral Sampson Joins Schley and His Flying Squadron.

Now for a Battle.

A report Friday from Santiago de Cuba by the way of Madrid said that the Spanish fleet has reached that port in safety. While this news might have been given out for the purpose of confusing, it agreed with another dispatch from Kingston, Jamaica, stating that a fleet of warships had been seen from Morant Point, on the east extremity of the island, passing north toward Santiago de Cuba.

Cervera could have but two purposes in putting into Santiago de Cuba. The first would be to get coal, of which Spain may have a supply there. The second, to relieve the Spanish garrison of 10,000 troops stationed there, who have been practically cut off from Blanco and from all supplies since the blockade of Cienfuegos. These troops were dependent on the coasting fleet for their supplies, as there is no railroad connection between Santiago and Havana, and the country between is held by the insurgents. It would be a natural move of the Spanish admiral to try to relieve this garrison and supply it, or remove the troops, if he considered that could be done without meeting the American fleet, for there has been no blockade at Santiago.

Sampson at Key West.

Rear Admiral Sampson, with the division of the North Atlantic squadron under his command which attacked San Juan, Porto Rico, returned to Key West, where he effected a junction with the flying squadron. He has under his orders the battleships Iowa, Indiana and Massachusetts, second-class battleship Texas and armored cruisers Brooklyn and New York, which makes him superior by two armorclads to the Spanish fleet.

SAILORS SLAIN.

American Seamen Victims to Treachery of Philippine Insurgents.

Advices from Manila by way of Hong Kong say that the insurgents are mutually at loggerheads. Some are eager to be freed from Spanish rule, while others resent the appearance of the Americans. It is reported that a party of rebels attacked the Americans near Cavite, killing some of them and driving the others out of the villages. They removed the American flag and replaced it with the Spanish. According to report the insurgent leaders who accompanied Admiral Dewey refused to disembark, apparently fearing that they would be repudiated. Another report says that some Spaniards professing to be insurgents fraternized with the Americans near Cavite and then massacred them.

Polo Secures Coaling Station.

A dispatch from Montreal says Senor Polo y Bernabe has secured, by cable, a coal depot near St. Pierre Miquelon, the French colony off the south coast of Newfoundland, at which the Cadiz squadron will coal previous to attacking the Atlantic seacoast of the United States, while the Cape Verde squadron, commanded by Admiral Cervera, draws off the squadrons commanded by Rear Admiral Sampson and Commodore Schley.

Cyclones which whirled over vast tracts in Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin early Monday evening killed, it is now reported, about seventy persons. The names of all of them could not be ascertained, as in every instance the damage was wrought in farming or village districts and telephone and telegraph connection in the afflicted sections was badly broken. The list of those injured will never be complete, only a few of the more serious cases being reported by name. A careful estimate fixes the number injured at about 450.

Such havoc was wrought upon farm buildings, out of door stocks and orchards and upon live stock that the money loss, in wide belts of territory, in several cases clear across counties, will reach hundreds of thousands of dollars. The damage was so great and widespread and means of communication so interrupted that it will be some time before accurate estimates can be made.

THE FIFE AND DRUM.

"This is life," cries the fife;
"Come, oh, come," shouts the drum.
As the steel that is bared flashes light;
Heart and pulse quicker beat,
As fast, down the street,
Is heard the wild rhythm of volunteers' feet,
Marching forward to fight!
"Leave the wife!" screams the fife;
"Leave the home," booms the drum,
And the blood answers hot in the cry.
What are children or wife
To the glory of strife,
To the call to the death or to glorious life?
Let us live, ere we die!
'Mid the strife is the fife;
Drowned by gun is the drum,
Bared steel is now dinted and gory;
Yet, strain as we may,
There are some that must stay
And forget, in the duty done bravely each day,
Chance for honor and glory.

AVENGED BY A SERPENT.

I.

When I got George's letter telling me that all was ready for our reception and we were to come at once I was delighted. Within a week we—mother and I—were on our way out, and in about three weeks' time found ourselves between the swampy shores of the Essequibo, nearing Georgetown, where on the quay the dear fellow was waiting to take us up to the home he had made for us on his plantation.

George Haden and I had met a year before during his visit to the old country, and the big, quiet, sunburned man and I, who tell this story, had fallen in love with one another almost at first sight.

We were to have been married before he returned to Guiana, but he was recalled suddenly by the death of his only brother at Rio, and it was arranged that I should follow later with my mother.

You can—or, rather, you can't—imagine how delighted I was to see my sweetheart again. But I was startled and a good deal troubled by his appearance; he looked thin and worried. At fiirst I put it down to his grief at Harry's death; but later after our quiet wedding, on the way to my future home I gathered by degrees there was more than that.

His brother Harry had married a Spaniard—a beautiful woman—who had died nearly eighteen years before, leaving him with one daughter Teresa. It was chiefly on this girl's account that George had hurried back, and he had mentioned in writing to me that he had brought her up from Rio to stay with him in Guiana until other arrangements could be made. Since then I had heard little of her, and almost, indeed, in my own happiness and excitement, forgotten her very existence.

Now, my questions elicited from George that she was not a pleasant-tempered young woman, or easy to get on with, but my worst anticipation did not touch the reality.

We came up the river in a small steamer, which dropped us at my husband's very wharf, and we three walked up a slope through a wonderful tropical garden to where a long, white-washed, green shuttered house shone clean and bright in the evening sun.

On the veranda stood a tall figure in a pale yellow gown, her black hair crowned with crimson hibiscus. A splendidly handsome woman!

She looked at me in a half disdainful way.

"So you are my new aunt?" she said casually.

"And how do you do, Uncle George?"

Her calm assumption of superiority was unbearable. George—big, steady, good-tempered man that he was—flushed with anger.

"Never mind, my dear. She knows no better; and it won't be for long."

But it was for longer than we reckoned. She was to have been sent to her godmother, who lived in Madrid. But the old lady was ill, and begged us to keep the girl a while longer.

It was trying to a degree, and each day got worse and worse. Teresa's temper was something unbearable, and her general lack of manners only equalled by her sweetness when there was anything to be gained by it. Still, for my husband's sake. I bore with her.

Toward the end of the cool weather, our old English overseer died, and, as a stop-gap, George took on a young Spanish-American, Ramon Martinez.

Ramon was a smart looking fellow, but there was something in his black eyes which repelled me. I always felt a shrinking repulsion for the man, and George didn't care much for him. Still, it was necessary to have someone who understood the sugar, and men who knew anything were so scarce you couldn't pick and choose.

Teresa who loved the cheap gayeties of Rio, had been nearly bored to death all the winter, Ramon was a godsend to her, and the two used to chat in Spanish every evening over their coffee on the veranda.

Sometimes I blame myself for letting them be so much together, but, to tell the truth, the relief of getting rid of her even for an hour or two was very great. And how could I know what a scoundrel the man was, or what unspeakable wickedness those two were brewing together.

And now I must pass over the events of the next ten months and tell you what happened on that dreadful day which so nearly proved fatal to all my happiness.

Old Juan, a half-caste Indian employed on the place, came up that morning wanting to see my husband. They talked for a time, and then I saw George go out with a gun on his shoulder. He saw me at the window and called out something, but I could not hear what he said.

He was a keen collector, and I supposed it was some rare bird or beast he was after.

The day passed and the short, tropical twilight was closing over the forest when I saw George returning. He was followed by two natives, who slowly dragged some long, heavy object up the path to the house. This they pulled along trailing in the dust, round to the south end of the house, where George's so-called study, really a sort of a museum, opened by two French windows on the lawn.

II.

I was dressing for 8 o'clock dinner, so did not go out. Soon I heard George's long stride pass up stairs by my door to his dressing room, which lay beyond my room at the extreme north end of the house.

To make you understand what followed, I must partly explain how the house was built. It was from north to south, long and narrow with a veranda all the way round. A wide hall ran through from east to west, and a long narrow one from north to south. The dining room was the front room at the north end, under my room, George's study at the south, under the room Teresa occupied. There were two staircases, one at each end of the house. A couple of hundred yards away, higher up the slope at the back of the house was the cottage were Martinez lived. He, Martinez, generally dined with us, and was to have done so this night.

Now, so far as I know, and judging from what we made out afterward from letters we discovered in the cottage and in Teresa's room, this is what brought about the tragedy which followed.

Ramon must long before this have made up his mind to marry Teresa. Her small fortune was an irresistible bait to the indolent Southerner. The only thing that troubled him was that she was not of age for another three years, and George was her guardian and sole trustee. He knew well enough what George would say or do if he once heard of his pretensions. With a man of Ramon's type—absolutely conscienceless—the next idea was simply to get George out of the way. Once get rid of the Uncle, and what was to hinder his making off with Teresa and her money.

Undoubtedly he instilled these ideas into Teresa's mind, and she, her sullen temper already aflame at the hint of opposition, was soon ripe for any mischief. Whether this precious pair had already concocted any definite plan I don't know, but that they were only waiting a chance what follows proves.

On this particular evening Teresa had dressed earlier and gone down. A French window was open, and in the moonlight which had already succeeded the dusk she caught sight of something moving through it, undulating in rustling coils up from the grass beyond.

Terrified, she closed the door and stood an instant panting with fright. What was it?

Suddenly it flashed across her. She had just before seen from her window the men bringing in her uncle's spoil, a great anaconda, or waterboa, the largest and most powerful constrictor in the world. This was its mate. Her chance had come. Always, before dinner, her uncle would go to his room to fetch the cigar he lit immediately dinner was over. He would go once more—for the last time.

How can I imagine her stealing quietly away from the back door with stealthy footsteps up the stairs to her room and sitting there watching the clock, counting every moment till the gong should summon her uncle to his fate behind that closed door.

Closer and closer crept the hands to 8 o'clock, and still she sat and watched

Suddenly, in the hall below, sounded footsteps across the polished boards. Unnaturally loud they seemed as they passed slowly down the passage beneath. There was the sound of a turning latch, an instants' pause, and then—one long, horrible sound, half shriek half yell which grew shriller, then muffled, and then abruptly ceased.

That shriek I heard with almost equal distinctness away at the other end of the house. To this day I can sometimes hear it, and it comes back to me in dreadful dreams.

I heard my husband rush from his room and his flying feet down the stair way. Other sounds I heard—cries of terror and alarm, hurring footsteps and slamming of doors. Then I summoned strength to follow. As I ran through the hall two shots rang out in quick succession. A frightful pounding, like a dozen sledge-hammers going at once, ensued; and the next I heard a scream of maniacal laughter, and Teresa rushed by me and out into the night.

The next thing I remember is George voice, in tones of strong command.

"Keep back, Marian!" he called "it is no fit sight for you."

III.

I stood there in the middle of the passage, while around the open study door stood a little knot of native servants. Their faces were ashen with terror, and the white of their eyes goggled horribly. A thin smoke floated out of the room, and the keen smell of gunpowder filled the air. The throbbing beat had almost ceased and George passed into the room, while I staggered back, and sinking into a chair in the hill, fainted dead away.

I need hardly explain what had happened. The wretched Ramon had come in earlier than usual to dinner; had, contrary to his usual custom gone to the study, evidently to leave the pass-book for the day, and had walked straight into the trap set for another. Those horrible coils had crushed him to death long before even George could reach the spot; while the great snake, in its terrible agonies, had rent the wretch's body in a shocking way, leaving it an unrecognizable mass.

That was what Teresa had seen. The shock no doubt had crazed her. When she ran out, she went straight to the river, at least we suppose so, for we never saw anything of her again.. There are alligators in those waters.

The Largest Flower Known.

The largest flower in the world, it is said, is the bolo, which grows on the island of Mindanao, one of the Philippine group. It has five petals, measuring nearly a yard in width and a single flower has been known to weigh twenty-two pounds.

It grows on the highest pinnacle of the land, or about two thousand five hundred feet above the level of the sea.

ADMIRAL SAMPSON'S FORMIDABLE FLEET.

A FIGHTING COMMANDER.

Dewey, the Hero of Manila, Has Seen Hard Service.

In his sixty-one years of life Admiral George Dewey, the hero of Manila, has seen a great deal of red hot fighting. He was born among the green hills of Vermont and received his appointment to the Naval Academy at the age of 17. When he graduated in 1858 he went with the steam frigate Wabash on a cruise in Mediterranean waters. When Fort Sumter was fired upon Dewey was promoted from ensign to lieutenant and assigned to the steam sloop Mississippi, which was to take part in the fierce fighting of the West Gulf squadron. The Mississippi was a side wheeler of seventeen guns, and was commanded by Commander Melancthon Smith. The West Gulf squadron went at once to the Mississippi River to force its way up. The "History of Our Navy" thus describes the sort of things the men on the Mississippi experienced when they preceded Farragut up past New Orleans:

"The Pensacola and the Mississippi steamed slowly, with their black hulls at regular intervals sheeting the air with lurid fire as they replied to the forts. Abreast of St. Philip, where the Confederate fire was hottest, they drew in so close that the gunners afloat and those ashore heartily cursed each other as they worked."

The Mississippi was with the squadron again when it ran down past New Orleans on the way back, fair targets for nineteen big guns at close range.

The hardest fight that the Mississippi ever was in was the one that ended her. The fleet was trying to run by Port Hudson with its powerful batteries. None of the squadron got by. The Mississippi ran aground in the fog and smoke and stuck hard and fast. In thirty minutes she was shot full of holes. Her crew climbed into boats on the side oposite the forts, and, after setting her on fire, made for the other side of the river under a withering rifle fire. Upon this occasion Lieut. Dewey stuck to his guns until the last and he did not quit the ship until all others had left. Admiral Porter singled him out for special praise.

In July, 1863, Dewey was on the gunboats that engaged the Confederates below Donaldsonville. In 1864 he was attached to the North Atlantic blockading squadron, assigned to the steam gunboat Agawam. The Agawam was one of the great crescent of warships, big and little, that plumped shot into Fort Fisher in December, 1864, and January, 1865. Dewey received his commission as lieutenant commander on March 3, 1865, and served for two years on the European squadron, first on the steamer Kearsarge and then on the frigate Colorado, the flagship. In 1868 he was assigned to duty at the Naval Academy. In 1870 he received his first command, that of the Narragansett, which was employed on special service until 1875.

The Pacific survey of 1872-75 was intrusted to him. After two years as lighthouse inspector and five as secretary of the Lighthouse Board he was put in command of the Juniata on the Asiatic squadron in 1882. In September, 1884, he was promoted to be a captain and placed in command of the Dolphin, then brand new, and one of the four vessels to which the name "white squadron" was first given. From 1885 to 1888 he was the commander of the Pensacola, the flagship of the European squadron. In 1888 his energy and ability to complete matters of detail was recognized by making his chief of the bureau of equipment and recruiting, which carried with it the rank of commodore.

In May, 1893, he took another turn on duty as a member of the Lighthouse Board. He was made an actual commodore on Feb. 26, 1896, and was at about that time put at the head of the important Board of Inspection and Survey. He was transferred to the command of the Asiatic squadron Jan. 1, 1898.

Hens Hatch Fish Eggs.

In China hens are employed to hatch fish eggs. These are sealed in an eggshell and placed under the unsuspecting hen for a few days until the spawn has warmed into life. The contents of the shell are then emptied into a shallow pool, where they can bask in the sunshine until the minnows are strong enough to be turned into a lake or river.

THE SAVING GRACE OF A HOBBY

It Revives Hope and Enthusiasm and Makes Life Worth Living.

"A priceless thing is a hobby. The daily tasks by which hosts of women suppert life are favorless, barren, almost hopeless. To such ones a hobby may offer the dearest hopes of ultimate freedom from the unwelcome daily task; it will at any rate serve to entertain and give point and flavor to an otherwise blank existence," is the position taken by Carrie E. Garrett discussing "Woman's Dreams and Hobbies" in the Woman's Home Companion.

"Hobbies have the power to concentrate and absorb the scattered energies which might otherwise be expended in purposeless flirtations, building superfluous bonnets, reading cheap sensations, gossiping away precious moments, picking out our friends' foibles, dissecting our own emotions, and wishing vaguely for everything which is attainable. If the hobby did nothing else but prevent these frivolities it would be a boon to humanity.

"Man found out the value of hobbies long ago. Almost every man who is good for anything has a purpose which he thinks is quite the most magnificent one which a man could pursue. It is no matter whether it is law-making, pill-making or shoemaking, he pursues it with absorbing enthusiasm, and strives to make the best laws or pills or shoes (as the case may be) to be found anywhere. And when he has not felt this sweeping enthusiasm which the genuine hobby inspires, but has been content to languidly saunter along the path of endeavor, it will commonly be found that his laws or pills or shoes are not among the best on the market. If our hobby is a power which we feel within ourselves, and which we determine to develop to its fullest extent, how rich we feel in the possession of that power, even in its feeble beginnings, and with what joy and pride we contemplate its growth and perfection! Woman has found that it is not enough to merely look pretty; that love cannot be her 'whole existence' (the poet to the contrary, notwithstanding), and that even with the richest plenitude of gowns, jewels and enjoyments life still needs a purpose. If it is at all a respectable purpose, and pursued with general zeal, it cannot fail to thrive and increase and bear fruit."

Development of the Transvaal.

In 1892 the main trunk line from Cape Town was pushed forward from its then northern terminus to Johannesburg. The distance from Cape Town to Johannesburg by rail is 1,013 miles. In 1894 the road was completed from Delagoa Bay, a port in Portuguese territory on the southeast coast of Africa, to Johannesburg—a distance of 377 miles. The third road reached Johannesburg a year later, from Durban, a port in the British colony of Natal, distant 483 miles.

From 23,000 ounces of gold in 1887, the annual output has risen to 3,000,000 ounces in 1897, giving the Transvaal the second place in the world's gold production. There is no doubt that the present output of the country will rapidly increase; and probably within a few years, notwithstanding the increased output of other countries, the Transvaal will rank first as a gold producer.

The town of Johannesburg may be taken as a good index of the wonderful expansion of the gold-mining industry of the district. From a few huts in 1886, it has developed into a town unexcelled, if indeed equaled, in the imposing character of its buildings by any of the enterprising mining towns in Western America. Indeed, Johannesburg has but little of the aspect of an American mining camp. In its general appearance it reminds an American more of Spokane or Salt Lake City.—John Hays Hammond, in the Engineering Magazine.

GLADSTONE IS DEAD.

ENGLAND'S "GRAND OLD MAN" PASSES AWAY.

His Demise Had Been Long Expected, Owing to His Years and Suffering—Death Was Faced with Fortitude and Welcomed as a Friend.

Nation Mourns Him.

William Ewart Gladstone, England's greatest statesman of this century, died at Hawarden castle at 5 o'clock Thursday morning.

It is a simple story, this record of the closing hours of a life which, more than any other, perhaps, has influenced the lives of his fellow countrymen during two generations. The pain, which, though intermittent, was most cruelly severe for the last nine months, had gradually subsided for three or four weeks past. This was due, not so much to the use of morphine, which was employed more or less since January, as to the fact that the nerves themselves had mercifully exhausted their capacity for suffering. Drugs were used sparingly during the last ten days, the result being that Mr. Gladstone was conscious and clear in mind, except for brief spells of delirium, due chiefly to weakness.

Gladstone well knew on Tuesday that his hour had come, and plainly the thought brought him sweet content. He was conscious most of the time, but almost beyond the power of speech or motion. His great mind was still active, and still versatile. He surprised the watchers at midday by murmuring a prayer in the French language, with which he was perfectly familiar, but seldom used in the ordinary affairs of life. His vital force continued to diminish, and during the afternoon his pulse became almost imperceptible. His breathing was but of the faintest, and his extremities became cold through the feeble action of the heart, yet there was a slight rally about sundown, and the night was passed in natural sleep. During Wednesday there was a slow flickering of vital flame, and there were only occasional intervals of semi-consciousness until the end came, at 5 o'clock Thursday morning.

The Retrospect.

James Madison was President of the United States, Sir John Moore had fallen at Coruna, Napoleon Bonaparte had reached the summit of his glory in his triumphant assault upon Vienna, and the beginning of his tragic decline in the divorce of Josephine; Wellington, with Waterloo beckoning him on, had crossed the Duoro, the Pope of Rome was a prisoner, the battle of Wagram had been fought and won, and all Europe, from the Spanish peninsula to the Netherlands and from the borders of Siberia to the Irish sea, was under sword in 1809, the year that gave William Ewart Gladstone to England and humanity.

Of a lineage remarkable only for its rugged honesty and unquestioning devotion to the sovereign power, the son of a successful East India merchant who had earned a baronetcy by his achievements in commerce, he seemed predestined upon his entrance into public life to become the representative statesman of the middle classes. That he had come to them with hands full of promise was evident from the beginning of his career. Double honors from Oxford at the age of 22, a member of Parliament at the age of 23, Lord of the Treasury and Under Secretary of State in the Peel government at the age of 25.

Remarkable above all things in the long career of this remarkable man was the influence he exerted upon the minds of the common people of the three kingdoms. His feat in disestablishing the Irish church was one of the most marvelous in the history of modern times. To accomplish it a revolution had to be created in the British mind. With Gladstone's views he could not long retain his early affiliations with the Tories, and his secession from the ranks of the political friends of his youth was for a time the favorite theme of those who thought they could see something akin to instability in his character. But the secret was that Toryism had stood like a granite monument, unchanged and unchanging, while England moved onward marking the Victorian era with golden milestones.

Gladstone's commercial treaty with the French, which gave new life to British trade, his wonderful ability as a budget maker, his direction upon business principles of the vast machinery of the empire, something never known before, won to him the hearts of the mercantile classes, home and colonial. For over sixty years Gladstone has been in public life. For the greater part of sixty years he has labored to turn England from her medieval follies, superstitions and bigotries.

For the better part of sixty years this figure has stood amid the wavering and cowardly policies of Europe, a steadfast supporter of truth and justice, a sublime example of the power of courage and the nobility of man.

Gladstone's battles were not alone for British trade and British prosperity, but for British manhood and British principles. Their influence has been felt to the remotest corners of the globe. He gave to modern political thought a width and depth of liberality and a humane coloring that will illumine the hearts and the minds of his fellowmen.

DEATH IN A STORM.

Life and Property Lost by Tornado in Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Storms of wind, hail and rain ravaged widespread sections of the Northwest. In Eastern Iowa cyclones brought death and disaster to scattered communities, and in Illinois, Wisconsin and in Southern Kansas cyclones and high winds leveled frame buildings, killed some stock and damaged crops. In all the afflicted sections wires were blown down and early details of the disaster were meager. Almost all the vast territory mentioned was rain soaked and wind blown. The cyclones moved the usual narrow paths of from eighty rods to eighty feet in width, and swept for a distance of twenty miles or less.

The cyclone passed north of Clinton, Iowa, between the towns of Charlotte and Riggs, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, doing an immense amount of damage and killing ten people, as far as reported. The storm, after leaving Tipton, passed between Clarence and Stanwood, swept south through Lost Nation and Elwood, running north near Delmar, touched the lower end of Jackson County, and, crossing the Mississippi at South Sabula, Iowa, struck Illinois between Savanna and Thompson. Trees were uprooted and buildings wiped out. The storm passed two miles southeast of Riggs, on the Milwaukee Railway, and ruined everything in its path from southwest to northeast.

In the vicinity of Cedar Rapids the cyclone first appeared one mile south of Stanwood at 3:20 o'clock in the afternoon. Great damage was done to property in the vicinity of Tipton, Charlotte, Quigley, Clarence, Elk River, north of Wheatland, and near Maquoketa. It is estimated that not less than twenty-five people have been killed, while the number of injured will not be less than fifty. Many saved their lives by fleeing to cellars.

The cyclone which struck Preston, Iowa, destroyed most of the buildings in the town and killed Charles Floy, his wife and three children. The bodies of two of the children have not been found. In Ringgold County, southwest of Des Moines, the buildings of J. A. Miller, east of Bloekton, were swept away, and Miller and his daughter were injured. The latter had both legs broken. At Maloy the schoolhouse and Chicago Great Western depot were wrecked.

Two cyclones from southwest struck the village of Stillman Valley, Ill., the larger going north, doing but little damage. The smaller one struck the southwest side, passing across the town, leveling ten houses, one church and several barns and damaging a dozen houses, one church, a creamery and the Great Western depot. M. Nelson, his wife and two children, and one Johnson are reported killed, and about twenty persons are more or less injured, none fatally.

In Joliet the wind and rain storm swept through the city and blew down the big tabernacle where Evangelist Williams has been holding revival meetings.

A cyclone passed seven miles north of Sheffield, Ill., going in a northeastern direction. It first struck the earth near F. W. Marrassy's farm, and destroyed everything in its path for miles. Several persons are reported killed. Paw Paw, Ill., reports that a cyclone passed four miles north of the town. Several people were injured, and Mrs. Frank Chichester was killed.

FARMERS CAN GET NEWS

The COURIER has already alluded to the plan in use at Sedan, where a boy with a bicycle delivers daily papers among the farmers nearby. A similar plan could be followed elsewhere. Also, farmers could form clubs. A given neighborhood could unite and each day one of their number could go to town and get one, two or more dailies as might be needed. Each group that got a daily could chip in so much a week and pay for it. And if the group got but one paper, they could listen, while one read it. This was extensively practiced during the rebellion. Papers were higher priced than now, yet money was so much plentier that multitudes took and read them. And then, too, the deepest interest was felt over the war news in every farm house and town, for everyone had a relative or friend at the front. And it was no unusual thing, as they gathered in some home at evening and listened to the reading, for some one in the group to catch the name of a relative or friend in the list of the killed, the wounded, the missing or the sick. This caused an intensity of interest that we cannot feel now, not at least till our volunteers get to Cuba or the Phillipines. But still people want the news and we look to see various neighborhood arrangements made. For example a group of farmers could chip in a dime a week and one could come in and get a Chicago paper, or what is much better, for them the Indianapolis Daily Sentinel and the DAILY COURIER, thus getting the best of the home and county news, as well as the Indiana state news, and news from the Indiana soldiers, and all the telegraphic news from all over the world. They would find, as Auburn people have found, that a combination of Auburn and foreign news, both for the price of one, is a combination that cannot be equaled.

LATEST WAR NEWS

Monday's Daily.

Reports have been going over the wires that a big naval battle has been fought, but there is no certainty about it. But the two fleets may meet any day.

French papers are trying to stir up ill feelings against Americans. They are probably paid by the Spanish government for doing this.

The Charleston, which had to come back to San Francisco for repairs, after its first start, started again yesterday. It had troops and material for Manila. Other ships will follow every few days. Spain has a fleet and army nearly ready to send to the same place.

First Vouinteers sent to Cuba have probably been safely landed. The privates are mostly Cubans and belong to the Florida volunteers.

One small point was taken last week and held, on the island of Cuba, east of Havana. It is probable we will make it our landing point.

Rumor from St. Johns, N. F. that Spanish war ships are preparing to attack cities on the New England coast.

It is believed now that the delay in landing an army in Cuba, is owing to fear of sickness, and a hope that by destroying the Spanish fleet we may end the war without further trouble.

The new fleet we are expecting Spain to send east through the Mediterranean to Manila, may now come this way to Cuba instead. They begin to think it is needed this way.

The last troops have left Camp Mount. This was the 159th, Col. Barnett. The governor reviewed them yesterday and at 4 p. m. they began to get on their trains, the last of the four trains leaving at 6. This morning as they passed through Athens, Ohio, the citizens gave them a fine breakfast. They go to Falls Church in Virginia, not far from Washington and go into camp there. They will become a part of the Eastern Army and are the first Indiana troops sent there so far.

Tuesday's Daily.

Monday, in the evening our government declared it had no late news from the fleets. But at that time the government in Spain claimed they had important news, but they would not tell what.

The British merchant vessel captured Sunday night near Havana has been released. She proved that she had no contraband goods and was not trying to run the blockade. By the way she acted our ships thought she was trying to sneak into Havana.

Another Spanish merchant ship has been captured.

Cuban insurgents seem to be fighting their way from the interior to the north coast so as to be ready to help us when we land men In doing this they have had to fight several times.

About all the 125,000 men called are now in camp.

Spanish fleet said to be trying to escape but lacks coal. It is believed it may be taken when found, without much fight.

News all kept back on both sides, but is believed both our fleets are at Santiago and may shell the town.

HARTMAN NOMINATED

The republican judicial convention met at Waterloo today, to nominate a candidate for judge. E. A. Bratton, of Angola, and Hon. E. D. Hartman, of Auburn, were the candidates. Mr. Hartman being the winner He is a good lawyer, a man of ability and integrity. He will be a good judge if elected, as he probably will be, as his party has a good working majority in the two counties. Every delegate was present. Speeches were made by party leaders. Then Steuben made a motion for a secret ballot, which was carried. Each county voted for its man. DeKalb gave Hartman its 31 votes and Steuben gave Bratton its 27. Prosecutor Rhodes was then renominated by acclamation. The best of feeling prevailed and all seem satisfied.

BURGLARY

Burglars got in their work again ast night. The residence of Mr. Dice on West 11-st., was entered, and about $40 taken. On rising this morning, the front door was found standing open, and Mr. Dice's pocket book was out on the sidewalk. A bottle of milk standing on Mrs. Clark's porch near by, had been partly emptied. No clue has been found.

MR. RUGMAN.

We met Charlie Rugman up town Saturday afternoon. In spite of his determination to get out, he looks feeble and shows the great amount of suffering he has had to endure The injuries to his nose have been so skillfully treated that they will not disfigure him as much as was feared. His right eye is the one injured. The sight is destroyed but the body of the eye will be retained, so that it will not show so bad after all. But the continuous treatment of the injured one has had a temporary effect to weaken the other, so that his vision is not very good, and some times bothers him, seeing with one eye only, causes objects to appear out of place. But all this will be over when the injured eye is well, and he becomes accustomed to the use of one eye. The places on his head, where he was struck with a sandbag or something of the kind, are still sore, and he still suffers some from all the injuries. yet with his excellent constitution and courage, he may be considered out of danger.

THE BAXTER FUNERAL

As noted by the COURIER Saturday, there was a special train about noon yesterday to take people over to Butler to attend the funeral of the late A. J. Baxter. He was widely known and had many friends besides being a member of the K. P. Uniformed Rank. The members of the order and of the Rathbone sisters, turned out from Garrett, Auburn, Corunna, Waterloo and of course from Butler. When the procession left the church, for the cemetery, it was seen that 49 of the Uniformed rank were present, 123 not uniformed and 56 of the Rathbone Sisters. At the home, the remains were viewed by hundreds of friends from far and near, and at the M E. churdh, the large auditorium was packed and many could not gain admittance.

Rev. Mr. Frech preached a very able discourse, after which, the march to the cemetery took place The special train from here was largely patronized there being four coaches. There were 35 tickets sold at the Junction: 121 from Auburn, and the rest of 228 in the train, were from Kendaliville, Corunna and Waterloo. The obituary is in our Butler letter.

SEDAN

Jonathan Smalley and family of Smithfield visited in Sedan yesterday.

Quite a number of the K.of P. boys from Corunna lodge attended the funeral of Mr. Andy J. Baxter at Butler, last Sunday. Mr. S. W. Guthrie of this place accompanied them.

The following item was taken from a Montcalm Co., Mich., paper. "Benj. Stout, the 14-year-old son of Wm. Stout, living east of town, jumped on a colt's back to ride from the field to the house yesterday and the colt not being broke to ride, became frightened and the boy endeavored to dismount. In doing so his left foot got caught in the harness and he was dragged about 80 rods down beside a stump fence, over snags, logs and stones. His clothes were torn from him, two ribs broken, his left side skinned from hip to shoulder and several bruises about the head." He is the son of Wm. Stout who moved from this place a short time ago

MARRIED

Mr. Phineas K. Guthrie and Mrs. Jennie Adams, of Corunna, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock on Wednesday, May 25, 1898, at the residence of the bride's brother, Harvey Knauer. Elder Wingard of the Christian church, officiating. The bride and groom each have many friends who join with the COURIER in wishing them happiness and success in their voyage on the sea of matrimony.

OBITUARY.

The event of the past week was the sudden and unexpected death of Andrew J. Baxter, a long resident of our town and well known throughout the county. On last Friday about two o'clock he and his son Otmar were leading a couple of colts to pasture on the Tomlinson farm adjoining the town. The lane through the farm was very muddy, the day warm and perhaps more than ordinary exertion was required to get the colts along. At all events when they reached the end of the lane, Mr. Baxter complained of feeling badly and said he could go no further. His son became alarmed and hastened toward town screaming for help and doctor. I. D. Daily was the first to reach him but found him already dead. Dr. Fanning reached him within a few minutes but restoratives failed to bring him back to life. Heart failure is supposed to have been the cause. His remains were borne back to his home that he had left but so short a time before in all the vigor of apparent good health, to his sorrowing wife and children that could hardly realize the truthfulness of the sad event.

Mr. Baxter was born in Franklin township this county, Feb. 14, 1846, we think on the farm still occupied by his father in northwest Franklin, where his father settled in 1840. On Nov. 26 1869, he was united in marriage to Helen Latson. To this union four children were born. One son and two daughters, his wife and aged father surviving him. Mr. Baxter became a successful school teacher and only dropped this avocation after teaching twenty three terms. In 1867. he entered the office of his uncle, Dr. J. J. Hoopingarner, to study medicine, this did not prove to his taste so he turned to law, and in 1872 he opened an office in Hamilton and practiced there until 1879 when he came to Butler with his brother, John W. and has been in successful practice here since that date, his brother soon retiring from the firm and going to Auburn.

His funeral which was very largely attended took place from the M. E church last Sunday afternoon conducted by Rev. Frech assisted by Rev. Thomas of the Christian church and Rev. Mason of Otsego. Mich., assisted also by the Knights of Pythias of which order he was a uniform rank member Mr. Baxter was a man of strong personal convictions, forceful in argument and presence, social, temperate, law-abiding, progressive in his avocation, but not a member of any church. His well known presence will be missed from the busy street but far more by his wife and children who knew him best and loved him most. [From our Butler correspondent.]

OBITUARY

Rebecca Heitz daughter of Margaret and Henry Prince, was born in Shenandoah, Co., Virginia Dec. 15, 1818, and after an illness of six weeks of indescribable suffering she peacefully expired May 21, 1898, at the age of 79 years, 5 months and six days.

Rebecca, the youngest of eight children, moved with her parents to Champaign Co., Ohio, in the year 1830, with whom she resided until 1840, when she was united in marriage to Joseph Heitz. After thirteen years of happy and peaceful life they emigrated to DeKalb Co., Ind., in the fall of 1853 in which county they purchased a home, where they resided together until the year 1872, when the husband was called to the better land. Mrs. Heitz continued to reside on the farm until her death.

To this union were born six daughters and five sons, three daughters having preceded her to the spirit home. Rebecca, when a young girl united with the Lutheran church of which she held a membership until the church was removed to LaOtto, at which distance, she thought it inconvenient for her in her declining days to attend, united with the M. P. church at Butler Center, where she was a faithful member during her remaining days.

Grandma as she was commonly called was a woman of high, noble sentiments, a dutiful wife, a loving mother and a benevolent and steadfast friend to all who made her acquaintance.

She leaves to mourn their loss, eight children, twenty-two grandchildren, two great grand-children and a host of friends.

Funeral took place at Cedar Chapel, 11 a. m. Monday, May 23, conducted by Rev. Green and Rev. Ravenscroft.

CARD OF THANKS.

The Heitz heirs desire to express their earnest thanks to friends for sympathy and assistance in their hours of dark affliction during the illness of their mother.

FOR ALL WOMEN

NINE-TENTHS of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

LATEST WAR NEWS

Wednesday's Daily.

Foreigners at Manila are fleeing from the city and taking refuge at Cavite under protection of the American fleet. They are in danger of starvation and ill-treatment in the city.

It seems that Spaniards have still another queer idea of warfare. Since the destruction of the Maine, they have been in love with torpedoes, They had a hundred or so all wired and ready to place in the harbor of Manila, when Dewey came on them so suddenly before they could be placed.

Blanco, captain-general in Havana has called into the fortified seacoast towns, all troops from the interior and will make his fight to defend those towns, leaving the great bulk of the country in the hands of the insurgents.

In spite of persistent rumors of a battle at the east end of Cuba, in which two Spanish cruisers are said to have been destroyed, our own government keeps telling us no such battle has occurred.

It is possible, that the heavy firing heard at sea, has been a partial battle, for it looks af if the Spanish fleet had separated.

Gen. Merritt will be made governor of the Phillippine Islands when he reaches Manila. He will have a hard job governing the Spaniards on one hand and the rebel natives on the other.

Troops and supplies are now going off to Manila every day or so. It will take about two weeks to make the voyage.

More troops may be called. It is thought that 25,000 will be needed at Manila, 25,000 at Porto Rico, and 100,000 for the invasion of Cuba.

A lost Spanish fleet has been located but no one will tell where they are. It is believed they cannot long escape.

Court was in session on Monday, but adjourned Tuesday, and this morning began again.

The case of Dr. Brunson, of Newville vs Wm. Seeley as guardian of Jane Losure was up Monday and testimony taken. It is for medical services. This was contiued to hear argument.

In the divorce case of Rudolph vs Lillian Battershell, she defaulted.

The divorce case between Julia M. and Summer F. Fryer, was continued for further evidence.

Ottmar Baxter was admitted to the bar as attorney

MEAN TRICK

Someone played a mean trick on S. C. Snyder last evening. When he came home from the meeting of the Jolite Club at Charles McClellan's, he found some one had turned the faucet on the ground by the house, and nearly emptied the big tank on the third floor. It had been turned so hard, he could not turn it back and stopped the flow by putting on the hose and turning that off.

BUTLER.

The town board are making an effort to clear up the muddle, created by the stealing of the town record and so far bid fair to get to the bottom of things, books or no books. From the tone of the Herald last one, one would suppose that the dilemma was a political one. We have not so regarded it, and anything we have said concerning it, was not intended as a stab to either party. It would not be supposed that the marshal without books or papers could make anything but an imperfect settlement, nor that many discrepancies would afterward come to light, so it is proving to be. The loss of the books was a misfortune to all the board as much for one party as another. The COURIER is a good sensible democratic paper. The writer is, as all know, a republican, but because a man is a democrat or republican, doos not necessitate him to be a blind partisan.

The bicycle factory is reducing its force, and orders come in more tardily than during the early spring months. The war most likely being a factor in it.

James Decker has bought the Stell—Oberlin property on West North-st, Mr. Stell getting the Tucker property on Walnut-st, south side.

Albert Gengnagle has bought the Anna Bolan property on north Broad way.

Frequent rains are making bad roads about Butler, but making hay and wheat grow with wonderful rapidity.

FRUIT PROSPECTS

The report of fruit prospects by the Experiment station at Purdue is as follows:

Twenty-four counties report the prospects for apples good, forty-two only fair, and nine poor.

The only countries reporting a poor prospect for peaches are Dubois, Lawrence, Vanderburg, Floyd and Monroe; while Posey, Spencer, Perry, Harrison, Clark, Jefferson and Switzerland, all bordering on the Ohio river, report the prospect as good.

Floyd, Lawrence, Monroe and Vanderburg report a short plum crop; Dubois, Harrison and Monroe report a poor pear crop.

The cherry crop, so far as reported, is only fair.

Grapes, blackberries and raspberries promise well, while strawberries were seriously injured by the drouth of last season.

LINES

To the memory of Mrs. Rebacca Heitz.

Farewell, dear Grandma, thou art gone,
Thy sufferings now are o'er;
Thy friends who knew and loved thee,
Will know thee here no more.

An angel came, we ask not why,
And took our Grandma dear,
God saw she was too frail for earth,
He could not leave her here.

Weep not for Grandma, children dear,
Though sudden was the blow;
God did not mean that dear one
Life's hardships more should know.

And though a lifeless, helpless form,
Is all that's left to view;
See yonder! with the angel band,
Our Grandma waits for you,

Marked His Chickens With a Punch.

Arthur Franklin, of Delaware, Ohio, marked his hundred chickens by using a conductor's punch on the web of their feet. Seventy-nine of them were stolen in one night and Franklin found them on sale at Anderson, Ind. He had J. C. Smith, an extensive poultry dealer, arrested for selling them to the Anderson man.

His Request was Granted.

A certain subordinate government official was absent from his post on a week's leave, at the end of which he telegraphed to his superior to the following effect: "Sir: I shall feel grateful if you will grant me an extension of leave for two days, as a friend of mine is going to be married and wants me to act as bridegroom."

Special to the Daily Courier

Joshua and Hiram Showalter, of the north part of this township, were arrested yesterday morning by Deputy State Fish Commissioner, Benj. McGrew, charged with violating the fish law by spearing on James Lake, four miles north of Angola. The men were arraigned before Squire Kemery who fined each $5.00 and costs, amounting to $22.75 each. Joshua remarked: "That was pretty dear fishing, as I didn't get a fish." The fish commissioner has several other violaters in sight, and will show them in a day or two that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

CHICKS ROASTED ALIVE.

Geo. Chapman is raising chickens. He has a modern incubator and utilizes his back yard for a large hen house and park. The trouble began when he put the incubator in the kitchen. The prospects were good for a hatch of 165 chickens. Just as the little fellows broke the shell and came out to get acquainted with their artificial mother George turned the lamp in the incubator low and left the chickens to their fate. His good wife, Winnie used the stove in the kitchen that day and kept a hot fire. When George returned and looked to see how the new born chicks were getting along—Alas! they had a roast. Twenty-five chickens had been baked. George is not discouraged but will hatch his chickens outside the kitchen in the present warm weather at least.

$1000 REWARD

For the apprehension and conviction of the parties who composed, printed and distributed the following libelous circular:

To Members of the Associated Bicycle Clubs

FELLOW RIDERS: We, the committee appointed by the Executive Committee to make a complete and searching investigation into the rumors which have recently gained circulation to the effect that the "RAMBLER" bicycle, manufactured by GORMULLY & JEFFERY for the past nineteen years, during which time it has stood high in public favor, is now being manufactured out of inferior material and put together in a very inferior manner, and therefore unsafe for any other than boulevard riding, make the following statement:

As the matter was deemed important to both ourselves and the firm of manufacturers' whose reputation for years has been of the best, your committee decided to make a complete investigation and give GORMULLY & JEFFERY every opportunity to maintain the reputation so long enjoyed by the "RAMBLER" wheel.

Upon our visit to the offices of GORMULLY & JEFFERY we were very courteously received as the representatives of the Associated Bicycle Clubs, but upon our stating our errand and that we would like to be given the opportunity to inspect the factory and construction of the "RAMBLER" wheel, we were very plainly told that such request could not be granted and that it was none of our business as to how the wheel was manufactured. Mr. Jeffery talked very presistently of his high business standing and stated that the "RAMBLER" had been nineteen years on the market and that the rumors (which he acknowledged were in circulation) were instigated by rival manufacturers. We informed him that we could very easily find out whether or not the "RAMBLER" was a safe wheel to ride if he would give us permission to watch the construction of a set of them, but he declined,

Our next move was to place one of our members, who is well known to you all, in the factory as an employe in the assembling department. He made application and secured employment in the course of a few days and thus had an excellent opportunity to keep his eye on the building of the "RAMBLER" wheel. He spent ten days in the factory and then tendered his resignation, at which the foreman expressed regret, stating that he was one of the best workmen in the room.

Our report is as follows: "The 'RAMBLER' wheel of to-day in no way compares with the 'RAMBLER' of a few years ago. Not only is the material used in its construction of a poor grade, but the workmen are a very inferior lot. Very few mechanics are employed in the factory and none of the men who were with GORMULLY & JEFFERY when they made the wheel famous are with them to-day, on account, we are informed of the low wages paid.

"We therefore advise all members of the Association to let the 'RAMBLER' alone as it is an unsafe wheel to ride and will not stand road work."

This recommendation is made after a very careful study of the material used and method of manufacturing the "RAMBLER," and we are assured that the reports are true in fact and not instigated by jealous rivals as GORMULLY & JEFFERY assert.

Respectfully,

JOHN CARLSON, OKIE M. CHESMAN, HENRY ARNSON, Committee.

NOTE

For refutation of these falsehoods, and the claim that such a committee was appointed, we refer to the president of any associated cycling club in the U. S. A.

INSPECTION SOLICTED.

OUR NATIONAL CEMETERIES

THERE are nearly half a million soldiers' graves in the cemeteries of the United States. From the Atlantic to the Pacific the nation's heroes are on each 30th of May honored by a loyal and loving people. On that date, from the time the sun rises over the hills of Maine until it sinks to rest beyond the mountains of California the vast extent of our land echoes with the bugle call and the booming of cannon. The youth of the nation get their best lesson in patriotism when they lay a wreath of flowers on the stone that marks a soldier's grave.

It is impossible to state the exact number of soldiers' graves, as no record has been made of them for several years. When the last record was made there were about 300,000 sleeping in the national cemeteries and probably 75,000 scattered in little graveyards all over the country. The accompanying map gives the figures of the last record made. Of course, the number of graves has increased since then. The veterans have become fewer and fewer. They have not fallen as rapidly as they were mowed down before the death-dealing fire of Gettysburg, nor as they fell in the awful charges of Bull Run, but their ranks have been thinned by the grim reaper, and for each one that passed away there has arisen another mound to be decorated.

National cemeteries, as is, perhaps, well known, are burying places maintained at the expense of the United States Government, and wherein only soldiers are buried. Many of these are near some military post, but by far the larger ones are located in the vicinity of the big battlefields. Some of the heroes were buried near the spot where they gave up their lives for their country, and numbers were taken to as near their homes as possible. In the national cemeteries near the battlefields most of the graves are unnamed. Only a number and a tiny stone tell where a hero lies sleeping. When shells and shot mowed men down by the thousand it frequently happened that there were none left to identify the bodies. In most cases it was known to what company certain men had belonged, although each could not be identified individually, and in such cases all are buried in groups and the names of all the men who were missing after the battle are inscribed on a single shaft.

There are in all about ninety national cemeteries in the United States and so scattered that each presents an entirely different appearance. Could pictures of them be viewed one after another they would present a panorama of our country. There would be cemeteries far out on sandy wastes where the sun beats down mercilessly and the dry desert wind carries the hot sand in blinding clouds over the shiny stones that mark the graves. There would be cemeteries in mountain wilds and on boundless western prairies. There would be peaceful little spots sheltered 'neath church towers, and vast stretches of beautiful park where thousands lie buried. Millions of people visit these cemeteries on Memorial Day and when night comes each is a perfect bank of flowers.

The most easterly of the national cemeteries is the one known as Cypress Hills. It is located not far out of the city of Brooklyn, and is a typical Eastern burying place that contains some of the finest monuments that are placed over soldiers' graves in the country. The natural aspect of the country at Cypress Hills is somewhat flat, but the cemetery has received so much attention and art has done so much for it that the flatness is not noticeable. It is a most beautiful spot, where 5,600 heroes are buried. Woodlawn is the name of the national cemetery of New York State. It is a magnificent burying place on slightly rolling ground, well kept and planted to all sorts of flowers and evergreens. Over 3,000 are buried here. A little further to the south the national cemeteries are very close together. At Philadelphia there is a beautiful burying place, where about 2,500 sleep, and just to the northeast of town is pretty Beverly. Only 164 are buried here, but it is one of the most beautiful cemeteries in the country—certainly the most beautiful of its size. In the immediate vicinity there is the Gettysburg cemetery, Antietam, Balls Bluff, Grafton and Winchester. All these are much alike in general appearance. About 14,000 are buried in all of them.

The shores of the Chesapeake in Virginia are fairly lined with national cemeteries. About 50,000 are buried in this vicinity, and the graveyards are almost exactly alike in appearance. They are not as well kept as some further north, but nature has done so much in the way of luxuriant vegetation that this is hardly noticeable. The most important of these cemeteries are Fredericksburg, Arlington, Culpepper, Richmond, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Yorktown and Annapolis. Most of them have streams of water running through them that greatly add to their natural beauty. In North Carolina the most important national cemetery is Salisbury. Nearly 13,000 are buried here. This cemetery is located in a spur of a mountain range and is a most beautiful spot. In general appearance it is entirely different from any other national cemetery in the country. From almost any part of it a view extending over miles and miles of country that in war time was the scene of many important battles can be obtained. It is a most impressive place to visit at any time of the year. The other cemeteries in North Carolina are Raleigh, New Berne and Wilmington. About 7,000 are buried in these three.

Almost at the southern tip of South Carolina is the most beautiful national cemetery in the country. It is known as Beaufort and about 10,000 are buried there. Although it is in South Carolina, Beaufort might be said to belong to Savannah, Ga. The perfect city of the South is just a few miles away, across the river that divides the two States, and it is from there that the crowds of people come who decorate its graves. Hundreds of the sons of Savannah are buried in Beaufort. For picturesqueness the national cemetery at St. Augustine, Fla., takes first rank. It is on the site of an old Spanish burying place, and many are the quaint graves and tombstones to be seen there. Surrounded by a very old stone wall, within sound of the breakers and filled with tropical plants and dreamy lagoons, it is at once beautiful and interesting. About 1,500 are buried here, and the Decoration Day ceremonies are always of a most impressive nature. The national cemetery of Chalmette, near New Orleans, is one of the best-known burying places in the country. Thirteen thousand are buried here. Chalmette is located on the shore of a bayou and presents somewhat the appearance of a swamp with driveways through it. There are several lakes in it, and in many instances the graves are very close to the water. Decoration Day is always extensively observed here, but for one reason or another the graves are decorated with flowers and evergreens the greater part of the year.

The largest national cemetery in the country is at Vicksburg, Miss. About 17,000 are interred here, but the place has rather a depressing effect on one who visits it for the first time, it is so vast and so suggestive of the horrors of death. There is a melancholy aspect to it that it is impossible to shake off. Near by is the cemetery at Natchez, where 3,200 are buried. In the immediate vicinity are the cemeteries of Port Hudson, Baton Rouge and Alexandria. All through this part of the country Decoration Day is most extensively observed. In nearly every graveyard there are several soldiers buried, and the sentimental nature of the people causes much attention to be given to the ceremonies. From Andersonville, Ga., and following a sort of curve to Little Rock, Ark., there is a line of cemeteries where nearly 100,000 soldiers are buried. These are all very much alike in appearance and are not as well cared for as those in other parts of the country. The principal ones of this group are Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga and Marietta.

There is a little group of cemeteries in Kentucky where about 8,000 are buried, but the observances of the day here are always very sad. More old people are seen at these ceremonies than in any other cemetery in the country. They still remember their lost ones, and even at this late day old, white-haired negroes are frequently seen weeping and crying for "young marsa."

A national cemetery that is very little known is Jefferson Barracks, located about eighteen miles below St. Louis, Mo. Over 11,800 are buried here, and the cemetery is one of the grandest sites in the world. It is about 300 feet above the Mississippi, on the west bank, and commands a view in all directions over the bottom lands. This cemetery is remarkably well kept, although it does not contain as many trees as one feels ought to be there.

The national cemeteries of the West are sad places. Most of them are absolutely barren and are distressing in the extreme. The one at San Antonio, Tex., is of this character, although of late years an attempt has been made to improve it. Nearly all the Western cemeteries are small. The national cemetery on the Custer battlefield in Dakota is perhaps the strangest burying place in all the world. It is a most barren spot, containing an enormous marble shaft, with 414 graves grouped around it. The strange thing about this cemetery is that all those sleeping there were killed on the same day.

The national cemetery of San Francisco is located at the Presidio. About 350 are interred here. It is not generally known, but the United States maintains a national cemetery at the City of Mexico. Of course the 6,184 buried there are the victims of the Mexican war.

THE OLD KNAPSACK.

FOR over thirty years it had hung from the rafters grim and dusty, up in the old garret where spider webs floated and where little mice peeped out their bright eyes from nooks behind chimneys and gloomy corners.

The old violin hanging upon a nail near one of the queer, old-fashioned windows, tells a beautiful tale when the wind sweeps across its two remaining strings. The mice quit their feast among the popcorn and the spiders even cease to watch for prey when the old violin begins to tell its sweet story.

Near the old knapsack hangs a grotesque hat with bell crown and wide brim. The two are great friends, and they frequently exchange opinions concerning the ways of the world as viewed from their point of observation.

"You see," said the old hat one day after the violin had told its story, "folks to-day are different. They ride on cars run by condensed lightning; such a thing was never dreamed of in my day."

"There wasn't much said about it in my day, either," uttered the knapsack. "I notice one strange thing; when Memorial Day comes around most of the folks seem to forget that there ever was a war——"

"Yes, you are right; now the war of 1812——"

"Pshaw! That's a long time ago. I mean the great civil war, the greatest war of history. I was through that war and know something about it. Now what do you suppose all that uproar over in yonder field means?"

"Celebrating the civil war, I suppose," said the old hat; then added questioningly, "but what is that rusty looking spot on your side?"

"A few drops of blood spattered upon me at the battle of Big Bethel, June 14, 1861. Never mind that, though, it is an incident I do not like to recall. What I want to talk about is the present; over in yonder field the sons of men are observing Memorial Day in their fashion."

"Yes; but they do not celebrate for my war, 1812, you know."

"But that was a long time ago. The war I had a hand in was only——"

"And one of your buckles is gone. I've often noticed that, but didn't want to ask about it."

"That buckle saved the life of a bright young fellow who carried me through the battle of Manassas Junction, July 21, 1861. But do not bother about such things. Those chaps over in the field are celebrating things. They are having a baseball game and some twenty-odd thousand people are gathered there. It is strange, isn't it?"

"Very strange," came the response from the old hat. The breeze came through the quaint little window and ruffled the hat's nap. "So what you fought for has been forgotten."

"Humph! They have turned what was intended to be a sacred day into a day of sport, recreation, frolic, fun, games. Perhaps it is best so; I do not know, and perhaps I am too old to learn." The knapsack shook its battered sides as it ceased speaking.

"Been through the greatest war history tells of and now you are forgotten. You've got a hole in your side; where did you get that?" asked the veteran of 1812, bent upon questioning.

"Ball's Bluff, October 21, 1861."

"Fits nicely with 'play ball,' May 31, 1898, eh?"

"Don't ask pointed questions, old fellow. I hate questions anyhow. At Cedar Mountain, August 5, 1862, I lost my best friend. Shot through the heart, poor boy! I was taken from his person, and after that I drifted from place to place. I saw blood then, enough to float a ship. The battle of Chantilly, September 1, 1862, was a horrible, frightful carnage. The worst battle I ever took part in was the battle of Gettysburg, July 2, 1863. Oh! the horrors of that battle! A veil of crimson comes before me now when I think about it. After that battle I got lost, and was found by a curious fellow among a pile of broken swords, battered canteens and shivered guns. Inside of me he found the picture of a pretty lady with name and address upon it. Then I was sent here, where I have hung upon a peg ever since. A beautiful woman used to come up here sometimes and lean her soft, white cheek lovingly against me. She used to cry and shudder when her fingers wandered over me with soft, caressing touches; and she used to murmur sadly the name 'Jamie'—but that was years and years ago. Now her children's children come up here to play on rainy days. Once the children, when they were very small, asked her what I was. 'Hush! dearies; an old war relic; that's all,' she said. Ah! but I could tell her a story if she would but listen to me. If she could have seen the loving kisses that 'Jamie' covered her picture with when he was alone in the darkness; if she could have heard the loving words he whispered to her picture; but I must not tell her of that, for she has other things to think about now. Someone will put flowers upon 'Jamie's' grave, though he sleeps beneath the sod of the sunny South; perhaps some will recall his bright, honest face to-day—some of his companions who marched with him."

The knapsack was silent, but shivered slightly as a shout came from the field of sport, black with crowding, yelling humanity.

And then a slight breeze swept across the strings of the old violin; the gloomy garret was filled with a sweet melody, a soothing, tender requiem befitting the place—the home of the battered old knapsack, whose memorial day was brightened by the exquisite strains that finally died away like the echo of a sob.

HEAR THE DRUMS MARCH BY.

SARAH, Sarah, Sarah, hear the drums march by!
This is a Decoration Day;—hurry and be spry!
Wheel me to the window, girl; fling it open high!
Crippled of the body now, and blinded of the eye,
Sarah, let me listen while the drums march by.

Hear 'em; how they roll! I can feel 'em in my soul.
Hear the beat—beat—o' the boots on the street;
Hear the sweet fife cut the air like a knife;
Hear the tones grand of the words of command;
Hear the walls nigh shout back their reply!
Sarah, Sarah, Sarah, hear the drums dance by!

Blind as a bat, I can see 'em, for all that;
Old Colonel J., stately an' gray,
Riding slow and solemn at the head of the column;
There's Major L., sober now and well;
Old Lengthy Bragg, still a-bearing of the flag;
There's old Strong, that I tented with so long;
There's the whole crowd, hearty and proud.
Hey! boys, say! can't you glance up this way?
Here's an old comrade, crippled now, an' gray!
This is too much. Girl, throw me my crutch!
I can see—I can walk—I can march—I could fly!
No, I won't sit still an' see the boys march by!

Oh!—I fall and I flinch; I can't go an inch!
No use to flutter, no use to try.
Where's my strength? Hunt down at the front;
There's where I left it. No need to sigh;
All the milk's split; there's no use to cry.
Plague o' these tears, and the moans in my ears!
Part of a war is to suffer and to die.
I must sit still, and let the drums march by.

Part of a war is to suffer and to die—
Suffer and to die—suffer and to—Why,
Of all the crowd I just yelled at so loud,
There's hardly a one but is killed, dead and gone!
All the old regiment, excepting only I,
March out of sight in the country of the night.
That was a specter band marched past so grand.
All the boys are a-tenting in the sky.
Sarah, Sarah, Sarah, hear the drums moan by!

A FUNNY OLD TOWN.

Some of the Many Amusing Features of Key West.

Key West is one of the oldest and funniest towns in the United States. It is made up of innumerable little wooden houses without chimneys, but crowded in irregular groups. Many of the houses have wooden shutters in place of glass windows. On most of the streets there are no sidewalks, but people stumble over the jagged edges of coral rock. The natives who wear shoes ride in carriages. There are a great number of public vehicles, and one can be hailed at any corner and engaged for 10 cents. Some of these carriages are quite respectable in appearance. They are generally double-seated affairs which have been discarded in the North. The horses are wrecks and they show by their appearance that fodder is dear and that they are not half fed. One of the sounds of Key West is the whacking of the horses which draw the carriages and the mules which move the street cars from place to place. The street cars look as if they had been dug up from the neighborhood of the pyramids. Ropes are used for reins and the only substantial thing about the whole outfit is the great rawhide whip, with which the street car driver labors incessantly. The people, as a rule, are opposed to excessive exertion, but they make an exception in the case of labor with a whip.

The town has one struggling newspaper, which is worthy of a better support. The climate, of which much has been written, is too good to be wasted, and there are traditions against excessive mental effort by either the makers or the readers of newspapers. Hundreds of dogs, cats, roosters, goats and "razorbacks" run at large through the streets, and the three former combine to make the night hideous. In the early evening the sound of negro meetings and jubilations predominates. Then the cats begin where the shouters leave off. Later, the dogs, sneaking and sore-eyed, and more numerous than any other species, take up the refrain. There is a strange mixture of races at Key West, but the negroes are the most patriotic class. They alone celebrate Fourth of July and other national holidays. While the town has its enlightened and respectable people, it also has its shoddy class, whose ignorance of the rest of the world carries them to grotesque extremes in their efforts to proclaim their greatness. Even in its schools, Key West is peculiar. The schoolhouses are built like cigar factories, and each has mounted upon the roof the bell of an old locomotive. When the school bells are ringing it is easy to close your eyes and imagine yourself in one of the great railroad depots of the North. The classes are large, the teachers have a constant struggle with the climate, so the scholars have time to make pea-shooters and other instruments of torture for the unsuspecting visitor who falls into their ambush.

If the teachers have a hard time, the clergy have a worse one. The churches are much-abused institutions, and a large patronage and a meagre support.

Men that smoke presume that cigars are manufactured in Key West, but there is another source of income of scarcely less importance. Any unfortunate ship that ventures into port is considered legitimate prey, and it is a bold man that dares to protest against the confiscation of his property. When a ship is seen approaching the reefs the greatest excitement prevails, and some people even fall on their knees to petition for her speedy destruction.

If a vessel strikes she is immediately surrounded by a crowd of wreckers, who cling to her like flies to a molasses barrel. After there has been a wreck, storekeepers have money in their pockets and do not care whether you buy of them or not. The proprietor of a shop will stretch himself, yawn and finally saunter over toward his customer to find what is wanted.

FRENCH POLITENESS.

Use of Old-Time Courtesy Brought Promotion for a Frenchman.

In France, at the present day, the great majority of the people are ardent republicans in opinion, but they are also great admirers of the sort of courtesy which is associated with the ancien regime—the old-time gentility.

There lately died in that country a certain Monsieur Daunassans, who was a fine representative, in his manners and opinions, of the old school. His elaborate courtesy was of the elegant, "palavering" antique sort, and it kept his head above water in times when other old-school fellows went to the bottom.

It was not many years ago that Monsieur Daunassans was prefect of a department and stationed at an important provincial town. Just at that time a very radical ministry came into power—an ultra-republican government, which announced its intention to turn all conservative and "reactionist" functionaries out of office. The Minister of the Interior was a particularly violent radical, with no bowels of compassion for any who were suspected of monarchical opinions.

One of the first functionaries selected for sacrifice was Monsieur Daunassans. It happened, however, that his conservative opinions were not so strenuously held as to incline him against holding office under a radical administration. When he was summoned to Paris for dismissal, he went to the cabinet of the minister with his hat in his hand and his most complaisant expression on his face.

"You are represented to me, sir," said the minister, "as hostile to our republican institutions."

Monsieur Daunassans bowed very low, in the most graceful style of the ancient gentility.

"I think, monsieur le ministre," he began, "that I may possibly prove myself worthy of your excellency's confidence. If I may be permitted to enter into certain details, it will be, I fancy, within my power to demonstrate to your excellency——"

It was the first time that the new minister had ever been called "your excellency." He was a man who had sprung from the common people, and the phrase, coming from a man who seemed to know how to use it, was very pleasant to his ears. His manner softened perceptibly. Daunassans went on with a long and flattering speech, in which he had very little to say about his own politics, but in which the words "your excellency" occurred a great many times.

After about three-quarters of an hour he came out of the minister's cabinet. He had been indeed removed from his prefecture, but he had been promoted to a better one! The minister's radical friends were furious. They went to him and said:

"What! You have promoted this man? Why, he is the most abominable of reactionists!"

"W-well," answered the minister, as if recalled to himself, "perhaps he's a reactionist, but I tell you he's a mighty well-bred man!"

All of which goes to show—what the French have already found out to their sorrow—that it is hard to make a republic without republicans.—Youth's Companion.

Turkish Girls.

Turkish girls of the better class in the cities, after they are too old to attend the primary schools, are largely educated at home by governesses, many of whom come from England and France, but, unfortunately, do not always represent the highest culture of these nations, so that the real love of study is not, as a rule, developed under their influence. Turkish women have a great aptitude for foreign languages, and those met on the steamers of the Bosphorus often speak French, and it is not unusual for them to speak German and English also.

It is a well-known fact that many Turkish women are engaged in trade, some even carrying on an extensive business, involving frequent journeys to Egypt and other places, which presupposes the ability to read and write, as well as some knowledge of arithmetic. Moreover, conversation with the Mussulman woman in the capital reveals some progress at the present time in independence of thought, and, while social conditions have unavoidably arrested the development of Turkish women as a class, forces are slowly but surely working among them that will result in their final emancipation.

FOR HUMANITY'S GOOD.

New Invention Which Mankind Will Greatly Appreciate.

Does there exist a man who has never struggled with a refractory stovepipe? This new invention will do more for the maintenance of peace and quiet than anything else. The illustration represents a device designed to facilitate securing a stovepipe in position, and holding the pipe so that there will be no danger of soot blowing through the joints into the room, says the Scientific American. The improvement has been patented by Jerome Jones of Kansas City, Mo. Upon the thimble held in the chimney wall and opening into the flue, is riveted an approximately U-shaped metallic bar, whose middle portion extends across the inner end of the thimble, and forms a support for the hook of a screw rod whose other end is engaged by a cross-piece secured to the inside of a short pipe section loosely fitting in the thimble and projecting outward to receive the end of the stovepipe. The inward movement of the short section is limited by a bead which abuts against the inner edge of a ring-shaped cover engaging the outer face of the chimney, thus forming a tight joint, and in the outer end of this section are bayonet slots to be engaged by short pins on the inner end of the stovepipe, there being a handle or thumb-piece on the short section by which the latter may be conveniently turned to bring the parts into engagement. When the stove is taken down, the short section and ring-cover as well as the stovepipe, are removed, and the screw-rod is utilized to hold in place an outer cover, which rests with its edge against a packing on the outer face of the chimney.

JONES' STOVEPIPE FASTENER.

After a man has made his pile he believes in himself instead of luck.

Monkey Rang the Bell.

A lady who lives in a New York hotel is fond of animal pets and lately bought a monkey, which, though pleased with his quarters, was soon anxious to look further. He noticed that when his owner touched the electric bell the door was presently opened. When opportunity offered he put his thumb on the electric knob and kept it there. When the door opened there were five bell boys outside. The monkey dived through the mob of them and flew down the hall, hotly pursued.

Hard pressed, he noticed an open transom over a door marked thus: "Bath." He flew up the door and through the transom, leaving the baffled bell boys aghast in a group outside. Instantly ensued a splash, followed by a piercing shriek; as the door flew open a lady, scantily draped in a bath towel, burst out on the dumfounded bell boys and fled screaming down the hall, with the delighted monkey perched on her shoulders and holding on by her hair.—Life.

Cradle Rocked by a Mule.

A traveler going through a sparsely settled section of Canada came to a lonely cabin, and, finding the door open, went in. Nobody was in sight, but in the center of the room he saw a cradle with a baby lying in it fast asleep. The cradle was rocked back and forth with great regularity, and he was puzzled to know what kept it in motion.

On examination he found a stout cord attached to a nail driven in the side of the cradle and passed through an auger hole in the side of the house. He took up the trail, which led him into a ravine where a donkey was standing and switching his tail. The mystery was explained. The other end of the cord was attached to the donkey's tail, and the constant switching kept the cradle in motion. It was an ingenious device on the part of the mother to keep her baby asleep while she went off for a time.—Ontario Farmer.

Our American Policy.

The policy of this country regarding foreign complications seems likely to remain conservative. The Monroe doctrine will be sustained, but patience and prudence in official quarters will restrain public opinion. The wisest and most prudent course for the rheumatic and the malarious is to use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Luring Fish by Light.

It is a well-known fact that fish, like insects, are attracted to any bright light, and a French entomologist has lately taken advantage of this circumstance in fishing for specimens in a pond. With a portable battery and a small incandescent electric lamp attached to a net he was able to secure a large number of fish, larvae, tadpoles, etc., at one operation. The net, measuring about one yard across, was slowly lowered into the water, and when it reached the bottom of the pond the little lamp above it was connected with the battery. All the living creatures within reach of the apparatus rushed towards the light, and were immediately secured in the net. It is obvious that the method is applicable on a far larger scale, and may prove to be of great service to night fishermen.

SPEAKER REED'S ORATIONS.

He Always Commits His Set Speeches, but Is Happier in Debate.

Speaker Reed, talking about set speeches, said: "I have spoken from memory for two hours. It is always a hard task and I am never free from the fear that somewhere along the course I am going to falter and break. I feel many a time as if I were not going to make the next hurdle, but somehow I usually manage to gather myself for the leap."

When Reed was a schoolboy up in Brunswick it is to be feared he was not the closest of students as a rule, until it dawned on him that a little special effort was necessary if he expected to come out with credit at the end of the term. At any rate, he set to work to learn his lessons, and this was the way in which he got into the habit of committing to memory. Butler's Analogy was one of the tasks set for the class and Reed determined to master it. The day before each recitation he would shut himself up with the analogy and commit a page, word for word. He was always letter perfect in recitation, and that was the end of it.

Nobody ever saw Mr. Reed refer to manuscript while making a speech, but he has never made a speech of any importance on a set occasion that was not drudgingly and patiently "boned" and memorized. Yet his impromptu outbursts in debate are as perfect in form and matter as the addresses he has so carefully prepared.—Buffalo Express.

A SCHOOL GIRL'S BATTLE.

From The Mail, Milford, Ind.

Miss Emma Rybolt, a prepossessing school girl, of Milford, Ind., is of more than usual intelligence, and is ambitious to rise in the literary world.

"In the fall of 1896," said Mrs. Rybolt, "Emma was taken ill. She was a close student and her work began to tell on her. She grew weak, pale and nervous, and complained of pains in her back, chest and limbs. The doctor said she was a victim of nervous prostration, and should have been taken from school weeks earlier. She grew worse, her nerves were so tense that the least noise irritated her and she had a fever and a continual twitching in her muscles. The symptoms were much like St. Vitus' dance.

Her Battle.

"A year passed, and, under a change of physicians, Emma became somewhat better but soon was as bad as ever. One day I read of a case similar to hers which was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I decided to try them.

"Emma had no faith in proprietary medicines, but decided to try the pills. It was about the first of April when she began, and by the middle of May, after taking about eight boxes, she was entirely cured.

"While ill she lost twenty-eight pounds, but now weighs more than ever before. Her nerves are strong and she is in perfect health. We are all confident that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People cured her, and I cheerfully recommend them in all similar cases.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

BONDS OR TREASURY NOTES.

Democrats in Congress who are opposing the issue of $500,000,000 worth of bonds are acting in the interests of the people. Of course, the Republicans will raise a great howl that the Democrats are "obstructionists," but the Democrats are simply obstructing an attempt to place a great and unecessary burden of taxation upon the country. There are more ways of raising money with which to pay the expenses of the war than the one way, so dear to Republicans—that of issuing bonds with which to make the syndicates rich and to keep the masses poor.

Treasury notes are just as good as bonds, being payable in coin, and they do not carry any interest. Again, there is a great quantity of silver lying idle in government vaults which ought to be utilized. The people know that the Democrats are fighting for their benefit, and the Democrats are quite willing to go before the people on the issue raised by the Republicans. Treasury notes will have to be redeemed in the long run just as the bonds would have to be redeemed, but there would be no interest to pay on the notes, and that is why the money sharks are opposed to them. Every three months the bondholder would be able to thrust his hand into the treasury and loot it of interest. He could not do that if treasury notes were issued. "Anything to get interest out of the government" is the cry of the Republicans. And that is the extent of the bond-buyer's patriotism.—Chicago Dispatch.

The Financial War Issue.

Naturally the Republican gold bugs, both in and out of Congress, are wildly indignant at the Democratic proposition to provide money for the carrying on of the war without increasing the interest-paying bonded debt of the nation. They do not want either a further issue of treasury notes, the coinage of the silver seigniorage or the taxation of corporations. What the Republicans are aiming at above all things is the enlargement of the interest-bearing debt. This will prolong the existence of the national banks and increase their profits. It will also tighten the hold of other big moneyed corporations on the Government and the people.

That the corporations and the banks will win in the contest is more than probable, but the Republican party, under the cover of the war excitement, will thereby forge a weapon that is sure to destroy them in the end. The people cannot be fooled in financial matters now as they were thirty-five years ago, when they were saddled with a debt of billions, bearing a high rate of interest, under which they are still groaning and which not even another generation will get rid of. The Democratic plan provides ample revenue for the present needs of the Government and it does not mortgage the people further to the money classes. It would receive the support of a majority of the voters at the polls if an election were held to-morrow.—New York News.

Unite Against the Foe.

In the conduct of the war against Spain there should be no display of politics. There is one fact absolutely certain, and that is, the people, irrespective of party, were in favor of the declaration of war and are now desirous that the campaign shall be carried on with unrelenting firmness, vigor and severity.

To conquer Spain and to conquer Spain quickly and completely is what the people desire, and in order that this may be done they are willing to lay aside all political considerations in discussing war measures.

It is to be regretted that the Republicans have set the example of partisanship by preparing the war revenue bill along political lines, and it is unfortunate that many of the President's military appointments have been plainly of a political character. It is to be hoped that no further exhibitions of party feeling will be made. Democrats joined with Republicans in voting $50,000,000 to be used by the President in making preparations for war, and they will continue to vote with Republicans on strictly war measures. Let the Republicans keep the currency question, the protection of trusts and the making of political appointments to the army in the background, and they will find Democrats voting with them in all measures looking toward the defeat of the common foe.

War Taxes.

Long and labored articles in the subsidized press are now in order to prove that corporations should not be taxed. These arguments will be brought forth by the Senate amendment to the revenue bill suggesting a corporation tax of one-fourth of 1 per cent. on the gross receipts of corporations. The Boston Herald devotes a column editorial to this single proposition, and makes a special plea for the corporations. It is to be observed that the Boston Herald is not at all worried over the taxes which are proposed on the necessities of life. The people who have to pay for food and drink can work more hours and earn more money to pay the extra tax, but the beloved corporations must not be touched. Corporations are to be protected at all hazards. A corporation that earns $2,000,000 a year must not be made to pay $5,000 taxes. Horrible! The supposition is not to be entertained for a single moment. The people must not only fight the battles of this country, but they must pay the expenses of the war as well. That's good Republican doctrine. What do the people think of it?

Courage of the Stay-at-Home.

It sometimes requires more and better courage to stay at home than to go to war. Many a man who, if duty would permit him to volunteer, would be glad to go, is compelled by the most solemn and binding of all human obligations to stay at home. It is not a manly, a wise or heroic thing for a citizen to leave his wife, children, parents or sisters in want in order to go where he is not needed. So long as there is a surplus of men who want to enlist, and whose presence at home is not essential to the support of families, no man whose presence is thus required has a moral right to enlist.—Washington Post.

The Gold Standard.

Many of my correspondents express the opinion that the financial problem is too complicated for the ordinary intellect, and in this belief make no attempt to reach a solution. I do not believe it possible for any person of even ordinary intelligence to arrive at any other conclusion than that the restoration of bimetallism is essential to the prosperity of the country, if prejudice be laid aside and the facts honestly accepted which are supported by overwhelming evidence.

So far from presenting complications, the problem is one of extreme simplicity and, next to the salvation of the soul, is the most important that can occupy human attention. The prosperity, the happiness, and, to a great extent, the lives of industrial workers in all civilized countries depend upon the proper solution of this financial question.

I will state certain facts for which conclusive proofs have been and can be presented. A gigantic conspiracy, centralized in London, has long existed among the money powers of the world to depreciate prices of all products of industry and inflate the purchasing power of money. The effect, if not the intention, has been to close factories, throw millions of operatives out of employment, reduce wages to starvation prices, and pauperize all who by industry are engaged in the creation of wealth. It increases all time debts and taxes, renders mortgagees unable to pay interest, and deprives tens of thousands of farmers, tradesmen and operatives of their homes.—H. Haupt.

Sons of Their Sires.

There have been already appointed or slated for prompt appointment to offices of high rank in the army sons of Senators Gray, Elkins and Fairbanks and a nephew of Senator Allison, and sons of Representatives Hill and Hitt, Secretary Alger and the late Secretary Blaine. None of these sons of distinguished sires has been educated or trained in the duties of the offices to which they have been appointed, and, therefore, their duties will not be properly performed. As a consequence many soldiers are liable to suffer—possibly to die—from this form of political favoritism.—New York World.

A Thoroughly Exploded Idea.

The idea that the foreigner can be made, through the workings of a tariff, to buy warships for us and keep an army in the field for us, and pay our bills generally, is as dead as Julius Caesar. And for that much we can be thankful. Even Mr. Dingley appears to have come to a partial recognition of the truth that the tariff is a tax.—Manchester Union.

Several weeks ago several Congressmen were talking about resigning and leading troops to Cuba. But no resignations have occurred yet.—Dallas News.

She Earned Her Half.

"I thought you had given up betting on the horse races," said Mrs. De Tompkins to her lord and master on his return from "business" the other afternoon.

"I trust you haven't wavered in the belief," said Mr. De Tompkins.

Ignoring the remark, the wife quietly asked:

"How much did you win on Ben Brush?"

"Look here, madam," said her husband, angrily, "if you've been spying on my actions or hiring anybody to dog my steps, all I have to say is, you might be more profitably employed."

"Don't get excited, Frederick. I have neither the money nor the inclination to employ detectives. It isn't necessary. I have merely used the method which you ridicule. You know you have called the Sherlock Holmes stories absurd?"

"So they are; what's that got to do with it?"

"Everything, my dear. You got off the street car before it had fairly stopped. (I saw you from the window.) That meant that you were feeling well and in good spirits. You spoke cheerily to Julia on the block and even patted little Mary's head. Instead of setting your cane down in the rack with a thump, you let it fall gingerly into its place. I observe even now, as you are washing your hands, that there are four cigars cropping out of your vest pocket. Now look at your coat; there is chalk on the sleeve. And what is that on the back? The plain mark of four fingers and a thumb. Do you deny that it is the hand of that good-for-nothing Maj. Sportley's hand, or that he struck you a hearty blow on the back in the billiard room when the news that Ben Brush had won came in over the ticker?"

"Good Lawd!" said Mr. De Tompkins. "You're a wonder. But" (suddenly), "why do you think it was Ben Brush?"

"Ah, Freddie, dear," said Mrs. De Tompkins, sweetly, "when you leave your morning newspaper in your chair at the breakfast table, with the sporting page turned outside, you shouldn't make a hole with your toothpick through the name of the horse you fancy most. Now, Freddie, how much was it, and how much do I get?"

CONGRESS

The debate on the war revenue measure was begun in the Senate on Monday. In the House the conference report upon the bill authorizing the sending of food and arms to Cubans was adopted. A bill was passed providing for an increase in the force of the adjutant general's office. The House joint resolution appointing William J. Sewell of New Jersey, Martin T. McMahon of New York, John L. Mitchell of Wisconsin and William H. Bonsall of California members of the board of managers of the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers was called up and passed. The President's veto of a bill conferring upon the court of claims jurisdiction to retry the case of the representatives of Isaac P. Tice against the United States, brought in 1873 to recover $25,000, the alleged value of certain meters to measure the quality and strength of distilled spirits, was sustained. The Senate bill to establish an assay office at Seattle, Wash., was passed. The House also passed, with amendments, the House bill to ratify an agreement entered into in 1892 between United States Commissioners and the Comanche, Kiowa and Apache Indians to open for settlement the reservation of these Indians in Oklahoma.

Considerable progress was made by the Senate on Tuesday in considering the war revenue measure. A bill was reported from the Military Affairs Committee and passed providing that the pay and allowance of the volunteers enlisted in the United States army shall begin on the day of their enrollment at the State camp. The latter part of the day was devoted to eulogies upon the late Representative Seth L. Milliken of Maine. The House held a brief session. Two important bills affecting labor were passed, one limiting the labor of persons employed upon government works and in government service to eight hours daily, and the other providing for the equipment of a non-partisan labor commission to consider legislative problems affecting labor. Mr. Corliss (Mich.) called up the House bill to repeal the law providing that transmission of the electoral veto of the States to Washington shall be by messengers. The bill proposes transmission by mail and express. The bill was defeated. Senate bill providing an American registry for the ship Centennial, now at Seattle, was passed. The House passed a bill to authorize the appointment of a non-partisan commission to collate information and to recommend legislation to meet problems presented by labor, agriculture and capital.

Considerable progress was made in the Senate on Wednesday in the reading of the war revenue bill, which included, naturally, the consideration of the amendments proposed by the committee. Through the influence of Mr. Gorman (Dem., Md.) the imprisonment penalty was stricken out of some of the sections relating to violations of the stamp tax. After an extended debate, part of which occupied the secret legislative session, the conference report on the bill suspending certain parts of the existing law relating to the purchase of supplies by the war department was adopted. The bill permitting officers of the regular army to accept staff appointments in the volunteer army without losing their rank or place in the regular service was also passed. An urgent deficiency bill, carrying $8,437,032, mostly for pensions, was agreed on by the House Commitee on Appropriations, and immediately reported to the House, which passed it without debate. The bill carries $8,070,872 for payment of pensions and other items of small amounts, including expenses of United States courts and clerical force and printing for the war and navy departments.

While several important paragraphs in the war revenue measure were passed over on Thursday for future consideration, excellent progress was made by the Senate in the consideration of the bill. Two-thirds of the measure has been read, the committee amendments generally having been agreed to. The proposition to place a stamp tax upon proprietary articles and perfumeries now in stock aroused a lively discussion. It was regarded as retroactive legislation and as such was opposed by many Senators. After debate, confined to the proposition to send the labor arbitration bill to conference, in which many members participated, a roll call of the House upon agreeing to the Senate amendments, thereby affecting the bill's passage, was ordered, resulting in yeas 219, nays 4. After experiencing a brief political tilt, precipitated by a personal political explanation from Mr. Tongue (Rep., Ore.), the House adjourned until Monday.

Soon after the Senate convened on Friday Mr. Hale (Maine), chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, favorably reported from the committee the House joint resolution providing for the organization and enrollment of an auxiliary naval force which shall form an inner line of defense. An amendment by the Senate committee provides that the force shall not exceed 3,000 men. The resolution was passed. The Senate resumed consideration of the war revenue bill, and Mr. Daniel of Virginia spoke for two hours on the measure. He supported the bill, but opposed the bond feature and stamp tax, and said the corporations should bear a larger share of the taxation. Mr. McEnery (La.) proposed an amendment to the paragraph of the bill placing a tax upon all corporations not specifically designated, providing that the law should not apply to "limited liability commercial partnerships or corporations and companies or corporations of limited liability conducting planting or farming business or preparing for market products of the soil."

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

Daughters Should be Carefully Guided in Early Womanhood.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

The following letter from Miss Mamie F. Johnson, Centralia, Pa., shows what neglect will do, and tells how Mrs. Pinkham helped her:

"My health became so poor that I had to leave school. I was tired all the time, and had dreadful pains in my side and back. I was also troubled with irregularity of menses. I was very weak, and lost so much flesh that my friends became alarmed. My mother, who is a firm believer in your remedies from experience, thought perhaps they might benefit me, and wrote you for advice. I followed the advice you gave, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills as you directed, and am now as well as I ever was. I have gained flesh and have a good color. I am completely cured of irregularity."

PIMPLES

HAPPILY WEDDED.

Chas Hilnabl

Rev. F. C. Colvin and Mrs. Zorah Shaffer were married this forenoon at her residence on south Jackson-st. at 9:30, The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles L. Chalfant of Ashtabula, Ohio, who will be remembered by our people as the minister who assisted Mr. Colvin in a week's service at the church here about two years ago. The gentlemen are old friends and fellow students at College.

Soon after the ceremony the bride and groom, accompanied by Mr. Chalfant, took the south bound Jackson train for Ft. Wayne and from there they go to Winona, where they will remain two or three weeks attending the Presbyterian National Assembly which is in session there. After their return here we believe Mr. Colvin has a new pastorate in view though we are not informed as to the location. The COURIER joins their many other friends in hearty wishes for their future happiness.

The wedding was a very quiet one. There were present Dr. and Mrs. Hoffman and Miss Stella Tarney who live in the house; the bride's sister, Mrs. I. O Bachtel; her two nieces, the Misses Maud and Mamie Baird, and Mrs. Etta Ryan, a life long and intimate friend. Little Master Waldo was present also, but did not take the train, remaining with his uncle C. L. Baird on the old home farm east of town.

THE PARTICULARS.

In our article on A. J. Baxter's death yesterday we could only give the mere fact of his death.

It appears however, that he had not been feeling well for several days, and there were symptoms of heart trouble and some local rheumatism. He had two colts he wished to take to the pasture south of town, and had expected a man would come to help him and they would drive out there, leading the colts and so avoid walking so far. But the man did not come, and he then took the younger colt and led it. His son, Ott, seeing this got the other colt and followed him soon overtaking him. As they neared the pasture, Mr. Baxter remarked to Ott that it seemed like a pretty long road. But just before reaching the gate he began to appear in pain and turned toward the fence, Ott noticed this and went to him. As he reached his father, the latter pressed his hand on his breast and sank down. Ott tried to revive him but could not and started for help Just then a man and woman came along, and he left his father in their care and started for town. But Mr. Baxter was already breathing his last. People were soon there, when his body was carried to town and to his home.

A Flag of Warning.

Beware of the dry, tickling, hacking, morning cough, for it warns you that consumption lurks near. The famous Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it. "I had a very bad cough. One doctor pronounced it consumption. I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and was completely cured; the cough left me and has never come back. Simon Smasal, 375 31st Street, Chicago, Ills." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup costs but 25 cents. Ask for Bull's, take only Bull's.

Thursday's Daily.

The postal authorities locate Chickamauga Park in Tennessee, not in Georgia. It is in Madison county. But a letter sent to Chickamauga will reach the boys, no matter what state you name.

—A little child, a 2½-year old girl at Goshen fell from a second story window the other day. Some telephone wires broke the fall a little, but when she struck the sidewalk her skull was crushed. She may die.

Geo. W. Roof is now publishing a first-class novel, or early Pioneer romance in the Kendallville Sun. It is quite a meritorious story founded on supposed and real incidents of the early days of Northern Indiana.

—It is claimed it cost $10,000 to send a regiment from Indianapolis to Chickamauga. It would cost $25,000 to send one from here to San Francisco. That is why they are taking the western regimente only for the Manila re-enforcements.

—Sergeant Mort Hilkey, now at Chickmauga, is hereby informed, if he has not heard sooner, that there is a big 8-lb girl waiting for him to return after the conquest of Cuba. Dr. Sparling reports all well. The baby was born Tuesday.

—Our item to the effect that the stave department of the Greenler factory had shut down for want of timber is wrong. They were not running on Monday and on that our informant fell into the mistake. They have been running all right since.

Friday's Daily.

—J. S. Weaver our Jackson friend has been helping us out on the wood famine lately. It was just what we wanted.

—S. H. Nugen one of our Jackson friends is among our latest new subscribers to the WEEKLY. And still there is room on the roll of honor for new names.

—A man near Van Wert, Ohio was blown into fragment Thursday morn- by giant powder. He was handling a lot of the stuff for blasting and it is supposed got careless.

—C. C. Buss one of our farmer friends goes on the roll of honor for the COURIER this year. And still they come for they know the COURIER gives all the news and in full.

—Adam Heitz of New Era is the next lucky man to go on the WEEKLY COURIER list. He knows the COURIER gives the fullest and most complete county news, court reports, war news, etc. etc.

—Mrs. Andrew Smith died at her home in Fairfield yesterday afternoon. Her son J. W. Smith and his wife and daughter, Ida, went up there today and will probably remain till after the funeral which we presume will be about Sunday.

—Charles Bartels is doing a great deal of lawn mowing now. He has a knack of doing neat work and is becoming quite popular with lovers of neat lawns. He is in charge of the old cemetery south of Evergreen, which he has put in good shape. He has just completed a fine mound for flowers there.

—The Michigan City postmaster is in a quandary. There is a letter at the postoffice addressed to prettiest girl in town and the postoffice force are in trouble as to whom to deliver the missive. The single young men of the force each claim the letter should go to his girl, while each carrier claims the girl lives on his route, hence the letter remains undelivered until the girl herself calls to claim the letter.

—There are so far only two republican candidates for congress in this district. They are Dr. C. B. Stemen of Ft. Wayne and Hon. F. D. Merritt of Lagrange, Dr. Steman is an eminent physician and surgeon. Mr. Merritt has been a member of the legislature and proved quite an able man in that position. Of course neither could be elected. for the people are reserving their votes for their favorite, Hon. James M. Robinson.

—Leo Robbins is shipping a lot of nice piles from the Lake Shore yards now. They go to South Haven, Mich., near which a pile pier is being built out into the lake. Mr. Robbins delivered also, the big lot of piles seen at the Wabash yards, and is giving most of his attention to that now, while his wife attends to the farm. They are now on the old Houser farm south of town and as usual make a specialty of garden vegetables, fruit etc.

—Albion New Era:—Martin Winebrenner showed us on Friday a piece of hardtack which he secured thirty-three years ago just before he was mustered out of the service of the war of the rebellion. A day or two before this Bright Bortner showed us a piece which he brought from Indianapolis where it was being handed to the soldiers. The piece thirty-three years old was as bright and appeared as inviting as the one a few days old. The preserving qualities of hardtack are remarkable and its value in a long campaign cannot be over estimated.

—Phil Gibson writes the COURIER that he returned Monday from camp at Springfield, Ill., where had gone with the militia. He was in Troop A First Illinois Cavalry, and expected to go to the front with the rest. But he failed on examination on account of his eyes. They were worse than usual at the time of the examinaton as he had been going without his glasses in order to pass all right. He was disappointed that he could not stay with the company. However, when he got back to Chicago, he was re-instated in his job again and is now at work as usual for the Wagner Palace Car Co.

—The South Bend Times gives publication to the followin sentiment which if painfully true to every thinking mind: "There is altogether too much of the frivolous in the columns of many of our American newspapers, in connection with the Spanish war. To our mind there can be nothing frivolous about war, no matter how certain the final outcome may be for the United States. In the very nature of things there must be some losses. Every life lost on land or sea will find some household with grief and mourning; cause some loving heart to be bowed down with deep anguish. In time of war frivolous things should be cast aside. War is a stern reality. Speaking lightly of things connected therewith is decidedly in bad taste.

Saturday's Daily.

—John H. Kruse and Wm. Bush have thanks for favors today.

—J. E. Kester one of our Jackson friends, made us a business call today.

—The worst rain of the season came up suddenly this morning about nine o'clock. It was like a cloud burst and kept it up for nearly half an hour.

—W. W. Root, who moved here last fall, has returned to Angola and will probably make that point his home. He is a veteran and has made many friends while here.

—Dr. Baxter, his wife, child and Mrs. Baxter's mother went south this morning over the Wabash, for a two week's visit at their former home, at Corydon, in Harrison county. They will probably have a fine visit, we hope so at least. Corydon is one of the oldest communities in Indiana, that town being the first state capital.

—Mrs. O. P. Myers and Mrs. Sinclair the latter from Waterloo, came home last evening from their trip to Columbus, Ind., where they went Tuesday, to attend the state encampment of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. they being delegates for the latter order. They report a large attendance and a lovely time. There was a great deal of enthusiasm and fraternal feeling. The town was beautifully decorated with flags, bunting and patriotic emblems, and presented a lovely appearance. The people also made them welcome, as does always a Hoosier community on occasions like these.

HE TELLS US WHY

His Life Was Nearly Wrecked, Also How the Wreck Was Averted by

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

How often we hear the invalid say, "The first of my trouble was sleeplessness. I could not get the needed rest." The same cause will shatter health while the world lasts. As long as people will neglect nature and fail to satisfy the urgent call for sleep during health they must expect a rebellious nature to refuse to respond when the nervous system is weakened from any cause. When you feel debilitated, fretful, despondent, worried, or cannot secure the full eight hours sleep prescribed by nature, use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer at once. Build up your nervous system before it's too late. Geo. Halstead, clerk at Jefferson House, Toledo, tells in the following words what it did for him: "I consider Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer a remarkable medicine for nervous troubles; I will tell you why. While living in Lima I worked nights; my sleep during the day was not regular or restful. I became very nervous, irritable, and all run down The doctors failed to help me, so also did other medicine which I used. A friendly druggist told me of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. I tried it and it worked like a charm. I was able to secure restful sleep after the first dose. My appetite returned and I regained my lost flesh, and was very soon perfectly well. I have recommended it to a great many and results were equally beneficial."

The above list is copied from the Waterloo Press, and includes only such merchant and similar vessels we had captured up to within a week or so, and that only in this side of the continent. It does not include the several ships captured in and about the Phillippine Islands in the Pacific, nor the fleet of thirteen war ships all told, destroyed by Admiral Dewey. Altogether it shows well for the efficiency of our navy.

FROM CHICKAMAUGA.

Cook Ford has another letter from H. G. Wheelock of Co. K. now at Chickamauga Park. He speaks of the long and tiresome trip from Indianapo- to Chattanooga and then the march out to the Park. He says they were very tired when they got there and felt like resting. The first night they slept without tents but next day got everything in shape and are now very comfortable. He speaks of the discomforts of the many insects found in that climate, an annoyance that is just now causing complaints from all sides. Being one of the recruits, we understand he was not paid off at Indianapolis when the rest were. But quite a number of those who were paid were robbed on the trip south. He says, "George Jones deserted at Chattanooga after robbing Bill Brown." We do not know who Jones is, but he was probably one of the recruits that came from some place outside of Auburn. He says the Park where they are camped is a beautiful place, with plenty of shade.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

We see by another correspondent that the 157th is still the crack regiment. It reads:

As the first to reach camp, the 157th Indiana, Colonel Studebaker, is in better condition to live comfortably than the others. It is now down to a war footing. Strangers are not allowed in camp without permits, and rigid military regulations are enforced.

Colonel Studebaker, accompanied by his staff, rode over the park today to get the "lay of the land" and pay his respects to the commanders of the other Indiana regiments. Colonel Studebaker's men are drilled twice a day, and are counted among the best drilled men in camp.

Wednesday night was the first night in Camp Thomas, and quite a change from Camp Mount was noticed. Mosquito nets were found to be serviceable against the great quantity of gnats, spiders, and bugs of queer shapes and forms, new to Hoosier boys. A species of tree lizard has made many feel uncomfortable. It is from six to twelve inches long and a dark brown. Fortunately it is not poisonous. However there are so many that a person has to shake his shoes well in the morning as some of the boys have discovered. Chameleons are here also. Very few have been seen yet. Except for the insects, the boys enjoy life here much more than at Camp Mount Honesty and Virtue.

There is more honesty and virtue contained in a bottle of Salvation Oil, than in any other liniment known. "Mrs. A. Fiedler, 2864 Palethorp St., Philadelphia, Pa., confirms this truth: She found Salvation Oil to be an excellent remedy for rheumatism, stiff joints, bruises, etc., and thinks it should always be kept in the house." Don't listen to the dealer's arguments in favor of a substitute. Insist on getting Salvation Oil, it costs only 25 cts.

Bidding On Job Work.

The Dispatch yesterday mentioned the unfairness of asking printers to make bids on job work. We agree with them fully. It is unfair and unjust to ask printers to do this. We have concluded we will make no more bids under ordinary circumstances. It has been the custom here for some of the factories and nearly every society or organization of any kind, when they have work they want done, to submit it to all the printers in town and ask for bids. Then, the one who appears to be the lowest gets it. We repeat, this is unfair and unjust. It does not seem to be done except in case of printing. The proper way to do would be to decide as to amount, quality, style, etc., and then go to one of the printing offices and get it done, paying the regular price. Then the next time, they can go to another office for the work, and so on around, giving, as near as convenient, year in and year out, about the same amount of patronage to each. This will be more satisfactory all around. The printer will in no case make an exorbitant charge, but he will have a reasonable profit. And that is what he should have. There is not a society, organization, lodge, factory or other institution in Auburn, or that ever existed here, but every printer has given columns on columns of good words and encouragement, things that often prove of value. There was no occasion for these institutions to go about and see which would do this the cheapest. It was done without asking and without price. Now, let us have "reciprocity." Printers seldom or never submit propositions for bids for what they need. We recently had to have some repairs done on machinery. We got it done and have no thought of complaint as to the price. When a church gives an entertainment we do not go about to see whether some other church will give a supper for less than 15 cents We attend and pay what they ask. When, therefore, any work is given us to do, we will do it at regular rates, which are always reasonable, but will not bid for it.

FLAGS

A stranger dropping upon us from a far country would conclude that we were decked out for a week's national festivities and rejoicings, so gay is our land with many colored bunting. From north to south, from east to west, it flutters upon the spring winds, our own red, white and blue banner mostly, with the flags of other nations friendly to us intertwined here and there. Close together upon the same building in our large cities are seen at one side the British union jack draped with the United States flag, while on the other side the stars and stripes and the green flag of Erin with its harp of gold wave out through cloud and sunshine.

At the seat of the Canadian government, Ottawa, when recently the St. George's society held a banquet, one of the most notable decorations in their hall was the flags of Great Britain and the United States intertwined and the most honored guest of the occasion was the United States consul general at Ottawa, Colonel C. E. Turner. Even Irishmen, who have cause enough, heaven knows, for a grudge at Great Britain, are inclined to cease gibing her for the present, because she is friendly to the United States, which welcomes as our truest citizens the sons of Erin and makes them policemen to guard the peace of our large cities.

And ever in the midst of the sea of bunting that rolls over our land flashes in and out most notable of all the beautiful flag of free Cuba, with its five blue and white stripes and its own brilliant star upon the red ground, emblem of the glory and the suffering of the patriot island, its white purity of purpose, its blue steadfast fidelity to that purpose, its red the blood the patriots have shed to win their liberty.

For us of the United States, next to the glory of being the nation to make Cuba free, is the satisfaction of knowing that the flags of so many other countries are intertwined with ours in sincere friendship and good will at this moment It is the best evidence that we wish well to all peoples who love liberty.

THE SPANISH FLEET

(The Chicago Record.)

'T was a gnarly sailor man
Ya'toted across the breast
Who waddl'd toward a coil of rope,
And sat thereon to rest.

The beard he wore was grizzly gray,
His face was crimson red
He spat profusely at the tide
And scratched his ear and said:

Time was when I was just a kid,
First folterin' the sea,
An' yarns like these was told within
The fo'c'sle to me.

"They told me o' the spooky ship
Manned by a crew of ghosts
That rassled with the waves about
The Pattygony coasts,

"Likewise an' similar I heerd
Of spectrit craft that would Come bearin' down upon you in
Mido ean neighborhood,

"Come bearin' down upon you till
There wan't two foot to spare—
Then disappeared in half a wink
An' left you shakin' there,

"Ay, man an' boy for forty year
I've heered them tales of old;
I've set amongst my mates an' stared
At dreadful yarns they told,

"But stranger than the lot of them
Rolled up in one, an' tied,
Is these here statements that we hear
Right now on ev'ry side,

"Ten hundred times as odd as is
That Flyin' Dutchman case
Is this about the Span'sh fleet
Which we're a-givin' chase.

"They seen it up by Eastport, Maine,
One pleasant, quiet morn,
An' next day some one sighted it
A-roundin' of Cape Horn

"An' in between, a merchantman
Comes in an' swears he viewed
Them ships in longitude 16
An' so latitude

"But just as we have hunted it
An' when the place is found
A cable comes from Labrador;
'Spain's boats is here, aground,'

"Which makes us happy for an hour,
An' then from Martinique
We hear: "That Spanish squadron's here
An' has been fer a week.'

"One ocean captain says he seen
Them vessels out at sea,
Headed for Spain an' also fer
The coast of Carribbee,

"Yes, speakin' of the self-same hour,
Another says their smoke
Caught his attention as he was Ten mile off cape Saint Roque.

"They fly by night, then fly by day;
A million knots or so
In half a minute is the speed
At which them Spaniards go.

"From Delagoa Bay around
Up to the Bahain bight
Is just a little, easy jaunt
That takes up half a night,

"An judgin' by the last reports
About their movements I'm
A liar if them ships ain't been
Six places at one time,

"It beats the Flyin' Dutchman cold
It beats all ghosts an' such
The way them Spanish warboats chase
Around the world so much.

"Them stories that I used to hear
In old times, as I says,
Ain't nothin' to what's printed in
The papers nowadays.

"As I was sayin'——" Down the pier
A boy, with all his might Came crying: 'Extree! Extree, here!
De latest from de fight!"

The gnarly sal'or paid his price
And turned the printed sheet,
Wherein a "special cable gram"
Looked up, his eyes to greet,

"I learn there is no Spanish ships,
And never were," he read.
The sailor man spat at the tide.
"Well, I'll be d-a-r-n-e-d," he said.

Help for the Hair is what a great many men and women are looking for; help against approaching baldness; help against whitening locks; help to restore the lost gloss to the hair; help against fading tresses; help for the scalp attacked by dandruff. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR offers just such help. It restores gray or faded hair to its original color, gives it length, thickness and gloss, and removes dandruff.

"My hair was rough and broken and began to fall out. The use of but one bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR both checked the falling out and rendered my hair smooth, glossy and in splendid condition. It is the finest of dressings."—MRS. F. L. SMITH, Silver Creek, Miss.

"Some years ago my hair began to fall out and I became quite bald. By advice I tried and very soon my hair ceased to fall out and a new and vigorous growth made its appearance. My hair is now abundant and glossy."—THOS. DUNN, Rockville, Wis.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

THE 157TH.

Notes From The Boys at Chickamauga Park.

A big sham battle was gone through with at the camp lately in which the 157th took a prominent part. One man in a Pennsylvania regiment, was accidentally shot by an Ohio man. He may die.

The 157th is likely to get it new out fit at an early date.

Some regiments have been practicing the four mile march.

The boys evidently liked some parts of their food better than other parts. For instance, it seems that the fat bacon lasts longer than anything else, it being all there is now left in some companies, of the ten days rations given out when they left Indianapolis.

One of the Ligonier men has been operated on for appendicitis and will recover.

Wells went dry the other day, and there was prospect of a water famine but more wells are to be put down.

There was also a report that certain wells had been poisoned but this proved not so.

Between 300 and 500 men lined up Sunday and bared their arms for vaccination. Ten or twelve of the strongest men fainted when the lancet scraped their arms.

The barbers were at work in each of the Indiana regiments Friday clipping hair from the heads of the volunteers. The precaution is found to be very necessary.

Captain Allen of Frankfort, finds himself commanding a company on the very field where, as a private in the Tenth Indiana, he participated in the opening of the Chickamauga battle.

Water famine and heat made life miserable for Indiana soldiers Friday, and realizing the scantiness of supplies the Hoosiers are storing all the water they can get in buckets, canteens and tubs, before the forty or more thousand troops yet to come further tax the wells.

Next to having their heads shaved, the men are anxious to go swimming in the pools in the fork fed by springs. The 157th Indiana was so fascinated with the swimming pools that Col. Studebaker found it necessary to put on a double line of pickets, in order to keep his men in camp.

It was really heartrending when the 12th New York and a Massachusetts battalion came into camp Friday and stopped at an Indiana regiment well. They had marched two miles in the heat and dust and were fairly panting with thirst. They begged so pitifully that Col. Smith gave each man a pint.

There is not a bottle of whisky opened in Col. Smith's regiment or Capt. Curtis' artillery battery, for the boys generally recognize the danger of drinking the stuff in this climate, although beer in bottles is bought freely by the soldiers. A canteen has been established in Col. Studebaker's regiment, with some of the soldiers as proprietors, and Thursday it took in over $150 in the sale of beer and luxuries.

The entire 157th regiment joined in the chase of a wild rabbit which suddenly appeared on the regimental street and made as much uproar as if the enemy had been sighted. The rabbit in the meantime escaped. One of the boys in chasing it down was so fortunate as to unearth a skull. It had two bullet holes in it and was found near the creek. Many bullets and balls have been picked up.

Indiana's soldiers are undergoing a pretty rigorous training for service in a hot climate. The thermometer Saturday was up in the nineties and water is the scarcest article in camp. The salt meat that they eat keeps them thirsty all the time and they experienced great discomfort. There was enough at first, but the number of troops has doubled and will soon double again, so that the water problem is a very serious one. There is talk of piping water from Chickamauga creek and meanwhile the situation is becoming more and more trying.

The question of canteens is being discussed in all the regiments. Some have already opened them and say that the plan works well. The only Indiana regiment to has one, so far, is the 157th. Col. Gunder and Col. Smith are both opposed to canteens, but the sentiment of the officers is not unanimous. It is claimed by some that it could be a temperance as well as a sanitary measure to allow the sale of beer, only under certain restrictions, within the regimental lines.

HOLLERED TOO HARD,

Daring Mid-Air Performance of an Auburn Lady.

Between six and seven this morning just as people were fairly coming out on the streets there was a sudden tapping of the fire bell. A few strokes and it stopped. Then there was a wait of about a minute and the bell rang again. The fire engine rushed out into the street and everyone wanted to know where the fire was on such a still summer morning.

It turned out that the alarm was from the residence east of J. A. Clinton's near the west end of Ninth street Mrs Wolf who lives in the second story went to light her gasolene stove when from some cause it exploded. In her fright at such an accident, she ran to the window, threw up the sash, leaned out and screamed "Fire! fire!!" with such force that she toppled over out of the window and to the ground. It was a dangerous thing to do, but as she did not do it on purpose and was not much hurt everybody forgives her. She jumped up and helped to stop the fire which in fact was not allowed to start. And soon the scare was over. It is a question now whether the town should not provide wings for its second story citizens as well as other and more common fire protection. But Mrs. Wolf will probably for some time remember her hasty flight in mid-air, and feel grateful for its fortunate termination.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Thursday's Daily.

Still the same old song, "The Spanish fleet is at such and such a place." For several days it was claimed they were at Santiago, and at other points near there. Today, it is said they are near at Cienfuegos. We begin to think the Spaniards themselves are "lost" and "dont know where they are at."

Cuban insurgents getting bold and are swarming up close to Havana.

Believed now that by waiting a few days the Spanish fleet will be compelled to surrender.

It is rumored that Schley is now at Santiago and Sampson before Havana.

It is plain that a big forward movement on Cuba, may be made soon. It is better late than never.

Friday's Daily.

Evidently Cervera's Fleet is doomed.

The harbor of Santago is likely to prove a death trap rather than a refuge, and Schley may be ordered to attack the fleet before they have an opportunity to leave.

It is reported that Sampson will begin the bombardment of Havana at once.

It is said that forty Krupp guns for forts or battle ships were shipped from Essen, Germany to Cadiz and are now on their way through Spain. They passed the customs houses as "Kitchen Furniture."

The transportation of troops to Cuba will probably postponed until the Spanish fleet is located.

Secretary Long believes the Spanish Fleet is still at Santiago harbor while other officials think it has given us the slip.

At 2:15 a telegram direct from Washington, D. C. states that not a word concerning the fleets has been received today by the war officials.

Saturday's Daily.

Having failed by land and by sea, to locate the Spanish fleet, were are going to try a balloon. We feel sure we'll get him now.

Report of small pox in our fleet at Manila proved to be false.

Roosevelt's Cowboy regiment at San Antonio, Texas has been ordered to Tampa. They start tomorrow. It is believed they will not long remain at Tampa, but be sent over to Cuba where they will be useful as scouts.

Several more big steamers are being engaged to take more troops to Manila at an early date.

Blanco claims he saw thirty American cruisers near Carolina last evening. He probably saw double for some cause or other.

Blanco also sends word to Spain that Sampson's ships are blockaded and bottled up in one of the harbors of Cuba.

The cowboy battalion of South Dakota came east yesterday and passed through Chicago in the evening going across Indiana on the Monon. They were enlisted in the Black Hills. The train brought all their horses and equipments and contained 16 cars, 12 for the horses and 4 for the men. They were wildly cheered up every town, and did a proper amount of yelling themselves. They numbered 225.

Indiana soldiers are liable soon to get a sight of Cuba.

It is now claimed that the delay in regard to invading Cuba, is caused by a desire to save life. There surely ought to be some excuse.

IT IS STRANGE

Congressional Convention.

The republican congressional convention met at Fort Wayne today with delegates present from all the six counties of the district. Those from DeKalb and Steuben went down on the forenoon train. There were two candidates at first, but Mr. Merritt of Lagrange had declined. And so Dr. C. B. Stemen of Ft. Wayne was nominated without opposition.

Change Locations

The next issue of the Gazette will be from Hudson, Ind., as Mr. Weamer has concluded to discontinue the paper here and to locate at Hudson. He had expected at the time of his last issue to send out one more paper from Auburn, but now finds it more convenient to discontinue the Gazette at once, and the issue sent out this week will be the last. Hereafter it will be located at Hudson, and in a week or two, as soon as he can get to it, the first issue from that place will be given out. All the subscribers to the Auburn Gazette who have paid in advance will have their numbers fully made up by the issue from Hudson. He wishes this distinctly understood, that no one will lose a paper. While this move on the part of Mr. Weamer, comes as a surprise, we hope to see him flourish in his new field. We have only the best wishes for him and his family.

More Illegal Fishing

ANGOLA, IND., May 27, 1898.

Special to the Daily Courier.—

It is evident that illegal fishing in Steuben county must either be brought to a halt or the offenders brought to Justice, as the Justice's court yesterday witnessed the "pinching" of three more men who have been violating the state fish law. Deputy Fish Commissioner McGrew, went up north into Clear Lake township and arrested Simon and Wilson Smith and John Ackerman, for spearing on Clear Lake, and brought them before Squire Isreal Kemery at Angola, who assessed each $18.00. Still there are more to follow. Deputy McGrew is the best and most determined fish officer the county ever had, and the violators of the fish law are beginning to realize that he has a "bump on himself."

MORE TROOPS

The President's call for more men, as indicated in yesterday's COURIER, fixed the additional number at 75,000, making with the 125,000 already raised, a new army of 200,000 men. As we said, it is believed 25,000 will be needed at Manila, 25,000 more on Porto Rico, and the rest for Cuba and coast defense or reserve. Under this second call, Indiana will have to put in 2581 men. They will be taken from the people at large—anyone who wants to volunteer, and the militia or national guard, will have nothing to do with it. Certainly not in Indiana whose militia is all in the field now.

COL. HUBBELL.

O. Z. Hubbell a former Butler boy but for some twenty years a citizen of Goshen, is seeking military glory. He is raising a regiment and wants to be its colonel and probably will be. Several companies that have been enlisted and are now drilling have signified their readiness to join. The companies composing the regiment are: two from South Bend; two from Laporte; one each from Goshen, Elkhart, Dunlapa, Bristol, Plymouth, Rochester, Walkerton and North Liberty.

Schley's Squadron Guarding the Entrance to the Harbor.

Will be Given Orders to Dewey-ize Cervera's Fleet.

Plot to Blow Up the Oregon by Spanish Sympathizers.

Fifty Drowned by a Collision of the Steamers Mecca and Lindula.

Situation Confirmed.

Key West (Fla.) special: Definite news of the American squadrons operating in Cuban waters was received here Friday evening, confirming the situation previously outlined. Commodore Schley is off Santiago de Cuba and definite information as to the exact situation, as it affects Admiral Cervera's squadron is expected soon. Rear Admiral Sampson is in a position to proceed quicky to the assistance of Schley with any or all of his ships on receipt of definite word from Commodore Schley, at the same time he reaches within striking distance of Havana. If Commodore Schley reports Admiral Cervera bottled up at Santiago de Cuba, he will be permitted to finish the business at that point with the ships now under his direct command.

Cubans at the Gates of Havana.

A courier direct from Brig. Gen. Rafeal de Cardenas, commander of the insurgent forces in Havana Province, has arrived at Key West, Fla. He reports there is no difficulty in maintaining communication between the coast and the interior. Gen. Cardenas has been enrolling men at the rate of twenty per day, most of them coming from Havana city. The insurgent forces in that Province now number 3,000, and are better mounted and armed than ever before. They move almost to the outskirts of the city. According to the courier, the Spaniards have massed their troops in cities and on the coast, abandoning offensive operations against the Cubans.

Further Details of the Loss of the Steamer Mecca.

Calcutta special: Further particulars regarding the disastrous collision between the British India Steam Navigation Company's steamer Mecca and her sister ship, the Lindula, show that the former had 800 persons on board. Her passengers were mostly Asiatics. The Mecca was towing the Lindula which was disabled, when the hawser parted and the two steamers crashed together. The Mecca sank and her captain and fifty-two others were drowned. The Lindula brought the survivors to this port.

Plot to Blow Up the Oregon.

Key West special: It has developed that attempts were made by Spanish sympathizers to blow up the Oregon at Rio Janeiro while coaling there. Thirty dynamite bombs were found in the fuel by Brazilian guards and members of the Oregon crew. It was only by a miracle that the ship was saved from an explosion.

The Oregon is in the harbor here.

A Coal Boat Purchased.

San Francisco special: The Government has purchased the collier Peter Jobson, now at the Howard street bunkers. The Jobson is loaded with several thousand tons of coal, which will not be removed from her hold. A couple of companies of troops can be quartered on the collier, which is expected to be assigned to the duty of towing the Monterey to Manila.

Spain Anxious for Peace.

BOTTLED UP IN THE BAY

Spanish Armada Is Entrapped at Santiago de Cuba.

SCHLEY BLOCKS DONS' WAY.

Admiral Cervera Will Now Be Forced to Surrender or Fight.

Our Squadron Is Guarding the Entrance to the Trap at Santiago de Cuba and Spain's Ships May Never Leave That Harbor—Madrid Has Official Advices of Cervera's Predicament—Town Is Short of Provisions and Could Soon Be Starved Into Subjugation.

Washington special:

The Navy Department has official and positive information that the Spanish fleet is at Santiago de Cuba, and that the American warships are on guard to prevent its escape. A cipher dispatch from Commodore Schley was received at the Navy Department stating that he is off Santiago, guarding the harbor entrance, to prevent the escape of the Cape Verde fleet. In his message Commodore Schley gave the source of the information that came from him about Cervera's presence in Santiago bay, but it is understood that the Spanish ships are not visible from Commodore Schley's position on account of the hills that surround the bay. A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Madrid says that official dispatches from Cuba confirm the reports that the Americans are blockading Admiral Cervera at Santiago.

COMMODORE W. S. SCHLEY.

This places Admiral Cervera and his ships in prison and incommunicado, according to Spanish regulations. They are as securely imprisoned as any insurgent in Morro Castle. The Spanish admiral has played himself a Spanish trick and has bottled himself up in a harbor where he could not go out and make an even fight if he wanted to. A much inferior force could prevent the Spanish fleet leaving the harbor because of the narrow inlet which permits only one vessel to pass at a time. He would have to take his fleet out in single file and be able to use only his forward guns, while the ships waiting outside could pour broadsides into him as he made the run.

Sampson and Schley have the Spaniards imprisoned and can keep them there until they surrender. The naval authorities say that with the Spanish fleet at Santiago de Cuba, it ceases to be a factor in the war. It is imprisoned and cannot be released. Should Spain send another fleet to Cervera's relief, Sampson can station his monitors in front of the inlet to destroy Cervera's fleet as it comes out, and take the fighting ships to meet the coming fleet. The only question with naval officers is as to how long it will take to starve out the Spaniards. It is not believed that Santiago has enough food to support the people and the Spanish troops and the Spanish navy for more than two or three months.

TO FORCE SPAIN TO SUBMIT.

Powers Said to Be Resolved to Enter the War Soon.

A dispatch from Madrid says that Senor Castillo's reason for not joining the ministry is that Senor Sagasta is determined to carry on a vigorous war, while Senor Castillo is aware that Spain's friends in Europe, especially France, are resolved to insist upon her suing for peace at the first favorable moment. It is hoped that Spain will be able to retain the Philippine Islands, which will be utilized in making political combinations later on. The dispatch adds that the time is very near when Spain will be asked to propose pourparlers for peace.

SANTIAGO HARBOR.

CAPTAIN IS SHOT.

Fate of the Spaniard Who Failed to Fire at Dewey.

News has reached Madrid of the execution at Manila of the captain of the Spanish revenue cutter Callao. He was shot on the order of Captain General Augusti. The Callao arrived at Manila a few days after Dewey's great victory, and was at once surrendered. The vessel had been away from communication with its home Government for thirteen months, and ran into the bay of Manila, unaware that war between Spain and the United States had been declared. Having fallen into a hopeless net, surrounded by the American war vessels, after being fired upon and without the slightest chance of escape, the captain of the Callao surrendered. For not returning the fire of the United States ships the captain was executed.

Demonstrated His Courage.

When William Mitchell of Birmingham, Ala., bragged that he could whip a carload of Spaniards, somebody in the crowd laughed at him. Mitchell pulled out his revolver. The coroner had charge of the two corpses that were picked up in the street a few minutes later. Mitchell escaped.

COMMODORE SCHLEY'S FLYING SQUADRON.

DRILL LIKE REGULARS.

Volunteers at Camp Thomas Make an Excellent Showing.

The event of Monday at Chickamauga Park was the review of the First division of the First army corps by Maj. Gen. Breckinridge, inspector general of the United States army. It was a splendid spectacle, grand in proportions and sublime in suggestion. The long line of men in double rank extended from the north end of Kelly field straight as a die across the field, through the grove, out into the Brotherton field, across that field, over into the hills and valleys and well into the grove beyond. And this was only two of the three brigades. The third brigade was formed back of the first in Kelly field. These long lines, aggregating more than a mile in double-rank formation with distances reduced, was nothing short of an effective army. The men had the bearing and set-up of professional soldiers. They were fully armed and equipped. Their alignment was perfect and every movement like clockwork. This division consists of the first regiments sent out by the various States represented in it and these regiments are consequently will equipped. Their showing on the review surprised the veteran army officers on the field. From the moment the regiments began to assemble, pouring out of the groves and camps from every direction and in every formation, until they broke from the column after passing the reviewing stand every movement was made with a dash and snap truly inspiring.

After the review Gen. Breckinridge said: "I was surprised at the showing made by the troops. The review was superb. Some of the regiments made an appearance that would have done credit to any soldiers in any army in the world." Maj. Gen. Wilson was equally enthusiastic. "It is a splendid division," said he, "and the men moved off like soldiers. I was impressed with the size and quality of the men. They are better men and in much better condition as regards drill, equipment and discipline than the soldiers of 1861." "The men did splendid work," declared Brig. Gen. Burt. "I have been in the army for thirty-seven years and was all through the civil war, and I want to say I never saw better soldiers."

WAR BULLETINS.

There are believed to be only 13,000 Spanish troops in Porto Rico.

Spaniards in the Canary Islands live in dread of bombardment by the American fleet.

The wonderful submarine torpedo boat Holland has been bought by the Government.

The war has caused an immense decrease in first and second-class ocean travel.

A dispatch from London says Queen Victoria favors an alliance with the United States.

Havana advices by way of Jamaica say that the Spanish troops in Cuba are disheartened, and openly express a wish that American victories will cause Spain to abandon Cuba, and allow them to return home.

Marine insurance companies are greatly agitated over Spain's new threat of privateering.

France is worrying over the possibility of an alliance between Great Britain and the United States.

All our revenue cutters have been under fire in Cuban waters and have proved their great usefulness.

Several of the cannon captured at Manila will be sent to Annapolis Academy to be added to the trophies.

A high fence has been erected around the Carpenter steel works at Reading, Pa., as a further protection from spies.

The Philippine insurgent chief Aguinaldo has issued a proclamation to his followers at Manila to obey the orders of Admiral Dewey.

To maintain an army of 200,000 men for six months will cost $30,000,000, according to estimates prepared by Paymaster General Stanton.

Our troops in Florida are hampered by lack of water and how to supply the transports that will convey them to Cuba is a serious problem.

The American cable companies in London have issued instructions to their agents to refuse to transmit any Spanish Government messages.

Tampa is 250 miles from Havana. The transports can land troops near the latter city in twenty-four hours after sailing from the former rendezvous.

A United States cruiser is said to have had a narrow escape from destruction in Hampton Roads by a floating mine cut adrift at night by Spanish spies.

James G. Longstreet, son of Gen. James A. Longstreet, has been commissioned as second lieutenant in a battery of light artillery at Atlanta, Ga.

A cargo of 4,000 tons of coal reached Manila on the British ship Honolulu from New South Wales, and was seized by Dewey for the use of his squadron.

The pompous Spanish prisoners of war at Atlanta, one of whom is Weyler's brother-in-law, are indignant because negro orderlies are acting as their guards.

GENERAL VIEW OF SANTIAGO DE CUBA.

The regiments participating in the review were the First Ohio, Fifth Illinois, Third Wisconsin, Third Illinois, Fourth Ohio, Fourth Pennsylvania, Sixteenth Pennsylvania, 157th Indiana and Second Wisconsin.

COULDN'T BLUFF DEWEY.

Plucky Admiral Refuses to Allow Germans to Enter Manila.

A special dispatch from Manila says that the German consul there tried to land provisions from a German ship, but that Admiral Dewey refused to permit it. The consul then declared, according to the dispatch, that he would force the landing under the protection of two German cruisers, but Admiral Dewey threatened to fire upon the cruisers, and the attempt to land the supplies was abandoned. Another dispatch asserts that Admiral Montejo, commander of the Spanish squadron destroyed by Admiral Dewey, is to be court-martialed on the charge of cowardice.

The Navy Department received a cablegram from Admiral Dewey, which says that the situation remains unchanged, and that the strict blockade continues. There is great scarcity of provisions in Manila. Foreign subjects fear an outbreak of the Spanish soldiers.

Hawaii to Be Used as Base.

The Hawaiian Islands will probably be used as a base by the expedition to the Philippines. Owing to the lack of transports, the ships which started the other day will be forced to return for another installment of troops. There are not sufficient vessels fitted for carrying men across the Pacific, but many coasting ships can be impressed to land soldiers at Honolulu and from that point they can be taken to Manila on the City of Peking, City of Sydney and City of Australia.

The Auxiliary Fleet.

Since the outbreak of war with Spain the Government has acquired ninety-nine vessels for the auxiliary fleet and these are exclusive of over thirty transports which have been only chartered. In this auxiliary fleet there are fifteen cruisers, thirteen in commission; seventeen vessels belonging to what is called the mosquito fleet, and sixteen revenue cutters, now with the Cuban blockading fleet. There are beside numerous tugs and colliers.

Why the Agent Surrendered.

The agent of the Central Pacific Railroad at Ogden, Utah, demanded $50 above the contract price for transporting a carload of horses from that city to San Francisco for the Minnesota troops, Maj. Diggles refused to pay and ordered two of his soldiers, who are experienced railroad men, to seize the train and "kill any man who attempts to interfere." The agent surrendered.

War Cry Baked in Their Bread.

Capt. Duval of the United States commissary department at St. Louis has made a contract with local bakeries for 610,000 pounds of army crackers. This is equivalent to 3,000 barrels of flour. On each will be stamped the words, "Remember the Maine."

QUOTAS OF THE STATES.

Number of Men Each Should Offer Toward Making Up the 75,000.

The following gives an approximate estimate of the State quotas necessary to make up the 75,000 troops called for in McKinley's second proclamation:

Alabama	1,500	New Hampshire	451
Arkansas	1,230	New Jersey	1,778
California	1,933	New York	7,507
Colorado	704	North Carolina	1,545
Connecticut	965	North Dakota	276
Delaware	210	Ohio	4,349
Florida	450	Oregon	377
Georgia	1,905	Pennsylvania	6,458
Idaho	139	Rhode Island	426
Illinois	4,829	South Dakota	1,110
Indiana	2,581	South Carolina	448
Iowa	2,264	Tennessee	1,036
Kansas	1,668	Texas	1,454
Kentucky	2,045	Utah	255
Louisiana	1,164	Vermont	397
Maine	759	Virginia	1,673
Maryland	1,166	Washington	704
Massachusetts	2,832	West Virginia	833
Michigan	2,622	Wisconsin	1,905
Minnesota	1,723	Wyoming	138
Mississippi	1,295	Arizona	109
Missouri	3,246	District of Columbia	198
Montana	314
Nebraska	1,446	New Mexico	269
Nevada	142	Oklahoma	86

The organization and division of this extensive force is yet to be arranged by the Adjutant General's office. Generally speaking, however, the 75,000 men will suffice for the formation of seventy-five regiments. With three regiments to a brigade, which is the present basis of organization, this will make twenty-five brigades. In turn, eight divisions of three brigades each will be formed, and out of the eight divisions the entire force will be divided into three army corps. This general division, of course, is tentative, but it shows the general formation of this large body of volunteers.

Fine Body of Men.

A correspondent writes from Tampa: "The American soldier of to-day is incomparably better than his predecessor. Conditions of enlistment are more severe. He is more generously treated. His rations are improved and he has facilities and privileges formerly unknown. He is offered incentives to manliness and self-respect. How far these have been successful is indicated by the statement that among all the troops in this place I have not observed a single case of drunkenness or disorder of any description."

Sixty Killed at Cartagena.

Advices from Cartagena, Spain, say the explosion at Castle San Julian caused a panic in the city. Arms and legs were picked up at a great distance from the scene of the explosion. The castle contained thirty-eight privates belonging to the artillery and infantry and 123 workmen, not one of whom escaped uninjured. The dead numbered sixty-two, including the governor of the port.

Soldier Killed in Collision.

A special train on the Florida Central and Peninsula Railway, carrying North Carolina troops, collided with a freight train. Private William Barbee was killed, and Private J. M. Colclough was fatally injured.

"WILLIAM R. DAY,
"Secretary of State."

It is confidently predicted in Washington that this second call for volunteers denotes an early and concerted move upon Cuba and Porto Rico. With this understanding of it the proclamation of May 25 will be as welcome to the American people as was that of April 23 calling out the first 125,000 volunteers, and will be responded to as heartily and as promptly. In answer to the first call the quotas are practically all filled except those of a few Southern States. When the full number of men allowable under these two proclamations has been enlisted, and when the regular army has been recruited to the limit permitted under its present organization, the United States will have under arms, including regulars and volunteers, a total of nearly 280,000 men. With such an army to supplement our gallant navy we ought to be able to take anything short of Madrid itself.

Like the men called out under the former proclamation, these new volunteers are to be enlisted for two years, unless sooner discharged. But unlike the others these will not be drawn exclusively from the State militia organizations. The enlistments will be open to all men of proper age and physical abilities, irrespective of whether they have had previous military training or not. This will give a much desired opportunity to many private organizations of a military nature to see active service, and it will also give a similar chance to thousands of patriotic individuals who have belonged to no organization at all. Reports from various States indicate that the call will meet with hearty response. Independent companies are already organized in many of the States, and these will be offered to the service of the country.

Not to Learn War Secrets.

President McKinley has established a "censorship" over the cabinet. Hereafter only Secretary Long of the Navy Department and Secretary Alger of the War Department are to possess the war secrets. The other members of the cabinet are to know only such war news as the President and his war aids may think advisable to tell them.

Soldiers Get Free Postage.

The introduction in Congress, and its reference to the Postoffice Department, of a bill to extend the privilege of franking letters to soldiers, brought to light a forgotten statute allowing them to transmit their correspondence through the mails without affixing the customary stamps, the postage to be collected on delivery.

Frenchmen Offer Spain Cash.

The railway companies, backed by French bankers, have offered to advance the Spanish Government 250,000,000 francs in gold if their concessions are prolonged. Senor Gamaso, minister of public works, is opposed to granting any prolongation of the concession.

STARTS FOR MANILA.

CRUISER CHARLESTON OFF TO JOIN DEWEY.

Expedition Leaves San Francisco to Support Admiral Dewey in the Philippine Islands—7,000 Troops on the Way—Monitor Monterey Is Delayed.

Go to Dewey's Aid.

The cruiser Charleston is well on her way to Manila. She will call at Honolulu for coal and then proceed direct to the Philippines, and in less than thirty days at the outside she ought to report to Admiral Dewey. Though the monitor Monterey has been ordered to Manila, it will be several weeks, probably, before she can get away from San Francisco. Her executive officer, Lieut. Carlin, said the ship must wait for certain kinds of ammunition desired by Dewey.

Fully 7,000 troops will soon be started for Manila. Those who did not go on the three steamers will go later on the China, Centennial, Colon and Zealandia. Three steamers—the Pekin, Australia and City of Sydney—started together. A fleet of transports will be met at Honolulu by the Bennington and thence convoyed to Manila.

CRUISER CHARLESTON.

Every steam vessel in the harbor blew au revoir to Capt. Glass and his crew as the Charleston steamed out of the Golden Gate. None of the forts in the harbor saluted the vessel, but the demonstration made by the 6,000 soldiers gathered at the Presidio was tremendous. When the vessel was sighted coming down the bay the soldiers gathered on the beach and cheer upon cheer rang out from the men who were to soon follow the Charleston to the scene of Admiral Dewey's triumph.

It was expected that the trip would occupy about twenty days. This allows for a somewhat lower rate of speed than is usually made by steamers like the Pekin, Sydney and Australia, the authorities recognizing the necessity of economizing the coal supplies when carrying heavy cargoes.

The War Department is still negotiating for other steamers to be used for transport purposes between San Francisco and Manila. The Government at present has the services of five ships. It is believed, and, in case Congress shall decide to give American register to vessels of the Northern Pacific Steamship Company, the whole fleet of that company will be placed at the disposal of the Government on reasonable terms.

HAVANA IN DIRE NEED.

Letters Via Mexico Say the Situation Is Desperate.

Leters from Havana by way of Mexico say that the situation is desperate there, and that the people are beginning to eat horse meat, the few cattle in stock having been seized by the army. The insurgent bands are controlling the interior, and have taken possession of some towns, while Spaniards in large numbers control the northern coast. A strong Spanish military line has been placed along the railway between Havana and Batabano.

On account of the great scarcity of coal, Gen. Blanco issued an order stopping the gas works and all manufactures in which coal is needed; and the coal has been stored by the Government for its use. Gen. Blanco says the dearth of provisions will be soon relieved. At a council recently he said: "Be confident, and let the people be confident, that Spain is not going to abandon us." Gen. Arolas, military commander of Havana, is better prepared to repel an attack than is generally believed. The rabid Spaniards are making strenuous efforts to win over the Cubans. In a manifesto addressed to the Spaniards born on the peninsula or in Cuba they say: "Let us forgive the small differences of the past, and unite like one man against the common enemy."

REFUSE TO TRANSPORT TROOPS.

Steamship Companies Attempt to Fleece Uncle Sam.

The delay in sending troops to the Philippines was explained by an official of the War Department. The Government has been unable to secure the necessary transports at what was considered a reasonable figure and will therefore proceed to impress the vessels necessary to carry the troops which have been ordered to Manila. The Government had offered a sum which was considered satisfactory for the transportation of the men, and since this has been refused, it will proceed to put the soldiers on board the ships and compel the owners to carry them. The official said that this was the only cause of the embarrassment. The Government did its best to reach an amicable agreement with the steamship companies, but failed. It then decided to settle the matter by appointing a commission to determine a reasonable compensation and the steamers will be compelled to transport men at that figure.

FORTIFICATIONS AT SANTIAGO.

THE OLD HYMN.

I sat within a vacant room,
A low celled room, quaint-shaped, oak-beamed,
With the windows looking off to sea,
O'er which the sunset's glory streamed
I watched the far-off flitting sails,
And "Half-way Rock" that looming rose
A tower from the heaving sea
Whereon the scattered isles repose.

And some one near me gently played
A dear old hymn that stirred my heart;
'Twas "Children of the Heavenly King,"
And what it woke made quick tears start.
The long years seemed to backward turn,
And I a little child again,
Held fast within his strong arms' clasp,
While soft he crooned the old refrain.

Oh! just once more to be that child,
And know again the blissful rest,
The old hymn brought me, rocked to sleep
With pillowed head upon his breast!
But only yet a little while,
Though earth may call it years that creep,
I know he'll come to me again,
And rock me to eternal sleep.

ON THE SILVER CLIFF TRAIL.

Hotel accommodations are very meagre at Milton, and I was obliged to share my room with a stranger. He was a tall, strongly-built man, with a weather-beaten face and grizzled hair. It needed but a glance to know that he was one who could both give and take hard knocks. There was nothing repulsive about him, however. On the contrary, he seemed to be honest, good natured, and a thorough gentleman in the best sense of the word. Entering into conversation with him, I learned that he was from the West and had traveled extensively through all parts of the United States, especially the wilder parts. We soon became fast friends, as men sometimes will upon very short acquaintance.

We had both traveled far that day and were not inclined to sit up very long, so about 10 o'clock we retired to our room and went to bed. I fell asleep almost as soon as my head touched the pillow. How long I slept I do not know, but I was awakened by sounds of distress from my roommate's bed. As I awoke I heard him cry as if in great fear: "Don't kill me, I am innocent. For God's sake let me go." This was followed by a choking sound that made my blood run cold. Jumping out of bed I turned on the light, and looked toward his side of the room, fully expecting to see my friend struggling with a burglar. To my surprise there was no one in the room except we two. Stepping hastily to the side of the bed I found him clutching his own throat and writhing in agony, at the same time uttering the cries I heard. His face bore a look of mortal terror, such as I hope never to see again. Realizing that he was suffering from some horrible nightmare, I tried to wake him up. By calling him repeatedly and shaking him I finally succeeded. He started up and gazed about him with a wild, frightened look, as though he did not know where he was. Gradually he came to his senses, but he was trembling like a leaf. He began to put on his clothes, explaining that he did not dare go to sleep again, but was going out for a walk.

"If you don't mind, I'll go with you," said I, "for, to tell the truth, I don't believe I could sleep either."

"I'm sorry I've spoiled your night's rest," he replied, "but if you really wish to go out with me, I shall be glad to have you."

We lighted our cigars and strolled out into the night. After walking some distance in silence, my friend said: "It is strange that that dream should come back to me now. It hasn't troubled me for years. There was a time when it haunted me so often that I had to be watched constantly while I slept. As soon as I showed any signs of agitation, the watchers would awaken me. If they had not, my mind would undoubtedly have given way under the strain. There is a story connected with that dream. Do you care to hear it?"

Of course I was very much interested and begged him to go on.

"The dream I had tonight," he continued, "is merely the recollection of a terrible experience I once had. I was very young at the time—scarcely eighteen. I was without any near relative and dependent entirely upon my own resources. You remember the time when gold was discovered in Colorado, how people flocked there from all parts of country to make their fortunes. Well, I caught the fever, too, and taking what little money I had saved up, I went to Denver. There I remained some time mingling with miners and learning from them all I could about the gold mines. From several sources I heard that gold had been discovered in paying quantities at Silver Cliff, and I decided to go there, stopping on the way at Pueblo to buy a horse and other necessary parts of a miner's outfit.

"The evening before I left Denver I was sitting in the lobby of my hotel, when an old gentleman sat down beside me and entered into conversation. He was a very pleasant companion, and I took to him immediately, telling him my plans and all about myself. When he learned that I had just come from the East and knew nothing about gold mining, he advised me to return. But I was young and hopeful, and, moreover, yearning for adventures of the sort depicted in the cheap novels I had read, so his advice was thrown away. Finding that I was not to be dissuaded from my plans, he good-naturedly gave me a great deal of valuable information and told me some very interesting stories of his own personal experience.

"The next morning found me on my way to Pueblo. Arriving there, I went to a hotel and began making inquiries as to the best way of reaching Silver Cliff. The landlord was very obliging. He assisted me in selecting a horse, told me what I would need on my journey, and promised to let me know when he heard of any one who was going to the same place. On the third day of my stay he introduced me to a man who intended to start for Silver Cliff the next morning, and was willing to take me with him. This man, who called himself Bill Warren, was an evil-looking fellow, but rather than wait longer I decided to accept him as a traveling companion.

"Before daylight the next morning the start was made. We had only one horse each, and these were obliged to serve as saddle horses and pack horses at the same time. This made our progress rather slow. We had ridden some ten or twelve miles, when I thought I heard hoofbeats behind us. Turning in my saddle I saw a number of horsemen following us at full speed. As they rode they shouted something that sounded like "halt!" I was about to ask my companion what it all meant, when I saw him suddenly cut the strap which secured his pack, letting it fall to the ground. Then, putting spurs to his horse he left me far behind."

"A moment later they galloped past me, all except the last two, who reigned in their horses, one on each side of me. After I had been relieved of my weapons I was allowed to let my hands fall to my side. Glancing at my captors I found them rough, determined looking men, armed to the teeth and evidently ready to shoot at a second's notice. They paid very little attention to me but seemed to watch with great interest the pursuit of my companion.

"All this time I had not the slightest idea what the trouble was, and I dared not ask the men who were guarding me. I supposed that they intended to rob us, but could not understand why they did not do so immediately.

"While these thoughts were passing through my mind the band of pursuers was rapidly overtaking Warren. At last the foremost one swung his lasso round his head and let fly at the fugitive, catching him around the shoulders and unhorsing him with a jerk that seemed enough to break every bone in his body. Two other men then dismounted, bound the captive's arms and dragged him to the nearest tree. Placing a noose around his neck, they threw the other end of the rope over a limb, pulled until the victim swung clear of the ground and left him dangling there. He must have been killed, or at least stunned, by his fall from the horse, for he hung perfectly motionless. There was a horrible fascination in the awful sight, and I could not take my eyes from the swaying form until I was aroused by the voice of man on my right. "That's right, sonny,' he said, 'take a good look at it. It's the last hanging you'll ever see.'"

I shuddered at these ominous words, but mustered up courage enough to ask what my companion had done to deserve such a terrible fate.

"'Oh! don't try to play innocent!' was the reply, 'you are both in the same boat.'

"Before I could protest my innocence the rest of the horsemen rode up. 'Your turn next,' said the leader, grimly. 'If you've any praayers to say, say 'em damned quick!'

"Speechless with fright, I was dragged from my horse and led to a tree near by. As in a dream I felt the noose placed around my neck and saw the end of the lariat thrown over a limb. A dozen hands grasped it and waited for a signal from their leader. Then, at last I found my tongue. 'For God's sage, gentlemen,' I implored, 'tell me why I am to be murdered. I swear I have done nothing wrong.'

"'Don't waste your breath, you blamed horsethief,' jeered one of the crowd. 'You'll need all you've got before we get through with you."

"'I'm no horsethief,' I cried, 'I swear to God I bought that horse in Pueblo.'

"'He's a liar,' yelled a desperate-looking ruffian. 'Ef he ain't a hosthief what's he doing in the company of that low-lived skunk over there?' and he pointed to where the corpse of Bill Warren swung to and fro like a ghostly pendulum.

"Cries of 'String him up!' String him up!' resounded from all sides, but the leader restrained his impatient followers. 'Give him a chance to say what he wants to,' said he, 'it's the last chance he'll have, unless he proves his innocence.'

"Encouraged by these words, I explained as well as I could who I was, and where I was going, and how I had met Bill Warren only the night before, and supposed him to be a gold hunter like myself.

"The leader seemed to be impressed by my words and manner, but the others clamored for my death. One big, burly fellow apparently voiced the sentiments of the crowd, saying, 'Hang the onery cuss. He's only a kid and new at the business, but if we let him go he'll be worse than his pal some day.'

"I felt the rope tighten around my neck. My last hour was surely at hand. I cast one despairing look about me. Some distance away a horseman was approaching. His face looked familiar. 'Hold on!' I gasped. 'I think I know that man.' Before I could say more the noose tightened and I was lifted from the ground. Again the leader interfered, and I was lowered to the earth, much against the will of the majority of the mob.

"When I had recovered sufficiently to look around the man on horseback was close at hand, and I recognized the old man I had met at the hotel in Denver. My captors evidently knew him, 'Hey, Joe!' they called. 'This young feller says he knows you. Does he belong to your Sunday school class?'

"A roar of laughter greeted this sally.

"The old man rode up and looked me over from head to foot. 'Seems to me I've seen him afore,' he said at last, 'but I don't recollect when ner where.'

"'Don't you remember?' I groaned. 'I met you in Denver, at the hotel, last Wednesday evening, and had a long talk with you. You advised me to go back East, and I didn't have sense enough to take your advice.'

"'That's right,' assented the old man; 'I did meet this young feller, ez he says. I guess he's all right boys.'

"But the boys were not to be appeased so easily. 'That don't prove nuthin', objected the man who had voiced the general sentiment before. 'You only met him that once. He might be a hoss thief fer all o' that.'

"Once more the bloodthirsty crew demanded my life, but the old man interceded for me and insisted that I be taken to Pueblo and given a chance to prove my innocence. His words seemed to carry a deal of weight, for, though there was no end of grumbling, I was immediately unbound, and placed upon my horse. The ride back to town was without incident, except that several of the crowd expressed a desire to shoot me, in order to save the county the expense of a trial. They went no further than to threaten, however, and I reached Pueblo with a whole skin. When we arrived at the hotel the proprietor was called out and commanded to tell what he knew about me.

"'I don't know nuthin' about him,' he began, and my heart sank within me, but my spirit rose when he continued, "ceptin' that he put up here fer a few days. Said he wuz goin' to Silver Cliff. I helped him buy his outfit and that hoss he's ridin'.'

"'Who was with him when he came here?' was the next question.

"'Nobody. But he went away with a feller that said he wuz goin' to Silver Cliff, too. Where's he at?'

"'Oh! he's ornamenting a tree out yonder. Ef it hadn't been fer the intervention of Providence in the shape of Ole Joe Mack, this young feller might be keeping him company. Ez it is, he seems to be straight enough, and I reckon we'd better let him go. He ought to more keerful in the choice of his pals thought.' That cuss that wuz with him wuz the wust hoss thief in the State.'

"I remember no more after that. I was told afterward that I fell off my horse in a dead faint and was carried into the hotel, where I lay in a raging fever for over a month. I was delirious the whole time, and they had to tie my hands to keep me from tearing all the skin from my throat, grasping at an imaginary rope."

PHILADELPHIA'S DEFENSES.

A Vessel Attacking the Quaker City Would Have a Hard Time of It.

Should an attempt be made to reach this city, a battle ship would first have the dangers of the irregular channel to brave. Sucessfully accomplishing the passage up the river, floating torpedoes and electric mines would be encountered probably as far as 20 miles below Fort Delaware. Escaping these, she would be greeted by a raking fire from two mortar batteries, each containing eight guns. The batteries are hidden in deep pits a few miles below Delaware City. Still continuing to advance, she would be met when twelve miles below Fort Delaware by a fire from the five-inch guns located at Fort Mott. These failing, the larger guns of both forts, Mott and Delaware, would open and further progress would certainly be arrested.

At a distance of ten miles the vessels would be in range of the three ten-inch guns. At that distance or even half that, the big guns on the battle ships could not be used on account of the limitations of elevation in the turrets in order to get such a range. At a distance of seven miles a 1,000-pound projectile from one of the 12-inch guns at Fort Mott would pierce seven inches of armor on the vessels. Each of the four guns at Fort Mott could be fired every five minutes, throwing a weight of metal of more than 2,700 pounds at each round.

As each gun was fired it would drop behind the parapet on its disappearing carriage, out of the sight of the advancing ships, where it would be loaded again, and, after being aimed by range finders, would rise to a firing position, discharging its projectile and drop again out of sight.

Further mortars are situated here. They are also hidden in deep pits and by range finders would throw their projectiles upward in an arc, dropping them on the decks of the approaching vessels. A shower of eight 600-pound shells dropped around a cruiser and on her decks, some of them going through, would probably lead to some hesitation on the part of the commander as to the advisibility of proceeding further. These shells will go through several inches of deck armor.—Philadelphia Times.

The Oddest Hobby in the World.

Probably the strangest hobby in the world is that of Henry Woolridge, of Mayfield, Ky., who devotes all his money and time to developing his plot in the local cemetery in a way which is as grotesque as it is, happily, original. His first modest and laudable effort was to erect a plain monument to mark the family resting place. Not satisfied with this, however, he added to it a white marble shaft, bearing on its face a relief presentment of himself on horseback.

Having thus struck the personal note, "Uncle Henry," as he is familiarly called, had a life-sized statue of himself erected at a cost of $200. He then introduced statues of his mother and eldest brother, to be followed shortly by similar statues in Indiana limestone of a favorite niece and of a young girl who had brought him flowers during an illness.

His next ambition was to see himself on horseback, and the family gathering was augmented by a life-size statue of "Uncle Henry" on his favorite horse. Then followed presentments in stone of his favorite deerhound, "Tow Head," chasing a deer; another of a fox pursued by his foxhound, "Bob," and a marble sarcophagus with a carved representation of his favorite gun.

The latest additions have been statues of three of his brothers in the stiffest of poses and the most prosaic of dress. As "Uncle Henry," although 75 years old, is still hale and more enthusiastic than ever, it is certain that this strange menagerie will receive many more additions before he sleeps in the oddest environment with which eccentricity ever surrounded a dead man.—Tid-Bits.

Not So Many Doctors.

The Medical Students' Register (England), gives statistics showing that wild rush by young men into the medical profession is to be moderated. In the year 1897 the medical students registered in England, Scotland and Ireland were 1,542. There was a decrease as compared with 1895 by 97. We must go back twenty-one years, to 1876, for so low a registration number as that recorded last year. The numbers have been several times over 2,000 as in 1879, 1880, 1881, 1889, and in 1891, when they reached the appalling number of 2,405. "We cannot affect to regret the signs of arrest in this rush into the profession," commends the London Lancet. "Medicine is not improved by crowds competing for a livelihood."

TRIP OF THE OREGON.

RECORD-BREAKING CRUISE OF THE PACIFIC-BORN WARSHIP.

Journey Equal to More than Half the Distance Around the Earth—Beset by Grave Dangers, but Was Always Ready for Trouble.

First to Round the Horn.

When the Oregon started on her unparalleled cruise of 13,000 miles and steamed through the Golden Gate, firing her salute of good-by to the flag that floats over the Presidio on March 19, Capt. Charles E. Clark and his crew were as much in ignorance of her ultimate destination as the rest of the world. Captain Clark was told to make Callao his first stopping place. The big vessel, with its tremendous load of guns and protecting turrets, ran into a heavy sea before it had got out of sight of California's promontories. The captain's orders did not provide for a return. The ship's prow had been headed for the coast of Peru and the course was never changed in spite of protracted bad weather. While many tons of steel were pounding on the Pacific the men who direct the game of war and use the warships as so many pieces at chess were debating what disposition should be made of the redoubtable floating battery. To "Fighting Bob" Evans was left the disposition of the big ship. "Dewey, with the Olympia, can lick the entire Spanish Asiatic squadron," was Evans' estimate, and the destination of the Oregon was settled.

Great anxiety was felt for the "pride of the navy" when April 1 came and she had not been sighted off the coast of Peru, as expected, but on April 8 the bold lines of the battleship were described off Callao. She had fought a long battle with the elements, but had come out victorious without a mark. The Oregon coaled at Callao and there Captain Clark received a sealed packet containing his orders. When the ship had headed about and steered into the open sea, Captain Clark communicated the story of the Maine's report and its reception by the American people to his men, in addition to the route of their excursion around Cape Horn. Officers and crew exercised the greatest precaution when war with Spain promised to become the sequel to the Maine disaster. The ship was given a coat of iron gray and her searchlight swept the horizon for hostile sails. The progress of the vessel southward after leaving Callao was attended by great danger owing to storms, and for that reason the Oregon coaled in the Straits of Magellan instead of attempting to enter the harbor of Valparaiso. When the joint resolution of Congress declared the Cuban people should be free and that Spanish sovereignty was at an end on the Western continent, Captain Clark was only twenty-four hours behind schedule time. The Oregon was the first warship in history to round that storm-swept point.

CAPT. CLARK OF THE OREGON.

On the Lookout for Trouble.

Captain Clark was warned by cable of the dangers that lay in his path and answered that he was ready to engage the entire Spanish fleet if his superiors so desired. A brief summary of the joint resolutions were sent him for the entertainment of his men, together with a "tip" that a declaration of war and actual hostilities would be forthcoming. When the Oregon turned into the Atlantic Ocean she was joined by the gunboat Marietta, which had left San Diego several days after the Oregon. Together they steamed northward. Captain Clark and the commander of the Marietta learned of the events that had transpired while they were speeding from the Straits of Magellan. War had been declared April 25, and the crews of both boats set up a mighty cheer when they received the news of the capture of Spanish vessels off the coast of Cuba.

Spain's crack torpedo boat, the Temerario, made a bluff at the Oregon, but immediately slunk away into the Bay of Montevideo and hid behind a peninsular when she got within observation distance of Uncle Sam's mighty sea fighter. The least inclination of the Temerario to disrespect the friendly character of the harbor would have resulted in the sinking of the Spaniard under five tons of steel projectiles into the waters of the bay. Two days after the American vessels arrived at Rio de Janeiro the Temrario arrived. Brazilian officials, however, were active and said they would prevent any clash between the representatives of the two governments. News of the magnificent victory of Dewey's fleet reached the Americans in Rio de Janeiro. Within the harbor of Brazil's capital the Oregon and Marietta were joined by the dynamite cruiser Buffalo, recently purchased from that government.

THE BATTLESHIP OREGON.

Orders came from the Navy Department to proceed, and the fleet of three vessels steamed out of the harbor of Rio de Janeiro May 4. They were instructed to stop at every cable port en route and receive instructions.

Oregon Built in the West.

All the material for the construction and armament of the Oregon came from the far Western States. The iron mines of California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Colorado, and New Mexico supplied the crude metal which was afterward converted into steel for the hull, great strips of armor and ponderous castings for the guns. The big battleship was built by the Union Iron Works, San Francisco. On her trial trip an average of 16.79 knots was maintained and 11,111 horsepower was developed, 2,111 in excess of the contract.

In size the Oregon is only surpassed by one ship in the navy—the Iowa. The displacement of the Pacific-born monster is 10,288 tons. The excess weight of the Iowa comes from her high decks, which are supposed to make her more seaworthy. When the Oregon was constructed she was intended for coast service, her designers never thinking of a record-breaking cruise equal to more than half the distance around the earth's surface. The Oregon is supplied with bunkers that give her a coal capacity of 1,594 tons. This enables her to steam 4,500 miles without recoaling. The Oregon's complement of men numbers 473. Her armor is divided as follows: Belt, 18 inches; deck, 2¾ inches; barbettes, 17 inches; turrets, 15 inches; casements, 6 inches. The main battery of the Oregon consists of four 13-inch, eight 8-inch and four slow-fire 6-inch guns. This outfit is not surpassed by any battleship in the world. The supplementary rapid-fire battery consists of twenty 6-pounders, six 1-pounders, four Gatlings, two field guns and three torpedo tubes.

Ancient Methods of Signaling.

The fabulous honor of being the first inventor of the art of signaling is bestowed by certain classical writers upon the ingenious Palamedes. This hero may have introduced improvements in detail, but it is certain that long before the time of the Trojan war the Egyptians and Assyrians, if not the Chinese and other nations of remote antiquity—of whom monumental records alone remain to us—had developed regular methods of signaling by fire, smoke, flags, etc.

The great wall, built by the Chinese ages ago, and 1,500 miles long, is studded with towers. Between these signals were interchanged when troops had to be collected in order to resist attack at any point threatened by the Tartars or "outer barbarians." By Maj. Boucheraeder and others it has been considered that the huge tower of Babel was erected for similar as well as for a number of different purposes. That is to say, for the signaling not necessarily of any particular words or sentences, but of expected events, imperial decrees, military orders and other matters intended to be understood through conventional signals, whether of lights, flags, semaphores or other devices, by all the motley host of nationalities and languages of which the Chaldean empire was composed.—Cornhill.

This Country's Marvelous Wealth.

The Government returns of the grain crop of 1897 are now complete. They make almost a startling showing of the wealth of the country in soil production.

Of corn we produced 1,902,967,933 bushels, for which the farmers received—for farm prices only are considered—no less than $501,072,952, or about one-half the entire national debt.

Of wheat we produced 530,149,168 bushels, which poured into the laps of the farmers the sum of $428,547,121.

Of oats we produced 698,767,809 bushels, yielding $147,974,719.

Thus on three grain crops alone our tillers of the soil earned $1,077,594,792.

This does not include barley, hay, beef, mutton, wool, pork, eggs, chickens, garden vegetables, fruits, butter, milk, or any other of a hundred farm products that together greatly exceed these three recorded crops in value. It does not include the 7,000,000 bales of cotton, or the rice, or the tobacco, or anything else than three grain products.

What a country ours is, to be sure, when one year's crops yield to the cultivators six or seven times our whole national debt! What limit shall be set to the power and glory of a country so marvelously fruitful?—New York World.

The latest use for glass is instead of gold as a material for stopping decaying teeth. It answers splendidly, and is far less conspicuous than the yellow metal. Of course, it is not ordinary glass, but is prepared by some new patented process which renders it soft and malleable.

CONGRESS

While several important paragraphs in the war revenue measure were passed over on Thursday for future consideration, excellent progress was made by the Senate in the consideration of the bill. Two-thirds of the measure has been read, the committee amendments generally having been agreed to. The proposition to place a stamp tax upon proprietary articles and perfumeries now in stock aroused a lively discussion. It was regarded as retroactive legislation and as such was opposed by many Senators. After debate, confined to the proposition to send the labor arbitration bill to conference, in which many members participated, a roll call of the House upon agreeing to the Senate amendments, thereby affecting the bill's passage, was ordered, resulting in yeas 219, nays 4. After experiencing a brief political tilt, precipitated by a personal political explanation from Mr. Tongue (Rep., Ore.), the House adjourned until Monday.

Soon after the Senate convened on Friday Mr. Hale (Maine), chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, favorably reported from the committee the House joint resolution providing for the organization and enrollment of an auxiliary naval force which shall form an inner line of defense. An amendment by the Senate committee provides that the force shall not exceed 3,000 men. The resolution was passed. The Senate resumed consideration of the war revenue bill, and Mr. Daniel of Virginia spoke for two hours on the measure. He supported the bill, but opposed the bond feature and stamp tax, and said the corporations should bear a larger share of the taxation. Mr. McEnery (La.) proposed an amendment to the paragraph of the bill placing a tax upon all corporations not specifically designated, providing that the law should not apply to "limited liability commercial partnerships or corporations and companies or corporations of limited liability conducting planting or farming business or preparing for market products of the soil."

For five hours on Monday the Senate had the war revenue measure under discussion. The entire time was occupied by Mr. Chilton (Dem., Tex.), Mr. Lodge (Rep., Mass.) and Mr. Turley (Dem., Tenn.). While Mr. Lodge confined himself to a discussion of the proposed tax on corporations and bank deposits, strongly urging that such taxes be not imposed, Mr. Chilton and Mr. Turley covered pretty fully the general features of the bill. No action of any kind was taken upon the bill. The day in the House was devoted chiefly to the consideration of District of Columbia legislation. Two bills of minor importance affecting the volunteer military was passed. A bill authorizing the construction of a railway bridge across the Missouri river at Quindaro, Kan., by the Kansas City, Northeastern and Gulf Railway Company was passed.

The Senate spent most of the day Tuesday in discussion of the war revenue measure. Paragraphs relating to corporation taxes were under consideration. Speeches were made by Mr. Frye of Maine, Mr. Platt of Connecticut, and Mr. Lindsey of Kentucky.

In the Senate on Wednesday Mr. Hale of Maine reported an appropriation bill to supply deficiencies in pensions and for other purposes. As reported the bill carries $8,498,405, of which $8,075,872 is for pensions and the balance for the army, navy and courts. After a brief discussion of that feature of the measure which makes possible temporary appointments of clerks without civil service examination, it was passed. Discussion of the war revenue measure was resumed. Mr. Stewart of Nevada and Mr. Allen of Nebraska made speeches against a bond issue. Mr. Caffery of Louisiana argued against the proposed tax on corporations, and upon motion the McEnery amendment was laid on the table by a vote of 36 to 10. The Senate then passed bills granting additional powers to railroads created by laws of the United States and operating lines in Indian territory and appointing commissioners to revise the statutes relating to patents, trade and other marks and trade and commercial names. Mr. Lacy of Iowa, from the Committee on Public Lands, called up, and the House passed, the House bill granting certain lands to the territory of New Mexico for common school, college, university, charitable institutions, public buildings, irrigation and Rio Grande river improvement purposes. Pursuant to an arrangement the House then listened to eulogies upon the late Senator J. Z. George of Mississippi.

Russia in Business on a Big Scale.

Some people have an idea that Napoleon's words, that "the scepter of Europe has passed into the hands of the czar," may be fulfilled in the not distant future. Russia is certainly playing a big hand these days, but she may be humiliated again, as she was once before in her history. But what a clash there would be if Russia and Great Britain should come in collision!—Wilkesbarre Record.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Monday's Daily.

Provisions reported scarce at both Manila and Havana.

Dewey allows foreign residents to leave Manila and move to Cavite to live under American protection.

People of Danish West India islands wants U. S. to buy those islands from Denmark. They think they would be better off with us.

U. S. troo ps are to be entertained at Honolulu, when they stop there on their way to Manila.

Troops at Tampa have received sealed orders, and it is generally conceded it is to get abroad and sail for Cuba, or else to Porto Rico. Sampson's fleet will go with them.

Still claimed that the Spanish fleet is at Santiago, but the Spaniards say not.

Rumors in Spain, that a naval battle has been fought, and two American cruisers sunk. But this is not likely to be true

The most conflicting rumors are afloat. One dispatch says the Spaniards are at Santiago. Another says they are south of there, near the South American coast. Another says our fleets are still hunting the Dons. Our own government seems to know but little, or else she keeps the news secret.

Saturday morning the U S. cruiser Columbia, ran into an English merchant ship southeast of New York harbor in a dense fog. The steamer was sunk and the cruiser injured. No lives lost.

Tuesday's Daily.

As indicated in this column yesterday, there is a forward movement on Cuba. At Tampa and Mobile, the big transport steamers were busy all day yesterday, May 30, taking on troops, supplies of all kinds and horses and mules by the thousand. About 25,000 men are on the shores of Cuba today. Possibly they have landed. The Government carries the idea that they will go first to Santiago But it is likely they will not all go to the same place. Arms and other supplies have been quietly landed on the island for the past week, sa that the insurgents will be in better shape to help us, when we land.

It is now conceded by the government that Schley has the Spanish fleet cornered in the harbor of Santiago. Troops will be used to help get possession of both city and fleet. They have four first-class ships and two torpedo boats in the harbor, and a strong force of soldiers in the forts on land.

We have captured a British merchant vessel that was following up the Spanish fleet, with a big load of coal. As coal is "contraband," we had a right to take her.

Gen. Merritt has full instructions from our government, to assume control of everything in the Philippine Islands, He will be the government himself, except as to relations with foreign countries which must all be referred to the home government at Washington. He will be the first foreign governor ever furnished by the United States. It is not likely we shall occupy the islands after peace is established.

It appears the Spanish fleet had intended to go to San Juan on Porto Rico but Sampson bombarded it, and they saw they could get no coal there, and so went Santiago.

Gen. Miles, commander-in-chief, has charge of the movement on Cuba. It may now be conceded that the aggressive war for the freedom of Cuba, has begun.

It is estimated that Spain has 128,000 soldiers in Cuba, including volunteers of the Cuban population, who have sided with Spain. We now have 125,000 volunteer raised and have ordered, the raising of 75,000 more. The regular army now numbers over 30,000 and will be made larger.

A NEW VERSION.

An Eminent Specialist Says: "Eat Plenty of Wholesome Food to Cure Stomach Trouble."

There is probably no one disease among Americans which causes so much suffering as dyspepsia and indigestion It has become known as a disease of civilization, and at this very moment more then five hundred people in Auburn—according to statistics—are troubled more or less with stomach trouble. The majority of this number have drugged themselves with all manner of "cures" while the suffering goes on.

Sylvester Stone, M, D., a specialist in stomach diseases, makes an ironclad statement which should interest every person suffering from dyspepsia or indigestion. Supposing you are among the suffering, having a heavy load in the pit of the stomach, belching of sour and gas, dizziness, blurred vision, pain between shoulders, nausea, sickheadache, faintness, bad breath, bloating of stomache and bowels, constipation, etc. Supposing you are informed of a remedy that cures; not an experiment, but a medicine that cures; a remedy that has relieved and cured thousands in Indiana ajone, who have added their names to the long list of indorsements. Such a remedy is Dr Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. The first dose relieves, continued use cures. You are not obliged to diet. Eat what the palate craves. The medicine is pleasant to take, being prepared in tablet form, contains no morphine or other opiates, and if it don't cure, you have your money back.

This new, wonderful treatment can be secured at any drug store in Auburn, who are authorized to sell this remedy under a genuine guarantee. THE "CONTINENTAL LIMITED"

A Magnificent New Train to New York Over the Popular Wabash.

Friends of the Wabash railroad are highly pleased and gratified at the many evidences of its progression to the rank of one of the greatest and most influential systems in the entire country. It has always been the most capably managed, the best equipped and the most accommodating of roads and there has been nothing whatever lacking to maintain the highest place in the popular esteem of the people, but the latest move of the management will add still further to the achievements and reputation of the road. It is the announcement of putting a new fast train to connect the system with New York—the objective points of all roads leading to any part of the east. The train is to be called by the appropriate title of the "Continental Limited," and is to run from St. Louis to New York, via Peru, Detroit and Suspension Bridge, starting on the 15th of this month. It will be one of the finest and fastest trains traversing the central and eastern states and will reflect in every detail the superiority of the Wabash system. The road did a great thing when it extended its lines from Detroit to Buffalo, and this announcement of a train to go still farther and reach the great metropolis of the country shows the progressive and enterprising spirit that is now in control. The relaying of the main track with eighty-pound steel and the purchase of the monster new locomotives—the finest in the country—now explain the farseeing policy with which the Wabash is being managed. With the men in control of the executive department and those of the operating and traffic departments, together with the perfect equipment and discipline. it is plainly evident that the "Continental Limited" will be the finest and most talked-of train in the country from the first week of its running, just as the fast mail train from Toledo to St. Louis has been for years.

JACK CUPPY DEAD

As noted in Saturday's DAILY, little Jack Cuppy was at the point of death as we went to press. He breathed his last at 10 that evening. His suffering for most of the time since he was taken ill had been great, but he bore it like a little man, and more than that, like a christian. He knew he was going to die, and spoke freely of the certainty of a heavenly life with his Savior. He was in many ways a boy of remarkably bright and lovable character, and his early death is sad indeed. The funeral services will be at the home, tomorrow, Tuesday at 3. p. m., conducted by Rev. T. M. Guild. Interment will be in Woodlawn.

OLD SETTLERS

At a meeting of the "old settlers association" at the Court House in Auburn on the 28th day of May 1898, the following committees were appointed. Committee on Finance, Christopher C. Shaffer, Joseph Rainier; Committee on seating, John F. Aber, D Z. Hoffman; Committee on Music, John M. Widney, Moses B. Willis; Committee on Speaking, James E. Rose; Committee on Registering names and badges, Isaac Hague; Executive Committee, M. B. Willis, M. F. Long, John C. Henry. O. C Clark was appointed to act as chairman in place of C. A. O. DECORATION DAY.

The weather yesterday, was all that could be desired for it was neither too hot nor too cold and there was a total absence of the rain that so often comes on Memorial Day. People from the country began coming in about noon and soon after that the streets began filling with the town people and the children. When the hour came for services at the Opera House, there was no standing room left above or below. All late comers had to stay away. The services were in charge of Joseph Rainier as marshal of the day, W. H. McIntosh commander of the Post and Mrs. Clark commander of the W. R. C. Rev. J. N. Wilson, himself a veteran, made a most impressive prayer, and the singing was fine and appropriate. all by our home singers. The roll call of the dead was read by Mr. Rainier for the G A. R, and by Mrs. Gordon for the W R. C. and the familiar names had a solemn sound under the circumstances. The sermon was by Rev. E. P. Hoyt, pastor of the Baptist church and it was a very able and appropriate one for the occasion. Then came the closing services, the forming procession and the march to the cemetery. The little boys and girls were most numerous and with flags, bright colors and enthusiasm were very attractive and inspiriting. The G. A. R. the W. R. C. and Sons of Veterans were in the procession in about the usual numbers and the Auburn Band and the Drum Corps furnished appropriate music. We missed the familiar parade and faces of Co. K. that for so many years formed a part of the pageant and fired salutes over the graves of the honored dead. They, themselves are at the front now and near the scenes where their fathers had fought and bled. Their places here had to be taken by others. Rus Guilford's little cannon was taken into the procession and did duty in the salutes. The graves were decorated, the dirge was played, the salutes fired and then the long procession turned again toward the town and at the public square was disbanded. As we said at first the weather was perfect and as this so seldom happens it was the subject of much congratulation. The attendance was large and altogether it was one of the most perfect celebrations of this solemn occasion we have ever had.

COURT.

Tuesday's Daily.

Work began in earnest this morning with the jury present. The trial of Bay VanAuken came up first. It will be remembered that he is charged with a deadly assault on Charles Rugman.

The state is represented by Prosecutor Rhodes of Angola and J. E. Pomeroy of Auburn. For VanAuken, D. D. Moody and P. V. Hoffman are the attorneys. Three witnesses were examined this forenoon. Rob McClellan testified that VanAuken had no money that evening as he asked for credit on some drinks saying he had no money. Rinehart who keeps the saloon west of the Kibliger block on Seventh street says VanAuken and the others were there but he could not remember what they did or whether they drank, or whether VanAuken had money or not as he said he had been drinking, and that when he drinks he cannot remember what happens. This testimony as to VanAuken's having no money is to be taken with the fact that next day he had quite a sum of money, and so used to show that he may have got the money by robbing Mr. Rugman.

Mr. Rugman himself was able to be present and gave such testimony as he could. He does not remember being struck. His injuries were on the head and face, one eye being lost and he lay for days in a critical state. His testimony is to show such events of the evening as he may remember. He and VanAuken and others were at several saloons that evening. The last he remembers is that he went home along West Seventh street. He does not remember anything till he was let into his home towards morning. Some one slugged him on the back of the head in front of Caruth's and falling as supposed on the sharp iron pickets tore out his eye and tore his nose. It would appear that he struggled with his assailant for he was dirty and his clothes torn. There is considerable value attached to what he does remember, however.

In the afternoon Nightwatch Baker was first witness. He told about his seeing Rugman, VanAuken and others going about town till after midnight. He saw VanAuken between twelve and one go to the laundry. He was on the stand about an hour. We have already published his evidence.

McCrum who works at the laundry came next He had seen VanAuken several times that Saturday evening at saloons, etc. At about midnight he went as usual to start work at the laundry. In a little while VanAuken came in, saying he thought he would call a few minutes. Staid 5 or 10 minutes. Witness had some bottles of beer and they drank one. Just before he went off VanAuken looked at the clock and said it was nearly one. Witness came to the clock soon after and it was one o'clock.

Al Treesh testified. On Sunday, next day after Rugman was assaulted, he was at Junction on his way to Garrett. Stopped at Lung's lunch room to get something to eat. VanAuken was there. He paid for lunch, and witness saw him have a handful of money, some 9 or 10 silver dollars and some change. VanAuken said he had won $40 at Lung's the night before, though he had only 60 cents of his own and had to borrow 40 cents to "get into the game". Witness said he did not believe the story, one reason being that he did not believe there was $40 in sight at the Junction or ever was. This created a smile.

D. C. Caruth testified as to one of the pickets on his iron fence being broken off and blood on the fence and sidewalk there. Also as to the wounds on the head and face.

C. E. VanAuken, father of the prisoner testified that the latter was 22 last fall. Here the state rested, all its evidence being in.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

FROM CHICKAMAUGA.

The Courier Keeps It's Readers Posted With Bright and Newsy Letters From The Boys.

By the kindness of Cyrus Ollinger, we are permitted to give our readers another interesting letter from Chickamauga Park. It is from Mr. Ollinger's son, Mell, written to his brother George.

CHICKAMAUGA, GA., May 23, 1898.

DEAR BROTHER GEORGE:—As this is a fine warm morning and I am not very busy will take the pleasure of writing to you. I am Maj. Kuhlman's orderly and don't have much to do. Well how is everything and everybody? It seems as though we can't get any mail, haven't got more than a dozen letters in the whole company since we have been here. Some of the boys are getting tired of this place already. Well it is a tiresome place. We don't see anyone except a few negroes, I don't think there is more than two dozen white people on the camp ground. I am very well satisfied except one thing, that is the water, it is very poor. There is quite a few of the boys sick but not very bad. Some of them got too much good stuff to eat on the way down here and it was too rich for their blood. It gave them the Tennessee quick step.

Tell pa to write and give me the name of his regiment and commander and I will try to find where their monument is. We are camped close to Crawfish Springs, I don't know just how far but it isn't a great ways. They are going to pipe water from there to our camp. I have not had time to get out and look around. Some of the boys have found some old bullets, grape shot pieces of shell, and all kinds of relics. I am going to try to get something of that kind and send it home I can buy most anything of that kind of some of the negroes but I want something that I know where it came from. Those negres get a lot of stuff and bury it, leave it in the ground a year or so, then dig it up and sell it for something that they found on the battle field. I could sit here all day and write about what I have seen. But there is no use I think I can tell you all before very long, I think we have seen all the war we will see They may keep us here a part of the summer, but we'll not stay long. There is too many of us doing nothing. Well I will have to close as it is time the Major was in with his horse. I will write again in a few days If we should happen to get orders to go on south I will write at once. Write soon, all of you, for I know you have more time than I have and a better place to write.

Yours Truly,
MELL

Good bye to all.

SUPPLEMENT TO

The Auburn Courier.

Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana, June 2, 1898.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Wednesday's Daily.

Our fleet reported to have shelled the forts at the entrance of Santiago harbor yesterdoy afternoon, according to news sent by cable from Cape Haytien, on the island of Hayti, east of there. The fight began about 2 p. m, and lasted nearly all afternoon. It seems this comes over a cable from Santiago to Cape Haytien, and thence to Key West. And yet our government will not give out any news if it has any.

Report out that still another call for troops may be made.

Co. K did not start yesterday, but went today to Tampa.

A strong peace party is said to exist in Spain as there is much suffering from high prices.

It is no doubt true that we have landed a Cuba, but no authentic account is yet given.

All over the United States recruiting is going on, more or less.

Our people should be patient even if news come slow, for it would often be unwise for the government to tell all it knows.

THE PAY ROLL

The pay roll for all the Co K is here. in the hands of Hon. E. D. Hartman. All will be paid something. The boys who went with the regular company at first, but afterwards came home. will get each 12 days pay. The boys who volunteered with W. H. McIntosh, but failed to pass, get 3 days pay. All get something whether they passed or not.

THE COMING CONVENTION.

The coming democratic convention will be called on to ratify the action of the county committee as to fusion. We believe this should be done unanimously. Ninety-nine in every hundred of the democrats we have talked with believe in the wisdom of fusion. Only a few who have axes to grind oppose it. Let the party stand by its interests and by its honest convictions.

BADLY BURNED

The 5-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cogswell in the northwest part of town, was dangerously burned this forenoon. She was playing with matches, and set fire to her apron. The flames flashed up around her face, and had it not been for her woolen dress, she would have been burned much worse. The flames were extinguished and she is out of danger. Dr. Buchtel hopes she will not be disfigured. It was a great shock to the mother who is now ill on account of the accident.

—Wm. J. Bryan will likely get no command. His regiment is ready, but the authorities at Washington say the state is not entitled to send a full regiment—only 660. It looks like a small trick to shelve him.

—Dr. Barnett, surgeon of the 157th, though now at the front, writes home that he is still a candidate for coroner of Allen county. If elected, his term would begin Nov. 1, '99, and he thinks the war will then be over.

—Jacob Brosy, father of Rev. J. D. Brosy, has been here since Monday, visiting his son and family. He had been visiting relatives at Hartford City, Ind., and returned this way Monday, to his home in Williams Co. Ohio.

—Marshal Berhalter and his nephew are here from Kendallvill. The former worked up the case against the men who burglarized Hartman. The latter met the loose horse as it was going back home to Hartman's after being turned loose at Kendallville.

—The Albion Democrat of last week is a daisy. It has an illuminated. Decoration Day cover, and on the home part of the paper, much good matter is found. It also a commencement edition and has pictures of the graduates, teacher, etc, and is altogether a credit to the publishers.

—We find among the delegates to the Sunday School Convention many old acquaintances including several who were teachers with us several years ago. These conventions do good in more ways than one, for they not only advance the good work, but they give opportunity for most of the delegates, to renew old and pleasant friendships and acquaintances.

MASCOT OF THE WINSLOW.

Torpedo-Boat Has a Fighting Parrot for a Pet.

Chicago Chronical, May 29.

"Jack the Ripper," the fighting parrot and mascot of the torpedo-boat Winslow, is at once a bird and a patriot.

On the morning when Lieutenant Bernadou was shipping in the harbor of Cardenas "Jack the Ripper" responded to a salute by Ensign Bagley with the wild screech:

"Remember the Maine! Remember the Maine! Kah! K-a-h!"

"Jack" is no carpet knight, no fair day mascot. As the engines began to throb he shrieked:

"D——n the torpedoes! Go ahead! D——n the torpedoes!"

The bird had caught the spirit that animated the breasts of the gallant little crew and as the craft slowed up for an anchorage he shouted:

"Man the tubes! Man the tubes!"

"Yankee Doodle came to town," sang the bird, bent on adding his voice to the music of war, which had now fairly begun.

"Look out! Look out there!" warned the watchful mascot as shot and shell began to tear through the stacks of the Winslow.

"Give it to 'em! Wow! kah! kah! Remember the Maine!"

Amid showers of shrapnel and bursting shells "Jack" continued his words of warning and command. When the fatal shell burst above the devoted little craft, sending Ensign Bagley and four of his gallant men to their death, "Jack" seemed to realize the situation. With blood splashed over his ruffled wings and green crest, he flew through the air shrieking:

"Remember the Maine! Kill'em!"

Half an hour later the Hudson was towing the shattered Winslow out of harm's way. Upon her deck, shrouded as became American sailors, by their country's flag, lay the bodies of five heroes.

"Jack the Ripper" fluttered to the deck, lifted with his beak one corner of the flag, peered underneath and shrieked:

"Remember the Maine!—Spain! Ka-a-a-h!"

HOW IT HAPPENED.

Various rumors are afloat in regard to a serious accident to one of the soldiers from Columbia City. The Post gives it in correct form:

A card from Russel Brenneman to his father gives briefly the particulars of the accident with which Carl Chapman, a member of Co. G 160th regiment, met. According to this card, Chapman went up town May 25th. While having his clothes brushed by a boot-black, the handle of the broom struck the hammer of a 48 calibre revolver, discharging it. The ball cut the flesh on his right hand and passed through the instep of his right foot. The injury is quite serious and may cripple the young man for life.

Mr. Brenneman also says that as Mr. Chapman was absent from camp without leave, he will be deprived of a pension.

NEW COMPANY GROWING.

J. A. Clifton is likely soon to have his new company full. Quite a number have enlisted lately and especially the latter part of the week, when many new names were added. Mr. Clifton is a well drilled and experienced veteran and will be just the man to take charge of a new company of young men and put them into good shape for efficient soldiers. And under an experienced man like him, there will be a chance to get into the service. But we might add, he wants good men, and is ready to receive all such, from any part of the country or towns The enrolling place is at the office of D. M. Link in this city.

THE S. S. MEETING

The meeting began this morning by devotional exercises by Mrs. Jones of Garrett. Then came the welcome address by Mr. Guild and response by Rev. Yager of Waterloo. Then came a discussion by Rev. Cain of Garrett on Sunday Schools and how to teach them Then came the reading of names of delegates and assignment to boarding places. Adjourned till 1:30.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The session began with devotional services by Rev. Campbell of Corunna Then a talk on Sunday School points and how to strengthen them, by Rev. R A. Montgomery, of Waterloo. Then a general discussion by Rev. Cain and Rev. Hoyt and others. Songs by the choir followed this and then Rev. J. M. Haines, of Garret gave a half hour's talk on the S. S. teacher's pastorate, after which was a general discussion.

Township presidents then made their reports.

This evening there will be a grand mass meeting for children, arranged by the S. S of Auburn.

CO. K GOES SOUTH

At 7:30 last evening the COURIER received the following telegram from Chickamauga:

The 157th Ind. is ordered to Tampa as soon as transportation can be secured.

GEO. W. EVERETT

This had been expected, because the regulars who have been at Tamda several weeks had been ordered to go on board ships to start for Cuba. So the volunteers at Chickamauga must move down there to take their places.

There were nearly 50.000 men at the Park, belonging to various states, but only eight regiments are included in the movement. These are the 157th Indiana, First Ohio, First Illinois, Third Penn., Second and Sixty-ninth New York, Fifth Maryland and the First Dist, Columbia. A half of these left today, and the other half tomorrow. They will occupy the camps vacated by the regulars at Tampa.

It is said the Indiana men are looking for new uniforms any day now. Their health is said to be better than that of any other regiments in the Park. All the friends of Co. K are notified to change the address to Tampa Florida The boys had a chance to see Decoration Day Services at the National Cemetery, on that famous battlefield. Two or three soldiers from other regiments who had died of sickness, were buried in the cemetery that day. It gave them a sight at the dark side of war.

BUTLER.

Mr. Miller, wife and children, living near Lake James, Sundayed with R. C. Campbell.

A large amount of wool was marketed in Butler last Saturday.

Rev. Mason of Albion Mich., brother of our townsman, A. J. Mason filled the M. E. pulpit last Sunday

Quite a number of our people will attend the Sunday school convention at Auburn this week.

A big effort is being made to entertain the Epworth League convention that meets in Butler next week. Bishop Wine will be among the big men that are expected and the town will perhaps run over.

Mrs. M. F. Campbell and son are getting along nicely. They were out for a drive last Sunday.

J. A. Campbell has purchased the Latson building on Broadway and will perhaps occupy it for an office.

Commencement exercises at the M. E. church last Wednesday night were enjoyed hugely. The lecture by Hon. Henry R. Pattengill ex-superintendent of public instruction, of Michigan, on "Star Pointers," was a master piece of oratory and amusement. He can tell a story– most men can't.

The basket factory continues to turn out many carloads of baskets. They find ready sales in many parts of the country.

Decoration day and services proved a great success. The cemetery was a veritable flower garden.

COURT.

Wednesday's Daily.

When we closed our report yesterday the state had concluded its witnesses in the case against Bay VanAuken. After a short rest the defense began.

Mr. Niebelung was sworn but did not seem to know much of anything about the affair Deputy-sheriff Platter, was sworn and asked a question or two about the soiled and bloody clothes, but he could throw no real light on the matter. One or two others were called and did no better. In fact the defense did not have a witness that knew much of the case, in fact knew almost nothing. They consumed less than half an hour all told.

Then the pleadings began. Mr. Rhodes for the state, presented his case, and made a clear statement of things as he viewed it. He was followed by Mr. Moody for the defense. He seemed terribly in earnest and claimed his client was innocent. He said we might as easily have fixed the crime on Rhinehart as on VanAuken as he could have easily gone around by the Swineford, then west a few blocks, then north to to Seventh then followed Rugman and hit him, that being the route and plan the prosecution had tried to fix on VanAuken. Then he alluded to the claim that VanAuken may have got that money by gambling, and talked a good deal about a gambling room over Rhinehart's saloon. This came in the nature of a surprise for there were many in the court room who had never heard of a gambling place such as he claimed was kept there. If there is any truth in such a statement the prosecutor should look into it.

At the evening session Mr. Hoffman made a strong plea for VanAuken, and Mr. Pomeroy another for the state. Both speakers did well. Then the jury was charged and went out. They did not agree on a verdict till three o'clock this morning. When court was called at 9 a. m. the verdict was read "Not Guilty." Judge Roby called VanAuken to the bar and gave him a short but keen edged lecture. He told him, how his counsel had been afraid to let the jury come into contact with citizens who knew his reputation, and had also been afraid to put him on the stand in his own behalf. He gave him some brief, but valuable advice and discharged him VanAuken and his wife, both shook hands with the jury. It is only truth to say, that VanAuken's past history has been such that this verdict does not clear him in the opinion of most of our people. The jury had for some hours at first stood seven for acquittal and five for conviction.

The special jurors on this case were then let off. The jury was reorganized and then came on the case against Harry Martin accused of burglarizing the Hartman home in Fairfield.

—Politics makes strange bedfellows. W. A. Geiger of Churubusco, who owns and gets the profits of the democratic patronage of a democratic paper, the Butler Herald, is the nominee for county auditor of Whitley county on the republican ticket. He expects to get his campaign money from the kind hearted democrats of DeKalb county, who always seem to have the luck to be bled by all kinds of political gangs.

P. J. Lockwood who has visited in ted Cuba and Havanna, says it will be no easy task for our navy to reduce the fortifications there. He inspected Morro Castle at a time when it was open to visitors and is therefore quite familiar with its strength and condition. The defenses are by no means weak and the harbor is mined so that vessels cannot enter unless the Spaniards are willing. The opinion he has reached is, that the city and its defenses can only be reduced after a siege of some duration.

—Some friend at Chickmauga Park, Geo. Everett we presume sends us a pamphlet containing detailed accounts of that terrible battle of the rebellion. As our chatty correspondent there said in his letters last week, the great multitude of locations of that two days battle covering so much ground, and some of it fought over two or three times, is apt to confuse one. And while the description is no doubt substantially correct, the accompaning maps do not help one a great deal. And probably the old veterans themselves who fought there would now be at a loss to locate most of the places.

$1000 REWARD

For the apprehension and conviction of the parties who composed, printed and distributed the following libelous circular:

To Members of the Associated Bicycle Clubs

FELLOW RIDERS: We, the committee appointed by the Executive Committee to make a complete and searching investigation into the rumors which have recently gained circulation to the effect that the "RAMBLER" bicycle, manufactnred by GORMULLY & JEFFERY for the past nineteen years, during which time it has stood high in public favor, is now being manufactured out of inferior material and put together in a very inferior manner, and therefore unsafe for any other than boulevard riding, make the following statement:

As the matter was deemed important to both ourselves and the firm of manufacturers' whose reputation for years has been of the best, your committee decided to make a complete investigation and give GORMULLY & JEFFERY every opportunity to maintain the reputation so long enjoyed by the "RAMBLER" wheel.

Upon our visit to the offices of GORMULLY & JEFFERY we were very courteously received as the representatives of the Associated Bicycle Clubs, but upon our stating our errand and that we would like to be given the opportunity to inspect the factory and construction of the "RAMBLER" wheel, we were very plainly told that such request could not be granted and that it was none of our business as to how the wheel was manufactured. Mr. Jeffery talked very presistently of his high business standing and stated that the "RAMBLER" had been nineteen years on the market and that the rumors (which he acknowledged were in circulation) were instigated by rival manufacturers. We informed him that we could very easily find out whether or not the "RAMBLER" was a safe wheel to ride if he would give us permission to watch the construction of a set of them, but he declined.

Our next move was to place one of our members, who is well known to you all, in the factory as an employe in the assembling department. He made application and secured employment in the course of a few days and thus had an excellent opportunity to keep his eye on the building of the "RAMBLER" wheel. He spent ten days in the factory and then tendered his resignation, at which the foreman expressed regret, stating that he was one of the best workmen in the room.

Our report is as follows: "The 'RAMBLER' wheel of to-day in no way compares with the 'RAMBLER' of a few years ago. Not only is the material used in its construction of a poor grade, but the workmen are a very inferior lot. Very few mechanics are employed in the factory and none of the men who were with GORMULLY & JEFFERY when they made the wheel famous are with them to-day, on account, we are informed of the low wages paid.

"We therefore advise all members of the Association to let the 'RAMBLER' alone as it is an unsafe wheel to ride and will not stand road work."

This recommendation is made after a very careful study of the material used and method of manufacturing the "RAMBLER," and we are assured that the reports are true in fact and not instigated by jealous rivals as GORMULLY & JEFFERY assert.

Respectfully,

JOHN CARLSON, OTTO M. CHUMBLEY, [illegible] ARNSON,

Committee.

INSPECTION SOLICTED.

PORTO RICO | OUR FUTURE POSSESSION

Regardless of the differing views as to our ultimate disposition of island territory taken from Spain, it is thought by many that the United States will hold Porto Rico. By doing so we will acquire one of the garden spots of the tropics, for in many respects Porto Rico is the real gem of the Antilles. Men who have lately traveled in this beautiful island agree in expressing surprise that so little is known concerning its many wonders and charms.

About 1,000 miles due southeast from Havana, 500 from Cape Maisi, the eastern tip of Cuba, opens northward the magnificent harbor of San Juan de Puerto Rico—Saint John of the Rico, or Noble Port, distant from New York about 1,600 miles, and from the Danish island of St. Thomas but sixty miles, the last-named lying that much farther to the eastward.

MAP SHOWING PORTO RICO AND NEIGHBORING WATERS.

Porto Rico was discovered by Columbus, in 1493, on his second voyage, when on his way from the southern West Indies to his original landing place on the coast of Hayti. Fifteen years after the passing of Columbus came another navigator, one Juan Ponce de Leon, the governor of a province of Santo Domingo, sixty miles distant. The Indians of this section told him wonderful stories of the rich island across the channel, and in the year 1508 he landed at Aguadilla with a force of men and a pack of bloodhounds, bent upon its conquest. Ponce de Leon lives in history as the noblest and the gentlest of those galliard adventurers. And he was—that is, speaking relatively—he was noble and gentle for a Spaniard of that day. But he saw nothing wrong in putting to death the Indian chieftain Agueynaba, who first showed him the rivers with sands running gold, nor in setting on the trail of innocent women and children his famous bloodhound, Berezillo, who drew the pay of a bowman for his service, and who tore to pieces every Indian he ran down and overtook. He was the terror of all the Indians, whom he drove to the hills in troops, but was finally slain with a poisoned arrow sent after him by a Carib.

FORTIFICATION AT SAN JUAN.

Ponce de Leon and his mail-clad soldiers finally settled on the present site of San Juan in 1511, and the most interesting relic to be found there to-day is the ancient building called the "Casa Blanca," which was built by the conquistador and occupied by him while governor of the island. Equally ancient with the Casa Blanca are the fortifications surrounding the city of San Juan, for their foundations were laid during the reign of Ponce de Leon. The capital city, with a population of some 25,000, occupies an island, connected with the main by a bridge and a causeway, and is completely inclosed within massive walls of stone and hardened mortar, with a height in places of from 50 to 100 feet. Like Havana, it has its morro, or citadel (literally a round or Moorish tower), and the fortifications are on a comprehensive scale, with bastions and drawbridges, ornate sentry boxes hanging over the sea, and grim, gray walls towering threateningly. One may find their counterpart, on a smaller scale, in the old fort at St. Augustine; and they are similar to those of Havana before her walls were cast down. The peninsular upon which the morro and the lighthouse stand is thrust out into the sea, on one side breasting the thundering surges of the Caribbean, and on the other guarding the placid waters of a beautiful and almost land-locked harbor. This harbor is one of the finest in the West Indies, large, sheltered, and capable of accommodating any number of the largest ships, giving anchorage in from three to six fathoms.

STREET SCENE IN SAN JUAN.

Though the main portion of San Juan is inclosed within the walls, through which entrance is only obtained by well-guarded gateways, yet there is a small town by itself in the Marina, between the fortifications and the wharves. Here is a fine public garden and pleasure palace, with booths and restaurants, as well as the public cockpit, where battles royal are frequently waged. The buildings of the inner city are of stone, massive and substantial, like those of Havana and the City of Mexico.

As to local conditions, San Juan is not an attractive city, under its present management, owing to its filthy streets and lack of attention to sanitation. It is likely to have a visit every year from Yellow Jack, when, owing to its situation, he might as well as not be kept at a distance. But San Juan is only one port of the island, and there are some harbors that are as fine, if not as large and land-locked.

One other on the north coast is Arrecibo; on the east are Humacao and Fajardo, on the west Aguadilla and Mayaguez, as beautiful as the heart of man could desire, with their gushing springs and background of pointed mountains, and on the south coast are Arroyo Guayanilla and Ponce. This last is the largest, the city having a population of about 35,000, with a vast export trade, chiefly in sugar and molasses. A fine post road connects it with San Juan, running diagonally across the island, with a daily diligence between the two. A system of railroads is in course of construction that will soon connect all the chief coast towns and open up portions of the interior.

HARBOR AND FORTIFICATIONS OF SAN JUAN.

SCENE IN SAN JUAN HARBOR.

The island is about 95 miles in length by 35 or 40 in breadth, and as nearly rectangular as nature will allow in its coast line. The interior is one vast group of mountains. The soil everywhere is very fertile and cultivable, even to the mountain crests, the hill pastures of Porto Rico being celebrated for their succulent grasses, upon which feed cattle and horses, which are favorites throughout the islands south. These are shipped in large numbers, and constitute the chief wealth of a great many people engaged in the business.

Among the hills also are thousands of cafetales, or coffee estates, for here the coffee finds congenial soil and climate for its perfect development, and is a source of profit to many planters who prefer a life of comparative leisure to the bustle of the town and city. In the valleys grow the sugar cane, cacao, bananas, plantains, and, in fact, all sorts of tropical fruits.

With its beautiful scenery, its almost perfect climate, its boundless exuberance and range of vegetable products, and consequent facilities for subsistence with the minimum of labor, Porto Rico may well be termed an earthly paradise. If that were all; if its people were intelligent and companionable; if its government were as mild and equable as its climate; and if there were united effort here tending toward the improvement of society and the amelioration of political burdens, then it might be so regarded. But, while nature has done everything for this island, and while a great portion of its 3,000 square miles can be put under cultivation, and there ought to be enough to subsist many more than its 750,000 inhabitants in comfort, the men and the race whom accident of discovery placed in power has done worse than nothing for its development. Poverty exists everywhere, since the taxes are so oppressive, administered, as the government is, by alien office-holders, assisted by foreign soldiery.

As in Cuba, the people have been for centuries trodden under foot. They have groaned beneath the weight of their burdens, have in vain protested against their numberless outrages. If Cuba has been long regarded as Spain's milch cow, so also has Porto Rico, and that the latter has not already risen in successful revolt, is owing, not to the temper of the people, but to the impossibility for a revolution to succeed.

ABOUT HAY FEVER.

Season Is Approaching When Lots of People Will Suffer.

"The season is approaching," said a prominent physician to the writer recently, "when a great many people will suffer from what is known as hay fever, and as but few who are susceptible to the complaint know how to avoid, much less to cure, it, a few remarks about the nature and treatment of the ailment may not be uninteresting.

"Hay fever is a nervous affection usually, most prevalent during the spring and early summer, from which the poorer classes and more especially those living in populous towns rarely, if ever, suffer. It is known only to the educated, whose nervous systems are highly developed, and, though not in any sense dangerous, it is at all times very irritating and troublesome. The smell of hay, grass, the pollen of flowers, the odor of fruit, dust or draught will generate the complaint or excite an attack in persons subject to it, but rain or damp weather invariably brings relief. At one time it was generally supposed that the odor of hay when being mown or carried could alone induce the affection, which is closely analogous to asthma, but recent observation shows that its prevalence is entirely independent of the existence of hay fields and is really a nervous derangement.

"A visit to the seaside, a trip to sea or residence in a populous town will, however, remove the asthmatic tendency, but one of the best remedies is tobacco smoke, retained in the mouth as long as possible and then ejected through the nostrils. The inhalation of the steam of ten drops of creosote in a pint of hot water is also good, or twenty drops of spirits of camphor to the same quantity of water makes a very effective inhalation. But the affection being a nervous one, tonics and nourishing diet are more essential than any of these palliatives, which merely afford temporary relief."—Washington Star.

Vacant Land in the United States.

The report of the Secretary of the Interior shows that only a little more than one-half of the public domain of the United States is either reserved or appropriated. The area still remaining vacant amounts to 591,343,953 acres, without including Alaska, which is supposed to embrace nearly 400,000,000 acres more. The entire area of the United States is placed at 1,835,017,692 acres. Of this, 741,702,365 acres is now owned by individuals or by corporations or by states, or has passed out of the control of the general government. The amount reserved for schools, Indians, military and naval purposes, railroad grants, parks, forest reservations, etc., including all territory reserved from sale for any purpose whatsoever, amounts to 132,441,744 acres, so that, taking the reserve land and the vacant land together, only about one-half of the area of the United States has actually passed out of control of the government, and if Alaska is included, the unoccupied area is larger by 300,000,000 acres than that which is occupied.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Soldiers' Traveling Then and Now.

"When soldiers in the service of the United States are traveling their comfort is pretty well looked after," says F. F. Horner, general passenger agent of the Nickel Plate.

"The government requires the railroad company to provide sleeping cars for the officers and also for the privates if it is possible to procure the cars. The Thirteenth Regiment, which left Buffalo, was carried in tourist cars, three men to a section, two occupying the lower berth and one the upper. Of course, if men are to be carried in very large numbers on short notice, such arrangements would be impossible, but even then we would have to provide them with ordinary day coaches. The volunteers who answer the present call will be carried in tourist cars if their journey lasts through a night. Otherwise they will go in day coaches. I don't think that any other country on earth looks after its soldiers so well. When I was soldiering we considered a freight car perfectly satisfactory. We generally had to walk. Being packed into a freight car on a hot summer day was rather uncomfortable, and the men usually secured ventilation by knocking holes in the sides of the car with the butts of their rifles. When the officers remonstrated, the boys would say that they were just making loopholes to shoot the 'Johnnies.'"—Buffalo Commercial.

How to Detect Chicory.

Coffee which is suspected of containing chicory may be sprinkled on the surface of a glass of clear water. Coffee floats, while the chicory, being heavy, sinks, leaving a brown trail through the water. Chicory is soft to the touch and will crumble between the fingers, unlike the hard, gritty particles of coffee.

Photographers, in their constant study of the face, find that the left side makes the more pleasant picture, and that the profile as seen from the left gives a more correct likeness than when viewed from the right.

EVER FOR FREEDOM.

When the Spanish vessels gather
Like the pirate fleets of yore,
When they seek to sweep the ocean
All along the Cuban shore;
When they strip themselves for action
And the eyes of nations stare,
You can bet the Yankee Squadron
And its fighters will be there.

When the Spanish nation topples
And its ruins rise in smoke,
When its starving, beggar subjects
Cast away a cruel yoke,
When the sun of freedom penetrates
The cloud of Cuba's care,
You can bet the Yankee Squadron
And its fighters will be there.

LIVING RENT FREE.

Philadelphia Man Who Went Broke Because He Did Not Pay.

A Philadelphia man has lived ten years in a house for which he paid no rent and no taxes. It belonged to the gas company, and he had paid rent regularly until the property of the company was transferred to the city. He says himself: "I don't remember how long it is since I stopped paying rent. It was when the gas office was on 7th street. I went there one day with my rent and offered it to Mr. White, who had charge of the gas company's real estate, but he refused to take it, and told me that it was to be paid at the city treasurer's office in the future. I took it up there and a young man there said he could not take it, as he couldn't find record of any such a house. He told me that they would notify me when they were ready to take my money. I went back to Mr. White and he advised me to go home and wait until I heard from them. Well, I waited." Nobody came to collect money until recently, when the city discovered its title and sent a man to collect. The tenant got a day to consider and promptly skipped. But his experience with a free rent does not seem to be satisfactory, if we may trust to his wife. "Yes" says she, resentfully, "he thought it was a snap, and look where he is now—no money, no business, looking for a job, and a family to support. He wouldn't take my advice and move to where business was good, but he hugged his snap and stuck here in that stagnant neighborhood and spent money on repairs for the house and didn't make any money."—Philadelphia Record.

NEED NO WAGONS.

Colombo Washerwomen Carry Great Loads of Linen on Their Heads.

The Chicago laundress with a good custom is quite apt to have her own cart and horse to collect the washing she does at home, says the Daily News. In Colombo it is different. There the washerwoman packs the linen into one huge bundle fully as large as herself and, putting it on her head, calmly walks off with it, in no wise inconvenienced by the weight. Usually she takes it to the bank of some stream and rubs the clothes on flat stones. Modern tubs and patent wringers have no charms for her.

No Hearse or Grave in Siam.

When a poor man dies in Siam he is not taken to the grave in a plumed hearse, with friends following behind in ninety-seven carriages at $6 to $8 apiece. He is bundled into a box and carried by a couple of men to the place where the buzzards wait for him, and that is the last of him.

CARRIED TO WHERE BUZZARDS WAIT.

United States Legation in Berlin.

The United States government has been inquiring through the proper channel as to the cost of purchasing or erecting its own buildings for the embassies and legations and several of the large consulates-general in Europe. It may astonish many to learn that Berlin was found the most expensive capital in the world, so far as the cost of real estate and of buildings was concerned. The only really suitable building found there for the purpose would cost $800,000. The Russian embassy building in Berlin, which is located Unter den Linden, and which is, indeed, a veritable palace, so spacious and stately is it, would cost about $4,000,000 to build to-day, ground and all. But it is, too, roomy and elegant enough to have served repeatedly for traveling quarters for Russian Czars passing through Berlin. What a miserable contrast forms the excuse for an office which the United States embassy occupies in Berlin, in Kronen strasse, a street of small shops. In the basement of the building is a barber shop, on the ground floor a wine and schnapps shop, and above the embassy offices reside a score of private persons.

THE MEDICAL PANNIER.

Mammoth Docks.

The marine docks at Portsmouth, England, are the vastest in the world, covering more than 300 acres, and employing some 10,000 men. Two of the largest docks are 000 feet long and 85 feet broad. All are what is known as stone graving docks. They are dug out of a sufficient depth, length and width, to enable vessels of a certain size to be admitted. They are constructed of granite and fitted with heavy gates; the vessel is floated into the dock and properly shored up on the keel blocks—the gates are closed—the water then pumped out. Such docks are all below the level of the dock yard. The walls are built with stairs like the seats in an amphitheater, so that workmen may go up and down; and great cranes lifting forty tons are used in handling materials. When a vessel is completed, all that is necessary to launch her is to open the gates, fill the dock, and she floats out without risk or trouble. The advantage of a number of docks at a station is the readiness with which a small vessel may be put into a small dock and a large vessel into a large one at once, this being done with so much economy of time and labor.—Providence Journal.

The Hand.

Montaigne gives a curious and interesting account of the intellectual uses to which the hand is put. He says: "With the hand we demand, we promise, we call, dismiss, threaten, entreat, supplicate, deny, refuse, interrogate, admire, reckon, confess, repent; express fear, express shame, express doubt; we instruct, command, write, encourage, swear, testify, accuse, condemn, acquit, insult, despise, defy, disdain, flatter, applaud, bless, abuse, ridicule, reconcile, recommend, exalt, regale, gladden, complain, afflict, discomfort, discourage, astonish, exclaim, indicate silence, and what not, with a variety and multiplication that keep pace with the tongue."

Ananias Outdone.

Two ghastly shapes came stealing from
A deep and ancient grave;
They heard the never-silent hum
That marks the human wave.

They heard the newsboys' strident shout,
And one did stop and buy;
And through the sheet thus hawked about
He scanned with eager eye.

And as he read the headlines o'er,
His face grew peaked and pale,
And when he'd read a little more,
He grasped the nearest rail.

"Sapphira, dear," he faintly cried,
"This war news, bold and brash,
Convinces me we never lied—
Our record's gone to smash!"
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Misinformation in Australia.

The following account of the proper way of reaching the Klondike is taken from an Australian newspaper: "The real starting point for the Klondike is Spokane. There the traveler takes a canoe, by which he voyages to Vancouver, B. C. At the latter point he takes a sailing vessel direct to Dawson City."

Queer Books.

In the British Museum there are books written on bricks, oyster shells, bones and flat stones, and manuscripts on bark, ivory, leather, iron, copper and wood.

It may be a good idea to belong to a lodge; you are sure then that someone will sit up with your remains when you are dead.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Fruit Prospects in the State—Boy Killed in a Powder House Explosion—Farmer Shot by a Young Constable—Fatal Fall Into a Well.

Indiana Fruit Prospects.

Returns on fruit crop prospects have been collected from seventy-five counties of this State by the agricultural experiment station of Purdue University. Twenty-four counties report the prospect for apples good, forty-two only fair, and nine poor. The only counties reporting a poor prospect for peaches are Dubois, Lawrence, Vanderburg, Floyd and Monroe; while Posey, Spencer, Perry, Harrison, Clark, Jefferson and Switzerland, all bordering on the Ohio river, report the prospect as good. Floyd, Lawrence, Monroe and Vanderburg report a short plum crop; Dubois, Harrison and Monroe report a poor pear crop. The cherry crop, so far as reported, is only fair. Grapes, blackberries and raspberries promise well, while strawberries were seriously injured by the drought of last season.

Constable Shoots to Kill.

At Ethel, Felix Gillitte shot and killed Harvey Tillman. Gillitte is a constable, and was levying upon Tillman's property when ordered off the farm. The farmer seized a hatchet and threatened to kill the constable, and refusing to heed his warning, was shot. Tillman was a Government pensioner and leaves a widow. Gillitte is unmarried and barely of age.

Killed at a Powder Factory.

A flash, a roar, a cloud of yellow smoke, and the sifting shed of the Economic Smokeless Powder Company, two miles from Hesseville, and thirty miles from Chicago, blew up one afternoon recently. One person was killed, Arthur E. Booth, 19 years old. The company lost a cheap shed and 300 pounds of shotgun powder. Financially the loss does not exceed $1,000.

Boy Falls Into a Well.

Edward, the 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Brown of Harrison township, fell through a defective covering into the well and was instantly killed, while at play with his little cousin. The boy's head struck a stone in the descent and was under the water when his body was reached.

Died on Operating Table.

Mrs. James Flannigan, a well-known woman, died on the operating table at St. Mary's hospital at Anderson, while undergoing a delicate surgical operation for the removal of cancerous growth. She was 50 years old.

Within Our Borders.

D. McDonald is working on a history of Indiana Masonry.

The suits against the Collett estate at Terre Haute have been compromised.

The Island Park Chautauqua will be held at Rome City July 27 to August 10.

John F. Sheridan was fatally injured at Kyana, by the overturning of a wrecking car.

Charles Antz has been appointed receiver of the Jeffersonville City Brewing Company.

John Stephens, grain merchant at Shelbyville, swallowed aqua ammonia by mistake and died.

At Terre Haute, Miss Tapscott, of Wetzell, Ill., committed suicide by stepping in front of a train.

It is asserted that Andrew Milburn, a farmer living near Flora, has not slept an hour in the past eight months.

Studebaker Bros.' Manufacturing Company shipped seventeen cars of ambulance wagons from South Bend to Mobile, Ala., for the use of the Government.

Two freight trains were wrecked at Ligonier, on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad. Both tracks were blocked. No lives were lost, but several people are reported injured.

The Postal Telegraph Company is extending a Chicago line down through the gas belt. The loop will take in Muncie, Marion, Logansport, Elwood, Alexandria and other gas belt cities, and catch the through east-and-west lines at Knightstown.

Theodore Miller writes to Shelbyville from Hutchinson, Kan., inquiring for Hugh Stanly, and giving proof of Stanly's having fallen heir to one-third of 900 acres of land near Hutchinson; also, one-third of $50,000. Stanly is supposed to be either in Illinois or Missouri.

The Clift & Williams Company, of Terre Haute, owners of a planing mill and contractors, made an assignment, with assets estimated at $60,000 and liabilities $45,000. A first mortgage on the plant for $12,500 is held by Rose Polytechnic Institute, and other preferred debts amount to $25,000.

Intervention by the Indiana labor commission and a consultation between the managers and the workers at the American plate glass plants in Madison County resulted in the strike and threatening trouble being settled by the company withdrawing the wage reductions announced. The strikers went to work at the old wages. The reductions in the wages of office employes and officers have not been changed, however, and they stand as announced, about a 50 per cent. cut.

The Clodfelter Interurban Railway, which was being built from Marion to Anderson, was sold to the Marion City Railway and Union Traction Company. The Clodfelter company has been at work on its line for nearly five years and has expended $121,000, and it was sold for less than $75,000. The cause of the failure of the company to complete the road was its inability to sell the bonds owing to the Marion street railway running a parallel line and the declaration of war. The new company will have cars running through to Anderson in sixty days.

Workmen erecting an elevator at Decker stretched a rope across the Evansville and Terre Haute track. The freight trains passed under, but Brakeman Jas. O'Maley did not see the rope and was dragged from the top of a car and cut to pieces under the wheels.

HOW RELIEF CAME.

From Cole County Democrat, Jefferson City, Missouri.

When la grippe visited this section, about seven years ago, Herman H. Eveler, of 811 W. Main street, Jefferson City, Mo., was one of the victims, and has since been troubled with the after effects of the disease. He is a well-known contractor and builder, a business requiring much mental and physical work. A year ago his health began to fail and he was obliged to discontinue work. That he lives to-day is almost a miracle. He says:

"I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and a general debility. My back also pained me severely.

"I tried one doctor after another and numerous remedies suggested by my friends, but without apparent benefit, and began to give up hope. Then I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People extolled in a St. Louis paper, and after investigation decided to give them a trial.

A Contractor's Difficulty.

"After using the first box I felt wonderfully relieved and was satisfied that the pills were putting me on the road to recovery. I bought two more boxes and continued taking them.

"After taking four boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I am restored to good health. I feel like a new man, and having the will and energy of my former days returned, I am capable of transacting my business with increased ambition.

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a wonderful medicine, and anyone that is afflicted with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, nervous prostration and general debility, will find that these pills are the specific.

"HERMAN H. EVELER."

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of May, 1897.

GREAT WHEAT CROP.

THIS YEAR'S YIELD WILL ECLIPSE ALL OTHERS.

Estimates Are The Amount Raised Will Be Double That of 1897—Totals in Middle, Western and Southern States Will Be Big.

In All 650,000,000 Bushels.

Indications are that the wheat crop of 1898 will be the greatest in the history of the country. From figures that are being collected and compiled by some of the big Chicago firms, based on the reports of experts in every section of the country, the oncoming wheat crop is estimated to exceed 650,000,000 bushels. All the conditions are reported as being of the most favorable nature, and while there is a decrease in acreage the total yield will be more than double that of 1897.

Kansas looms up as the banner State this year, an increase of 28 per cent in the acreage having been reported. Estimates on the yield vary all the way from 70,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels, while the combined crop of Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma is estimated at 160,000,000 bushels. Of this 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 bushels is credited to Oklahoma and Kansas will have 80,000,000 to 90,000,000 bushels.

As compared with the planting in Illinois in the fall of 1896, there has been a decrease of 16 per cent in the acreage, but in spite of this the conditions in the Sucker State are about the same as in Missouri, and the apparent decrease in acreage is discounted by the amount of wheat that was plowed up in the spring of last year. The 1897 crop in Illinois amounted to a little less than 10,000,000 bushels, whereas it is generally conceded that this year's crop will be nearly, if not fully, treble, or between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 bushels.

Texas will have a 20,000,000 bushel crop. Never before has the wheat looked so fine in the Lone Star State as it does now. The harvest will be unusually early, and agents writing to their houses here report that a great part of the crop will be harvested and ready for shipment in June. If any considerable amount of wheat comes in from Texas during June this, together with what will be received from other Southern States, will have a markedly bearish effect on the July wheat market.

Indiana will come to the front with a crop of 45,000,000 bushels. This is nearly 17,000,000 bushels better than last year's crop of 32,600,000 bushels, while the Government reports show a decrease of 2 per cent in the acreage planted this year. From Iowa and Michigan the reports are that the crops will probably be a little better than they were last year.

Missouri had a crop last year of 14,000,000 bushels. This year, according to estimates, it will yield between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 bushels.

In addition to this, all of the Southern States show largely increased acreage, as do also California and every one of the Eastern States. The aggregate increase in the acreage planted this year in the country at large as compared with that of the fall of 1896 is 5.7 per cent.

PRESBYTERIANS IN SESSION.

Annual Meeting of the General Assembly at Winona Lake, Ind.

The 110th session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church was called to order at Winona Lake, Ind. Rev. Sheldon Jackson, the retiring moderator, delivered the annual sermon. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe of Washington, D. C., was elected moderator. The only other candidate was Dr. Henry McCook of Philadelphia. Five hundred and fifty-eight delegates answered the roll call. Dr. Radcliffe was welcomed in a brief speech by Dr. Sheldon Jackson, the retiring moderator, and then assumed the duties of his office. Dr. Radcliffe accepted and spoke of the Presbyterian Church in glowing terms. He asked that in the work of this assembly past disaffections should be forgotten. The business of the church was to preach the truth, and its duty was to close its ranks, come together and march forward in the service of God.

A speech of welcome to the assembly was made by Hon. James A. Mount, Governor of Indiana. He spoke of the relations of the Presbyterian Church to the cause of liberty, illustrating it by historical illusions and events. In regard to the present war he said that it was reuniting the country as never before, so that soldiers from North and South are marching side by side. The hope was expressed that this was only symbolical of the reunion of Northern and Southern branches of the Presbyterian Church. This sentiment found such hearty reception as to evoke long applause. Dr. Radcliffe replied.

The board of freedmen, which has charge of the work of educating the negroes in the United States, was reported as not in as flourishing a condition as could be desired. The debt has been steadily increasing, last year's deficiency being $1,875. Fourteen schools have been closed, and the school year has been reduced from eight months to six months. The board has been forced to abandon all improvements, as money was lacking. Money received during the past year amounted to $130,313, and the expenditures, including that paid to annuitants, amounted to $131,515. The debt of the board in 1893 was $25,000, and since that time it has been increasing at the rate of $6,000 a year. The cause of this growing deficiency is the lack of contributions from the churches.

The report of the standing committee on the Board of Education showed that on account of the condition of the treasury and the inability of the church to press new work, either in this country or in foreign lands, a conservative policy had been adopted in regard to the encouragement and assistance of new candidates. There has been a fear in church circles that the board has been the means of swelling the numbers of the ministry in an undue degree, but the report cleared away any such fears. In fact, there should be a fear in the opposite direction, as the whole number of new candidates aided by the board in the past year was only 153, while the average yearly loss to the church by death is 174. The ministers are being received from outside at the rate of ninety-one annually. Two years ago the number enrolled by the board was 1,037. This year it was only 814. The board hoped next year to make the amount given to each candidate $80, as it was two years ago. The various presbyteries recommended 846 men for aid, and only thirty-two were refused.

The woman's board of foreign missions held its annual meeting in connection with the general assembly. The principal addresses were made by Mrs. W. S. Nelson, Miss C. B. Sharp, Miss Ellen C. Parsons, Mrs. Robert F. Coyle, Dr. J. C. R. Ewing and Mrs. George S. Hays. All the addresses were on the general topic of foreign missions, and one of the most interesting features was a missionary's hour, conducted by Mrs. S. J. Rhea, a former missionary to Persia. Twenty missionaries were present from as many distant lands, some in the native costume, and the hour was instructive as well as pleasant.

HEALTH NOTES.

Useful Things to Know by Those Who Are Well and Those Who Are Sick.

A good complexion depends largely on the proper circulation of good blood throughout the body. Good blood depends upon the assimilation of digested food of the right quality.

Anything which interferes with the proper circulation of the blood tends to make the complexion poor; for example, tight lacing, tight shoes, tight neckbands and tight waistbands. Many cases of red nose are due to some form of pressure.

Red hands, too, are often due to some impediment in the circulation of the blood; for example, tight gloves often produce redness and coarseness of the hands. In early youth redness of the hands is as often as not due to impeded circulation and to their exposure to cold winds after they have been washed.

When redness of the hands proceeds from a chapped skin—a very frequent source of trouble—the remedy is to dry the hands very thoroughly and to strengthen and soften the cuticle by means of glycerine rubbed on while the hands are moist, and also of putting on and wearing loose kid gloves at night.

Glycerine is a safer application than vaseline, because vaseline increases the growth of hair on the face and hands.

A simple but effective remedy to remove the swelling and inflammation of a sprain which causes great pain consists in three drops of turpentine and the yolk of an egg, beaten together very thoroughly. Rub the sprained part every morning and night with this.

Introductions.

Do not presume that promiscuous introductions are agreeable. You should be sure that the parties to be introduced are at least willing to be made acquainted. The person of inferior rank should be presented to those of higher rank; the younger to those of superior age; and gentlemen to the ladies in every case. No extended formula is necessary in introductions. A short, courteous presentation of one to the other is all that is needed. Nor should excessive adulation be indulged, or gushing expressions of pleasure, etc. When a famous person is introduced, a reference to his fame is not out of place.

Because of an introduction, neither party should presume that the acquaintances shall be continued; that must depend on the encouragement in that direction, which either party may be pleased to give. A lady to whom you have been introduced may, at her option, omit to recognize you afterward. This is no discourtesy; it is her proper privilege.

In introducing parties, a formula entirely proper is, "Mr. Webb, permit me to introduce to you to my friend, Mr. Carns." Then turning to the friend presented add, "Mr. Carns, my friend, Mr. Webb." Gentlemen bow, and shake hands on introduction. If introduced to a lady, let her make the advance in the handshaking; and whether she extend her hand or not, the gentleman should bow.

Let all handshaking be cordial, but not excessive. A mere extension of a few fingers, or a listless offering of the hand, is as far from the proper act as a grasp that splits a glove, and crushes a lady's hand.

The Boomerang's Curious Flight.

Some German scientists, seeking to discover the secret of the boomerang's curious flight, caused a party of Australian natives to give an exhibition of boomerang throwing at Munster. The instruments used were of two sizes, the larger being a slender crescent about two feet long, two and a quarter inches wide, and a quarter of an inch thick, made of an extraordinarily heavy Australian ironwood. This boomerang was jerked up into the air about one hundred yards, when it flew straight away, then turned to the left and returned in a curved line back to the thrower, whirling around constantly and whizzing unpleasantly. One badly directed projectile fell through a spectator's hat with a cut as clean as that of a razor. A Weimar manufacturer, who has made some eleven thousand toy boomerangs, believes that the mystery of shape lies in the sharper curvature in the middle, with unequal length of the two arms, which must be made of equal weight by unequal thickness. The peculiarity of motion is due to the difference in the length of the arms, which diverges the curve of rotation from the circular. It is also supposed that the variation of friction from the air affects the result.

Tired of High Living.

A member of the police force came across a boy the other day who was wheeling home a load of oyster cans and bottles, and, curious to know what use the lad could put them to, he made a direct inquiry:

"Going to throw them over into our back yard," replied the boy. "I took two loads home yesterday."

"But what do you use them for?"

"It's a trick of the family," grinned the lad.

"How trick?"

"I'd just as lief tell," continued the boy, as he spit on his hands to resume hold on the barrow. "We are going to have some relashuns come in from the country. We may not have much to eat, but if they see these cans and bottles and boxes they'll think we've had isters, champagne, figs and nuts till we've got tired of 'em and are living on bread and taters for a healthy change."

The officer scratched his ear like a man who had received a new idea.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

He that is always calm is always brave.

A Valuable New Book on the War.

The war with Spain is the topic now uppermost in the minds of the people, and, as the navy is playing the most important part in this memorable conflict, every one is anxious to follow the movements of the fleets and acquire authentic information regarding the construction, speed and armament of each vessel. The most accessible source from which to obtain a thorough knowledge regarding American warships is "The Official Photographs of the United States Navy." This is a handsome book, with illuminated cover, containing over 200 views made by E. H. Hart, official naval photographer, together with a large colored map of the East and West Indies, showing all the Spanish possessions and by means of which the reader can locate the position of each squadron. It is impossible to enumerate the wide range of subjects covered without naming them all, but it can be said that no feature that is of any importance is omitted. Torpedo boats, torpedo boat destroyers, cruisers, battleships, gunboats, monitors, rams, dynamite cruisers, dispatch vessels and other war craft are shown, exhibiting the American navy as it exists to-day. A complete description of the construction, displacement, size, speed, batteries, armor, crew and cost of each boat enables the reader to form an accurate estimate of our fighting strength. Included with these are photographs of the leading Spanish men-o'-war, also fully described. Perhaps the most interesting portions of the book are views of the Maine, taken before the disaster in Havana harbor, showing the life and discipline aboard the battleship, together with portraits of the officers and crew, supplemented by photographs taken after the explosion, depicting the divers at their work, and other incidents in connection with this sad and memorable event. Taken all in all, it is doubtful if so much in the way of immense public interest and concern and so opportune in the scope covered was ever presented at such a low price. The book is sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of twenty-five cents, by Chicago Newspaper Union, 93 South Jefferson street, Chicago, Ill.

"I DO MY OWN WORK."

So Says Mrs. Mary Rochiette of Linden, New Jersey, in this Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"I was bothered with a flow which would be quite annoying at times, and at others would almost stop.

"I used prescriptions given me by my physician, but the same state of affairs continued.

"After a time I was taken with a flooding, that I was obliged to keep my bed. Finally, in despair, I gave up my doctor, and began taking your medicine, and have certainly been greatly benefited by its use.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has indeed been a friend to me.

"I am now able to do my own work, thanks to your wonderful medicine. I was as near death I believe as I could be, so weak that my pulse scarcely beat, and my heart had almost given out. I could not have stood it one week more, I am sure. I never thought I would be so grateful to any medicine.

"I shall use my influence with any one suffering as I did, to have them use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Delicate Children

They do not complain of anything in particular. They eat enough, but keep thin and pale. They appear fairly well, but have no strength. You cannot say they are really sick, and so you call them delicate.

What can be done for them? Our answer is the same that the best physicians have been giving for a quarter of a century. Give them of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It has most remarkable nourishing power. It gives color to the blood. It brings strength to the muscles. It adds power to the nerves. It means robust health and vigor. Even delicate infants rapidly gain in flesh if given a small amount three or four times each day.

Scott's Emulsion

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse, He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She contin ued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at H. B. ANOTHER CHAIN

Started.—This Time the Messages Are Words of Praise Gratefully Given by Users of

The public remembers that a short time ago a chain of letters was started for some worthy purpose, which reached such a magnitude that the whole world talked of it. A chain of oral messages has been started with also a worthy object, but different, for the reason that each one who participates reaps a benefit. The messages sing the praise of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer in the treatment of all nervous troubles and diseases resulting from debilitated nerves. Mrs. Geo. Halstead, Toledo, Ohio, has added over fifty links to the chain by telling that many of her afflicted friends what Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has done for her. These are her words: "Last spring I was all run down, nervous and very sick; due probably to the change of weather. The doctor was called and he treated me for a long time without much benefit. I then concluded to try Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer because I had heard such favorable reports from its use. I commenced to improve at once. I told the doctor what I was using and the beneficial effect, to which he replied, "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is a good medicine, keep on using it;" which I did and was soon up and about as well as ever. I have recommended it to over fifty people and results have been entirely satisfactory."

FIRST ARMY ABROAD.

From San Francisco yesterday was made the first shipment of Volunteers, as a body that ever left the United States for a foreign war. The California and Oregon militia started for Manila. Regular soldiers had already sailed and more will follow, of both kinds. It was a great day when the state troops sailed down the bay. Everybody was out to bid them good by, and many boats with people followed them till they passed out of the bay. It opens a new feature in our national history to send an army to a foreign country, especially to one so far away. It is a week's trip. A vast amount of supplies and ammunition are taken along.

"YANKEE DEWEY."

Oh! Yankee Dewey had a fleet,
And gallant Yanko sailors,
No fear knew he, this brave Dewey,
Of guns, or mines, or Weylers.

CHORUS.

Yankee Dewey keep it up,
Yankee Dewey steady,
Keep your eye and powder dry,
And with your guns be ready.

From Hong Kong Dewey's fleet was first,
With coal he first did fill her,
Then said "My men we'll coal again,
"Off yonder, in Manilla."

The Spanish ships fled to the forts,
But Dewey came right after,
His gun's black lane, called out the Maine,
His shells shrieked awful laughter.

The Spanish saw no loop-hole there,
If to the tree they hied them,
They found Yankee soldiers every where,
With pop-guns to surprise them.

CHORUS.

Yankee Dewey kept it up,
Yankee Dewey steady,
He kept his eye and powder dry,
And with his guns was ready.

AT LAFAYETTE.

In common with the most of the other democratic editors of the state, we went to Lafayette Thursday to attend the meeting of the State Association. Lafayette is a grand old town, but we have not time and space to speak of it fully. We were not in time for the social features of Thursday evening but on Friday all went out to the Soldiers' Home, to Purdue and to the famous Tippecanoe Battle ground,

The Home is about four miles up the river on the west side and is reached by a trolley line, and also by a fine wagon road along the river bank amid the most beautiful scenery. The Home is on a high plateau of ground, covered recently with native forests but now being made beautiful for its present purpose. We wish to speak of it more fully some other day, as we feel that our people do not know as much of this grand institution as they should. We found there several acquaintances. Henry J. Crooks who for many years was trustee of Wilmington township is there and we had a good visit with him. Dr. Theo. Sargent formerly of Garrett is the post surgeon and Ethan Allen, a brother of Geo. Allen who used to live here is assistant surgeon. Mr. Crooks showed us through his building the home of "Old Soldiers," while the Doctor and his wife took us through the hospital and also showed us the romantic stretch of country with its wooded ravines and hills and its fine views. The visiting editors were given a fine lunch in the dining hall and we wish to say right here it was prepared by Fred McNabb, formerly of Butler but now chief cook at the Soldiers' Home. He is evidently a master of the trade. He was called up from the kitchen to visit a few minutes with his old friends and was surprised and pleased to meet them

On the return we visited Purdue University. Here we met our old time fellow school worker. President Smart, also Instructor James Hoffman of the iron working department, Harry Hays of Garrett and he went with us to the rooms of Paul Davenport, but he had just then gone down town. He has a pleasant home, however, the lady we met there, being evidently a person of culture and refinement. We also met Prof. Latta, who sometimes comes up here to visit Mr. Husselman. We are under obligations to all the gentlemen named, for much information and sight seeing, as are all the members of the association. For the same reasons noted in speaking of the Soldiers Home, we shall give a separate article on Purdue, which has always had a high place in our estimation.

At five p. m we took a Monon special train and went to the Tippecanoe battle ground. There on the beautiful grassy slope we sat and listened to the speaker, Hon. B. Wilson Smith of Lafayette, who gave us in detail all the incidents of this important conflict. This may be made into a separate article that will be valuable to the student old or young of the history of Indiana and the northwest and we hope to so stir up our legislature that a suitable monument may soon mark the site of the burial place of these heroes who rescued Indiana from the tomahawk and scalping knife of the savages.

In conclusion it is the sentiment of all the editors and their families present that the citizens of Lafayette and especially the newspapar men headed by W. Bent Wilson of the Journal earned our heartiest thanks by their unbounded kindness and hospitality.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts. per bottle at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. 6

YANKEE DEWEY.

Yankee Dewey, who is he?
Yankee Dewey Dandy,
Yankee Dewey went to sea
And done them up quite handy.
He took their ships and took their forts
And then he cut the cable,
And then he said, "Come on you Dons,"
But they were quite unable.

Tormenting

"I suffered for years with tetter. On arising my hands were stiff and my fingers crooked. They would crack all over and the blood would run from them. The doctor ordered me to give up work. Then a friend said, 'Try AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.' I took in all eight bottles, which completely healed me."

FROM COMPANY K.

Particulars of Their Trip to the South.

CHICKAMAUGA, PARK, GA.
Co. K. Headquarters, May 21, 1898.

EDITOR DAILY COURIER:—The past week has presented so many changes of scene experiences and incidents it has been impossible for me to send in a letter. We were (the 157th regiment) assembled in heavy marching order at Indianapolis last Sunday at 1 o'clock p. m. and were marched company at a time to the Colonel's Headquarters. We marched for Indianapolis at 4 o'clock, arriving there at about 6 o'clock. As we passed through the city we were greeted with cheers, God bless you boys, chiming of bells cannon salutes and other enthusiastic demonstrations, all of which made the boys happy and feel that it was "good to be a soldier." The regiment with Battery "A" was divided into four section, Company K being in the third leaving Indianapolis at about 8:30 arriveing at Louisville, Kentucky at about 12 o'clock where we took the L. & N. railroad for Chatanooga, Tenn It was most too dark for the boys to enjoy the magnificent scenery which lies between Louisville and Bowling Green, Kentucky but had all are could drink in when we entered the mountainous country in Tennessee. It is impossible to give even an idea of the grandeurs of these mountains. After we passed through Murfresborough we began to intersect the mountains, one moment we were in a tunnel another we were looking down into the valleys and gorges and traveling through the table lands. But none of these compares with Lookout Mount, in the shadow of which we traveled for several miles. When we reached the point opposite Chatanooga, where the most famous battles of the civil war occured an object lesson was forcebly presented. "If our fathers made that ascent what ought we to do on level ground?" We arrived at Chatanooga, at about 3 o'clock p. m. where we remained on side track, until next morning when we pulled to a station called Rossville, which is at the entrance of the park and directly on the Tennessee and Georgia state line. We marched from Rossville to our camping place which is about 4½ miles.

The first night after our arrival we were compelled to sleep without quarters as tents had not been issued. The past week has been a big rush, thousands of soldiers from all over the country have been pouring in and will continue to come in during the greater part of next week We are now settling down again to regular camp life. The weather is very hot and the roads dusty. When we arrived here the national pikes, which intersect the park, were hard and firm but now since there has been so much heavy hauling they are very dusty and quite disagreeable to travel upon. The boys stood the change of climate very well and there is exceptionally little sickness, Company K is camping on the grounds where the 105th Ohio Infantry camped and fought on Sept. 19 and 20, 1863. It is a very hard matter to know just where to commence in describing the park, there is such a profusion of monuments, cannons, war relics and historical spots and the only advice and information we can give is to come and see for yourself. You will never regret it. There is such a feast of reminiscences. Beautiful monuments of original designs mark the places where our fathers stood in 1863 in battle array. These battlefields seem like "Holy Ground" and the monuments too sacred to approach There is not a tree of any size but what is scarred by bullets, shell or cannon balls. The same cannons that were in service then stand as near as possible where they did in 1863, and in several places there is a collection of all kinds of war relics. How we wish our fathers who fought here could come down and relate the experiences had at this or that spot. The government could not have selected a more appropriate place for the soldier boys. Every scene is a stimulent and will tend to create a greater appreciation for their country and a deeper respect for those who preserved it. Long may these monuments stand and may they impress the future America the debt she owes the heroes of 1863.

Water is the only draw back here. Our regiment has to carry water over a mile, and you might imagine how much it is appreciated when it arrives The government is having several wells drilled. Some of the boys wanted to know why they did not have wells "drove" for each company. They did not realize that most of the wells in this part of the country were drilled through large veins of rock. Well water here is of a very poor quality, which is generally the case in pine regions. Quite an amusing incident occurred the morning we were marching to our camping place from Rossville. All of us boys were under the impression that no one could live in the south without having chills and fever, and you might imagine what a demand chill medicine would be in. We were just nearing the summit of a long steep grade, when we encountered one of the oddest pair you ever met, an ox hitched to an old slab sided wagon and a tall yellow haired youth sitting on the vehicle, which had some old quilts over the top of the bed. Of course the boys were "taking everything in, in sight" and immediately inquired as to what was under cover, the youth readily replied that it was chill medicine and worth 25 cents a bottle (1 pint.) nearly all of the boys laid in a supply and began to sample it and you can imagine their amazement when it prove to be "Mountain Dew" in other words, Moonshine whiskey. The boys know a "good thing" when they see it.

Our nearest postoffice is at Lytle, Ga , a railroad town about two miles from our camp We have a regimental postoffice and Chaplain Medbury is postmaster. The postoffice is situated near the Colonel's quarters, and occupies a large tent. The office is conducted like any office in the city. There are four employed besides the chaplain. One young man attends to business in the office in the forenoon and is relieved in the afternoon by another young man. The mail is collected and delivered like city mail, and one man is required to work only half of the day. George Everett has been selected as one of the mail carriers out of the regiment and feels quite honored by the appointment, as there is quite a great deal of responsibility connected with the work. There has been over $2,000 sent in money orders this week, and the mail carriers have the responsibility of procuring them As the office is not a commissioned one there is double the work connected with it. Anyone wishing to send a money order or registered letter will make out a skeleton order, the mail carrier then takes money and skeleton order and gets a genuine in its place, returns it to the regimental office where the sender can procure same While this imposes a great deal of work upon post office employees, yet it is done right and saves the boys quite a lot of trouble.

Company K camps just south of an old cabin that was in the center of conflicts, during the civil war, and where a federal colonel and 25 soldiers were captured by the confederates. About two and a half miles southwest of here is a lookout tower about 150 feet high. It stands upon a high cliff overhanging Chickamauga river (the place where the soldiers bathe) and where Gen. Senion Bolliner Buckner, Hart county, Kentucky, who was a candidate for vice-president on the national ticket last year, had his army stationed during the Chickamauga Battle. Indiana monuments are numerous here. Everybody down here has heard of the Hoosier fighters and never fail to give them a cheer when they meet them. We only hope that Indiana will not lose her reputation. From the present indication of things we stand a good chance of having our metal tried and pretty soon too. The boys are "itching for a fight."

A colonel of the confederacy has promised the 157th regiment a free excursion to Lookout Mountain tomorrow but it will be impossible for the whole regiment to go at once and it will be arranged for the boys to go in batallions. It is rather doubtful whether the whole regiment will get to go even in batallions as the offer will hold good only on Sundays and we are not liable to stay here long. We had inspection today and the regiment will be issued what there is short. The boys appreciate the old reliable COURIER and are profuse in their thanks and wish her great success. The boys all send regards to their friends and relatives.

Yours Respectfully,
PRIVATE.

NEWS ABOUT THE WAR.

Thursday's Daily.

Reports of the bombarding of the forts at Santiago continue to come in, though our government still claims they have no reliable news. It is certain we think that there was some sort of a battle between our ships and the forts. And the insurgent troops are closing in on the town.

It is now pretty certain that an elaborate plan for invading and occupying Cuba with a strong force. Besides the troops already set apart for that duty more are quietly being got ready.

Our own boys of the 157th did not start for Tampa till 9 a. m. yesterday as cars were not ready till then.

The great Bank of Spain that does the fiancial business for the nation is having a big run on its stock of silver. Depositors fear they will be compelled to take paper.

News is too conflicting and uncertain to depend on.

Friday's Daily.

Several plans for the invasion of Cuba have been under consideration. These include the landing of one army on the southeast coast to assist the rebels and our fleet to take Santiago. At the same time we may land another army across on the north side, opposite Santiago, to draw attention in that direction. And so, between the two, we would cut the island clear across, and have undisputed possession of the east third of it. At the same time we may land a force farther west, say at Havana, or still west of that, so as to cut a slice off the west end. We could then establish ourselves in the interior allow the cane and tobacco plantations and other industries to start up, fix up the roads and railroads so we could move rapidly to any point needed. Cuba would then be under control. At the same time we could take Porto Rico bodily and hold it. And if we get Porto Rico, we are under no obligations to give it back at the end of the war. It should remain ours.

It is also likely that we will hold one of the best of Phillippine Islands, say the island of Manila, on which the city is situated.

All the military attaches of the foreign ministers at Washington have gone to Tampa, to be ready to go with our troops to Cuba. This is done by us and all other nations, when there is a war to be reached in which we can learn something. And there will be an unusual amount of new points in this war.

The bankrupt condition of Spain, may force her to stop the war at an early date. A war cannot be carried on long without money.

One difficulty our fleet had to encounter at Santiago was the narrow and crooked channel into the bay. In one place it turns so short that a big cruiser would have to be handled very carefully to keep from striking the rocky shores. And in several places the channel is so narrow that only one big ship could go at a time. As the city is several miles up the bay, it can be seen how difficult it is to reach it with a fleet.

At the bombardment Sunday, one of the Spanish cruisers came out of the bay near enough to be seen and to fire shells over the hills at our ships. But she did not hit anyone.

At least thirty ships are now engaged to carry troops to Cuba. It is believed a heavy force will be at once put down at Santiago to assist in capturing the place before the rainy season is fully on. It begins about now and will last more or less till some time in August.

Another detachment of the volunteers at Chickamauga has left for Tampa. It is now believed that they will soon leave Tampa and go to Porto Rico.

And now Sampson is lost again and no one seems to know where he is. We suggest that a Spanish fleet could probably find him if it cared to.

The Spaniards at Havana threaten to cut the cable from there to Key West if we cut any more cables over on the south side of the island.

Saturday's Daily.

Lew. Wallace is talked of for one of the major-generals.

Our government is likely to object against the people of France sending military supplies into Spain. Every day, the trains crossing the Pyrennees mountains between France and Spain are openly loaded with arms, ammunition etc, needed by the Spanish army or navy. Of course this is the work of private citizens who have the goods to sell, but the French goverment should prevent it.

One great object of the bombardment of Santiago the first time. was to locate the forts around the harbor. They were concealed on the wooded slopes.

It is now plain that both Sampson and Schley, have been keeping at a distance from the places where they had cables on which news could be sent. That accounts for the slowness of the news we have been getting.

The attempt to annex Hawaii goes so slow, that an effort is to be made to attach it as a rider to the bill for raising war revenue. It is believed that if we ever need it, is right now, when we have need for a stopping place of our own, as wego across the Pacific to the Phillipine Islands.

Work of destroying the Santiago forts has begun in earnest. We cannot get into the harbor and get at their ships, until the forts are silenced and the mines in the channel rendered useless. The second bombardment, which is said to have taken place Friday, shows that we have a hard job ahead. Cheap vessels are sent ahead, so that none of the big war ships will be destroyed. The reported destruction of the coal supply ship Merrimac was was brought about in this way.

It may be very annoying to our people to have to wait several days for authentic news, but it is necessary. Just what our forces are intending to do, should not be given out in advance as the enemy will know just when and where to expect us.

Indiana is to furnish one regiment and some odd companies on this latest call. Several companies are already organized, and partly used in forming two or three regiments. Gov Mathews has one regiment about ready, and wants the governor to appoint him Colonel.

Indiana colored men are raising several companies, and the idea seems to be popular as it is believed colored troops will stand the climate in Cuba better than white men. This may be true of colored men in the extreme south, but we have doubts in reference to negroes who lived a generation or two in the north.

At last our government owns it has received new of the first attack on Santaigo. Now since the second attack of Friday morning, we suppose they will admit that things begin to look earnest down there.

A board of inquiry will look into the causes of our war ship Columbia sinking the British merchantman.

In the first attack on Santiago, not a shot struck us, but in the last one it is believed we lost several men.

The first reports from Santiago, are necessarily of a Spanish character, as they control the cable lines that get news first.

THE PILL THAT WILL.

WHAT SPANIARDS THINK

The Chicago Times Herald has collected a few extracts which will give a fair idea of the Spaniards' conception of the "Yankee Pigs" as they choose to call Americans:

One of the leading journals of Madrid, the Imparcial, editorially remarked on April 2:

It is a fact well known to all European statesman that only by means of armed force stationed in the late confederate states has the Washington government been able to preserve the semblance of peace. Even now the new generation of the new confederacy is but waiting for the word to revolt. When war is declared General Lee, who has been consul general at Havana, and who was kicked out of Cuba by Governor General Blanco, will raise the standard of revolt and the old southern confederacy. This Lee is the same Lee who was general-in-chief of the civil war in 1850 to 1855, and whose surrender to General Lincoln in the last-named year broke the revolution. His acts at Havana were for the purpose of plunging the government into war with the Kingdom of Spain, at which time he and his followers would rise against Senor Mackindle.

El Heraldo de Madrid furnishes this valuable bit of information concerning the United States troops.

All the troops of the Yankees are in the far western part of the country, many thousand miles from the Alantic coast. There are only a few thousand men all told, and they are ill paid and ill fed, and not willing to fight. To utilize this force it will be necessary to bring it to the eastern seaboard. There is but one railway by which it can be transported, and that is an old and poorly constructed affair. At one place this railroad passes over Niagara Falls, a cataract 1,000 feet high, near Labrador. At last accounts the bridge at this place was in a very dangerous condition. It need surprise no one to hear that some agency had made it still more so.

El Tiempo prints this special dispatch from Havana.

Word has just been received here that the Indians are rising against the yankees in Illinois, Ohio, and other places The farmers are petitioning the government to protect them from the bloodthirsty savages, who are burning houses and killing on every side. Troops are asked for at Colorado, in the State of Denver, and at St. Louis (San Luis) in Missipa.

News is brought to us that Buffalo Bill, a notorious outlaw and dealer of a band of half-breeds, has risen against the American government, and is burning towns near his birthplace in New York.

El Diario truthfully says: "It will no doubt surprise our readers to learn that the Yankee President Maggioly, is a naturalized Chinaman, having been born in Canton."

El Pais draws this beautiful pen picture of the United States:

The country is not fit to live in. The climate is execrable. When it is not sleeting or snowing the heat is almost unbearable. Avalanches are frequent all at times, and these threaten the principal cities. As for the people, besides the few whites engaged in business along the eastern shore, the remainder of the country is one vast plain, covered with Indians called cowboys, and great herds of roaming cattle.

A GREAT DEAL

of unnecessary expenditure of time and money may be saved if you will only keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the house. Nine-tenths of all ordinary sickness is from the stomach; keep that organ in proper condition and all will be well. Syrup Pepsin is a specific. Trial size bottles 10c, large sizes 50c and $1.00, of F. E. Davenport.

EXPENSE OF THE WAR

To give our readers an idea of what even this small war will cost. We copy from a report of the work in Congress, Thursday.

The House practically without debate, passed today the urgency deficiency bill providing for emergency expenses of the army and navy departments incident to the war. It was based upon estimates received recently from the departmetns, and carries items contemplated in the Philippine expedition and the early movement upon Cuba.

A bill was also passed providing for the establishment of portoffices at military posts and camps.

Mr. Cannon, from the committee on appropriations, presented the urgency deficiency bill. In committee of the whole he explained the presentation of the measure. He said it was the policy of the committee on appropriations to hold back the general deficiency bill until practically the close of the session in order to catch up all items that may develop as necessary up to the latest moment of the session. Meantime the present bill was urgent and had been reported for present consideration, because its items could not wait upon the general deficiency bill. Incidentally he estimated the appropriations already made on account of the war and likely to develop as essential, including the first six months of the coming fiscal year, at $350 000,000 In response to a question from Mr. Dingley, Mr. Cannon said the war would cost approximately $600,000,000 provided it should continue one year.

IMMEDIATE NEED OF $100,000.

Mr. Cannon stated that there was $100 000 of the money called for by the bill absotutely necessary to put into the hands of an official within a day or two for immediate action.

The bill incorporates the more urgent of the war estimates submitted to the house yesterday by Secretary Alger, whose explanation of which called forth the significant official letter transmitted therewith. It also includes an emergency appropriated of $10,000,000 for the navy. The items appropriated follow:

Contigent expenses of the army incident to the expedition to the Phillippines, to be expended under the direction of the commanding general of the Philippine islands, in his discretion, for such purposes as he may deem best in the execution of his duties under the orders of the president and for such objects as are now appropriated for; to be available until expended, $100'000.

Expeditionary force to Cuba, machinery, equipments, etc., $350,000.

Signal service of the army, $195,000.

Subsistence department, $5,000,000.

Medical department, $50,000.

Naval establishment for emergency fund to meet any contingency that cannot possibly be foreseen, but which constantly arises under existing conditions, $10,000.000

The bill also carries $150.000 for the torpedo defense of Manila harbor, Philippine islands. Under the head of naval establishment, besides the item of $10,000,000 emergency fund, the bill also carries $1,000,000 for the bureau of supplies and accounts and $1,000,000 for clothing and small stores for issue to the navy. The appropriations are to be available until Dec. 31 next.

A Narrow Escape

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store. Reguler size 50c and $1 00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Spanish Chief of Staff Boards the New York Under White Flag.

Reports the Heroes on the Merrimac as Safe.

They Are Held as Prisoners of War by the Spaniards.

Capt. Gridley, Wounded in the Battle of Manila in Command of Flagship, Is Dead.

Hobson and His Men.

A dispatch dated off Santiago de Cuba, via Mole St. Nicholas, Hayti, says: All members of the Merrimac expedition are safe. Only two of them were slightly injured. Lieut. Hobson was not hurt. All the Merrimac's men are held as prisoners of war. The news of their wonderful escape was sent to Rear Admiral Sampson by Admiral Cervera, the Spanish Admiral being so struck with the courage of the Merrimac's crew that he thought Admiral Sampson should know that they had not lost their lives. Admiral Cervera's chief of staff, Capt. Oviedo, boarded the New York under a flag of truce bearing the announcement of the safety of the Merrimac's men and returned with a supply of provisions and money for the prisoners.

A Hero Gone.

Washington special: Capt. Charles V. Gridley, commander of the cruiser Olympia, one of the heroes of the brilliant victory at Manila, is the first American officer of great prominence whose death is a direct result of the existing war. As commander of Admiral Dewey's splendid flag ship Gridley achieved distinction in the battle of Manila Bay. He fought the ship from the conning tower, while Dewey directed the movements of the squadron from the bridge. It was not known for several weeks after the engagement that Gridley had suffered from it; even now the precise nature is not disclosed.

Prize Sought by Germany.

The Shanghai Mercury, whose reporter said he represents the London Central News, prints the following dispatch from Manila:

"The Germans are slobbering over the Spanish here. They pretend to sympathize with them, but what they really want is possession of the Carolines. The Spanish Captain General informs me that a German ship desired to land provisions for the Spaniards, but Rear Admiral Dewey flatly refused."

Title for Mrs. Gladstone.

London special: The St. James' Gazette says it learns that a proposal made in influential circles and backed by the Liberal leaders is afoot with the object of conferring a title on the widow of William Ewart Gladstone.

It is suggested that Mrs. Gladstone be created Countess of Liverpool and that another member of the family be created Viscount Hawarden.

Whigham Is Given Liberty.

Havana special: The English newspaper correspondents, Whigham and Robinson, recently captured on Cuban soil after having landed on the coast from a yacht, have been released from custody, owing to the representations made in their behalf by Alexander Gollan, the British Consul here.

Winstorm Visits Brainerd.

Brainerd, Minn., was visited by a terrible storm, accompanied by rain and hail, doing thousands of dollars of damage to property. The wind swept through the residence portion of the city, wrecking outbuildings, uprooting shade trees, demolishing store fronts and tearing off roofs.

Run Over and Killed.

The 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Hunt, residing about three miles east of South Charleston, Ohio, on the London pike, was run over by a loaded wagon and killed.

Coin Seigniorage.

The Senate has agreed to substitute the Wolcott amendment to the war revenue bill for the Finance Committee provision in regard to the coinage of the silver seigniorage to the extent of $42,000,000, which is to be the amount first coined. The vote stood 48 to 31.

Indianian In Trouble.

Woman Killed a Butcher.

Mrs. Postlewaite, a restaurant-keeper, has confessed that she killed W. C. Boyd, a butcher, whose dead body was found near Hutchinson, Kan., a few days ago. She said he went to her room at night and threatened to kill her unless she would marry him.

ASKS FOR RESTITUTION.

Foreign Missions Board Begins Action Against a Japanese College.

Founded under the auspices of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions as a distinctly Christian institution, and supported for nearly twenty-five years by American gifts on that basis, Doshisha College, Kiota, Japan, has so far departed from the constitution under which it was established that the board has demanded the immediate return to it of $175,000 in gifts in gold, besides the retransfer of houses and lands turned over to the Doshisha company's trustees by the board in 1893. As the board fears that the letter containing its demand will be ignored, a suit against the Doshisha company for the recovery of the property, with probable international complications, is expected. Dr. Joseph Neesima, a distinguished native of Japan, educated in this country, founded Doshisha College, with the assistance of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in 1875. All went well until Dr. Neesima's death in 1890. Even in 1893 the board and friends of the college had such confidence in its management that it transferred to the trustees the right and title of property held in trust in several other places. Rumors that Christian principles were being forgotten by the trustees reached the American board in 1895, and a deputation was sent to Kiota to investigate. The report brought back was not altogether reassuring. In February the Doshisha so changed the fundamental principles of the constitution as to eliminate the Christian name and Christian instruction from the Academic school, and the American board considers that the trust has been violated.

NEW FIELDS FOR TRADE.

American Merchants Should Cultivate Country Adjacent to Philippines.

The commercial opportunities awaiting the United States in the countries adjacent to the Philippine Islands are shown by a series of tables made public by the bureau of statistics showing that the purchases made by those countries adjacent to the Philippines are largely of the class of articles produced in the United States. Including China, British India and the East Indies, Japan, Corea, Hong Kong, Asiatic Russia and Oceanica, the exports of the United States are shown to have increased from $27,421,831 in 1893 to $61,927,678 in 1897, but still are less than 6 per cent of the total imports of the countries in question, thus showing the possibilities which still await the producers and exporters of the United States in those countries whose doors are now being opened to the commerce of the world.

LAND FOR THE POOR.

Salvation Army Secures a Tract Near Mentor, O., for Colonists.

Commander Booth-Tucker, head of the Salvation army in America, announces that the army had purchased a tract of fine farm land of 285 acres near Mentor, Ohio. The property is to be used as a colonization farm, to be divided into tracts of five acres each, which needy people, stranded in the big cities, will be given an opportunity to buy on time and become comfortably self-supporting. Workmen will be sent out to the place at once to get it in shape, and within two or three weeks some of the colonists will be located. "We have on our books already 1,000 names," said the commander, "representing 5,000 people, whom we will assist in this way as soon as we have land sufficient. We are already proceeding to get an option on more land in the neighborhood of this."

Fraudulent Enlistment of Minors.

One peculiarity of the conditions prevailing in the volunteer force has been the enlistment of minors and their consequent discharge from the service on the ground of fraudulent enlistment, a course rendered necessary in most instances by habeas corpus proceedings through the courts. This circumstance has served to reduce the numerical strength of many companies, and the instances have been so numerous as to lead to the suspicion that something more than carelessness is chargeable against the officers who were enabled to have their commands accepted and mustered in by reason of the minimum strength, or in many cases less than the minimum strength allowed by law, having been furnished by the presence of so many minors who were enlisted without the consent of their parents or guardians. This feature is due to the instructions sent out from the War Department, presumably under a misapprehension. They permitted the mustering in of minors who presented themselves for service and whose parents did not interpose objection. This defeats in a measure the object of the statutes which, instead of requiring the objection of parents or guardians as a bar to enlistments, specifically exact the consent of those who have authority over minors desirous of becoming soldiers. In the late war much the same condition prevailed to such an extent as to lead to the dismissal of officers who were charged with defrauding the government to the extent of admitting fraudulent enlistments, and it begins to look as if greater restrictions must be placed upon those in charge of the acceptance of volunteer troops.

$20,000,000 in Gold.

"Pat" Galvin, who arrived at Tacoma, Wash., from Dawson, reports that by this time the spring clean-up is finished, amounting to $20,000,000. When he left, April 28, sluicing had been in progress for a week, the results on the best creeks being better than expected. Sulphur, Dominion, Bear and Henderson are the best producers after Eldorado and Bonanza. Water began running from Lebarge to Dawson two weeks earlier than last year. The miners were figuring on starting for St. Michael with their treasure between May 28 and June 5, bringing them to Tacoma about July 1. William Stanley received letters from his sons at Dawson by Mr. Galvin. They say many miners believe the treasure ships are likely to be captured by pirates between St. Michael and Tacoma, and they accordingly requested that the Government detail a gunboat to convoy the ships to Puget sound. The Stanley boys have taken $600,000 this winter from nine claims. A special from Lake Lindeman, Alaska, says: "Lakes Lindeman and Bennett are practically open, boats and scows are now passing down both lakes along the shore. The ice has become unsafe. One man with a big pack on his back suddenly disappeared through the treacherous frozen surface. No one knows who he was. The price of provisions in Dawson and vicinity has dropped materially, being only 30 per cent of what it was a year ago. Real estate is having a tremendous boom, lots on the principal streets selling for from $1,500 to $2,000 a front foot. The long row of tents along the river bank have been removed, property there renting for $10 a front foot a month."

Big Platform Collapses.

At Cincinnati, Ohio, during the Decoration Day exercises in the east end a platform, which had been erected on a hillside, gave way and seventy-five children went down. Parents fought the police desperately to get at their children and the officers finally had to use their clubs to check the panic. Seven girls and boys are known to be hurt. At least twenty injured children were carried away before their names could be learned.

Desperate Convicts Escape.

At the United States penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., a mutiny broke out, fifteen convicts escaping. After a lively chase one of them, James Musgrove, a territory outlaw, was shot down. The others escaped. Eighty convicts, escorted by eight guards, had been marched to the stockade, where a large force of men was at work erecting walls. Instantly the convicts overpowered and disarmed the two lone guards, and compelled them to march ahead of them as a protection. When the first tower was reached Guard King was also overpowered. Some of the convicts who had not been let into the plans of the mutiny were taken by surprise, and while they marched to the gate refused to leave. The fifteen who escaped made a dash for the woods, keeping well together. Musgrove, who led the convicts, was shot and fatally wounded.

INSURGENT CHIEF SHOT.

Spaniards Execute the Wounded General Gonzales Despite a Pledge.

The Cubans at Tampa, Fla., have received word from a reliable source that General Gonzales, the insurgent leader in Santa Clara province, who was supposed to have died of his wounds after a fight with the Spaniards, was in reality shot after a trial by a Spanish drum-head court-martial. The first story received was that he was captured after being severely wounded in a skirmish on the Sagua de Chica River by the troops of General Bernal, who commanded in that province. He was taken to Villa Clara. General Bernal, the Cubans declare, gave the bishop of Santa Clara his word of honor that the prisoner would be well cared for. The next day the mother and the family of General Gonzales were informed that he was dead and buried. The Cubans are infuriated over this example of Spanish treachery.

CHASKA GOES TO JAIL.

He Has Recovered After His Attempt at Self Destruction.

Samuel Campbell, better known as Chaska, the Indian husband of Cora Belle Fellows, who was a short time ago reported by Running Water, S. D., dispatches as having made a successful attempt at suicide, is alive and well, his attempt at ending his life having proved a failure. He was recently sentenced to one year's imprisonment for complicity with a gang of thieves. Before being taken to jail he confessed and gave evidence against the band. He named his brother William and two other men as leaders. According to his story, the gang found a ready market for stolen goods among the residents of both the Nebraska and South Dakota sides of the Missouri river in the vicinity of its operations.

TORNADO KILLS FOUR.

DeKalb County, Missouri, Is Visited by a Destructive Storm.

Reports have been received of great damage done by a tornado which tore across a section of DeKalb County, Missouri, causing the loss of four lives. The dead are the wife and three children of Calvin Smith, living eight miles northwest of Maysville. Their house was destroyed and every one of its occupants killed. In the vicinity of Maysville and Union Star the tornado destroyed the houses of at least twenty farmers, uprooted valuable orchards and damaged growing crops. The property loss has been estimated at fully $150,000. Isaac Henry and his family of four, living near Union Star, were all painfully hurt and many others were more or less seriously injured, but no one fatally.

Chicago Road Race Winners.

Joseph Ringl, of the Plzen Cycling Club, is winner of the Chicago road race of 1898. The annals of the Associated Cycling Clubs will record the story of a novice leaving experienced competitors far behind in the muddy route from Wheeling to Garfield Park and securing coveted honors in the gamest finish of the historic event. Twenty-five miles in 1:13:58 from the 9:00 mark, despite discouraging conditions, is the epitome of the contest. First time award went to Orlando A. Adams, who carried the colors of the Chicago Cycling Club to victory. Adams' time was 1:08:59—five minutes slower than the terrific clip of Henry O'Brien a year ago, but even more creditable.

THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION

THE Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition at Omaha has been thrown open and all the world is invited to see the great and varied resources of the great West. The culmination of the work of the past eighteen months has been reached and all is now ready for inspection.

It was a second past noon, Wednesday, when the wheels in Machinery Hall commenced to turn. President McKinley pressed a button in Washington and made the connection which started the machinery in motion. In an instant fifty bands sent forth sweet music, but were almost drowned by the cheers from thousands of throats. Flags waved everywhere. As there was a lull in the cheers the great chimes in the dome of the Federal Building clanged out their greeting, and every musical instrument on the grounds changed its notes and "Columbia" stirred the vast multitude to its very center. This was the conclusion of the dedicatory exercises.

At 9 o'clock in the morning the civic parade started from the city to the grounds. It was five miles long, and hundreds of uniformed secret societies from Nebraska and the adjacent States were represented. The entire city was decorated with flags and patriotic streamers, and the streets through which the column paraded were like a sea of the red, white and blue. President Gurdon W. Wattles in a carriage led the procession, followed by the directors and other officers of the exposition. The Marine Band of Washington led all music societies. A military display of 10,000 troops was expected, but the soldiers having been called away to fight the battles of their country, this feature had to be dropped.

In the great auditorium, Dr. Samuels, of St. Louis, assisted by a number of other prominent clergymen, delivered the official prayer. Nearly every exhibit was in place, and no half finished buildings or scaffolding were left to mar the beauty of the surroundings. More than a thousand men were engaged night and day on the grounds the past ten days in order that the expositon might be opened in its completeness.

Something of the Big Show.

Omaha's exposition is not a Chicago World's Fair in magnitude, but it is in magnificence. The grounds are a paradise of beauty and the buildings are magnificent in appearance. For the good results achieved the people of this city and State owe much to the president of the fair, Gurdon W. Wattles, and to his able corps of assistants, both men and women.

One of the pleasing features of the grounds is the beautiful lagoon into which the purified water of the Missouri

ADMINISTRATION ARCH.

River has been turned. At the western end of the lagoon is the Government building, a notable example of the Ionic style of architecture. It overlooks the entire lagoon, its main buildings being topped by a massive dome, surmounted by a heroic figure of "Liberty Enlightening the World." It is built in three sections and is 504 feet in length. The torch held aloft by "Liberty" is 178 feet from the ground. Immediately in front of this building is the water mirror built in the form of a trefoil, its ground edges being surrounded by an attractive peristyle.

Around the lagoon on all of its four sides are pillars 15 feet high and about the same distance apart, each surmounted by a stud of a dozen incandescent lights. There are at least a hundred of these pillars, with 1,000 lights in all. These, added to the arc lights and incandescents studding the fronts of the buildings that line the lagoon, and the radiance shed from the windows of the buildings at night, make the court of honor at Omaha's exposition a feature of magnificent beauty and grandeur.

Skirting the lagoon on the southern side are four of the main buildings of the exposition. On its northern side are three more and the smaller building devoted to the use of the boys and girls who come to see the West's great show. First on the southern side and adjoining the Government building is the structure devoted to exhibits of the fine arts, twin structures, each 90 by 130 feet, separated by a court inclosed by a peristyle. "Fame," female-winged and draped, is the principal exterior adornment of this building. In each of the twin buildings, there are six galleries, two large and four small, for the hanging of the works of art. Every available inch of space on the walls has been allotted, and it has been found necessary to curtail the offerings.

The arch of States, the main entrance to the exposition grounds, is between the fine arts building and the structure devoted to displays classified under the liberal arts. Symbolical statuary is the exterior adornment on this building, "Prosperity," supported by "Labor" and "Integrity," being the features.

Next in order on the south side of the lagoon is the mines and mining building, in which are shown specimens of the riches that honeycomb the mountains of Colorado, Montana, Nevada and their sister States. The architecture is of the Greek Ionic order, the interior lighted by a circular dome 150 feet in circumference.

Last on the southern side of the lagoon is the auditorium building for the use of the great assemblages of the exposition, the concerts by the monster choruses and the performances of the musical masterpieces by organizations such as the Apollo Club of Chicago. The building is attractive in architectural design and has a seating capacity of 5,000.

Agriculture has the first place on the north side of the lagoon adjoining the government building. Adjoining it is the administration building. Manufactures is the next link in this great arena of the arts and sciences. To the top of the crowning group of statuary on this building the distance is 85 feet. The exterior decorations are typical of the title of the building, 12 magnificent statues surmounting the grand entrance.

E. ROSEWATER.
Chief of the Publicity and Promotion Bureau.

Most attractive of all the displays is housed in the electrical building, which adjoins manufactures. Here the latest and most ingenious of the products of American inventive brain are shown. The exhibits are not confined to America, but, of course, her citizens lead as they always have done in devising man's means of making life more worth the living.

The boys and girls' building, the last on the north side of the lagoon, is really the woman's building of the exposition. It is 100 feet square and in its center a hall is provided for lectures and entertainments, interesting to mothers and instructive to the little ones. The building is named for the boys and girls of the West because they contributed the money to pay for its construction. The exhibits includes displays of fancy work for the women and pictures and objects of interest for the school children.

Another interesting building of the exposition is that for the housing of the transportation exhibit. Open air spaces are allotted for the display of agricultural implements in operation, farm fences, pumps and windmills. Plenty of ground space is set aside for the poultry coops, and small buildings are erected for the apiary and dairy displays. Several acres are given over to the display and explanation of methods and devices for the irrigation of the arid lands of the West and lectures by practical men to the farmer, telling them how to supplement nature with the devices and methods born of man's brain and thus secure greater results from the soil they cultivate.

An interesting feature of the fair will be "old soldiers' week," designed to be held during the week that President McKinley will attend the exposition. The exposition will close Nov. 1.

GOVERNMENT EXPENSE GROWS.

Statement for May Shows Expenditures Exceed Receipts.

The comparative statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Government shows that during May, 1898, the receipts amounted to $30,074,818 and the expenditures to $47,840,909, leaving a deficit for the month of $17,800,000. This deficit is accounted for by the increased expenditures on account of the war. The increase in these two items as compared with May, 1897, is about $19,500,000. The receipts from customs during the last month aggregated $13,466,534, a decrease as compared with May, 1897, of about $3,000,000. The receipts from internal revenue amounted to $14,492,208, a gain of nearly $4,000,000. For the eleven months the receipts show an increase over 1897 of over $60,000,000.

DROWN AT SEA.

Nearly Four Score Lives Lost by Shipwreck.

The schooner Jane Gray foundered off Cape Flattery. Thirty-four gold seekers bound for Kotzebue sound went down with the vessel. Twenty-seven were saved. At the time of the disaster the vessel was lying to during a gale under foresail. Ten minutes before she sank Captain Crockett was awakened by the watchman, who told him something was wrong. The vessel was found to be leaking and making water so fast that it was only a question of a few moments before she would go down. No time was lost in informing the passengers, most of whom were asleep below deck. A scene of terror then ensued and pitchy darkness added to the confusion.

Captain Crockett ordered the boats lowered and the crew obeyed with wonderful coolness and courage. The first boat launched was swamped. The launch Kenoma, belonging to the Ingraham party, outfitted by Prince Luigi of Italy for the Kotzebue gold fields, was successfully lowered. The Jane Gray was then almost under water. She was struck by a great billow and thrown on her beam ends. It was impossible to launch the other boats. The water was over the hatches and it was certain that all those below deck were drowned. Job Johnson and C. J. Reilly kept afloat by clinging to wreckage and two hours later were picked up by the launch. The survivors suffered terribly during the thirty hours before it drifted to Rugged Point, Kynquot sound, on Vancouver Island, eighty miles from the scene of the wreck. There was no water on the launch and the only food was a sack of dried fruit and evaporated turnips.

The Australian steamer Moana, which arrived in San Francisco, brought the first details of the wrecks of the steamers Maitland and Merksworth off the New South Wales coast, with a loss of thirty-seven lives. A terrific gale swept the coast on the night of May 7. The passenger steamer Maitland, soon after leaving Sidney harbor, was struck by huge seas, and all hands were forced to throw overboard the cargo to keep her from foundering. Heavy seas were shipped and soon the engine fires were extinguished. Immediately after the vessel struck on a rock and the waves began to break over her. Soon she parted amidships, and crew and steerage passengers who were forward went down and were lost. Those left on the after part of the vessel were near the shore, but the sea was so terrific no one could be saved without a line. After two sailors had failed to take a line ashore a passenger succeeded, and then the women and children were passed first over the line. The next morning a lifeboat crew got a line to the vessel.

The steam collier Merksworth was wrecked the same night near Newcastle and nine out of twelve men perished. The vessel foundered suddenly, but the captain and crew escaped in a lifeboat. The sea was so terrific that the boat was capsized again and again and four were drowned. Five others, including the captain, died of exhaustion in the boat. The survivors, after being fifteen hours in an open boat, were washed ashore and rescued.

Germans Deny It.

A Berlin telegram says it is semi-officially denied that there is any truth in the story from Manila regarding the German consul threatening Rear Admiral Dewey for not permitting the landing of provisions from German ships. It was claimed that the consul said he would land them with the aid of the German cruisers, and that Dewey in reply threatened to fire on the German warships if they interfered.

Command Offered W. J. Bryan.

Gov. Stephens of Missouri wired William J. Bryan tendering him the colonelcy of a regiment of volunteers. Mr. Bryan replied, stating that he appreciated the honor, but that there was a prospect that his regiment would be accepted, and he felt that his first duty was to the Nebraska boys.

CONGRESS

Most of the day Saturday was spent by the Senate in discussion of the war revenue bill, several Senators being heard upon different features of the measure. A proposition was made to vote upon the amendment offered by Mr. Gorman of Maryland limiting the excise tax upon railroad, steamboat, electric light, telegraph, telephone, express and other corporations to those whose gross receipts exceed $250,000 annually and making the tax one-half of 1 per cent. Mr. Aldrich moved to lay upon the table the amendment offered by the committee for which Mr. Gorman's amendment was intended as a substitute. This brought on the most important vote yet taken in the Senate upon the bill. The vote resulted in yeas 41, nays 27.

The Senate remained in secret legislative session for three hours on Tuesday. The entire time was given to a rather free discussion of the Hawaiian question based on a motion declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that the question of annexation should not be discussed in open session. At the conclusion of the debate the Senate voted viva voce not to pursue the subject further except behind closed doors. Consideration of the pending war revenue measure was continued in open session, but no real headway was made. The House passed a bill authorizing the construction of a railway bridge across Lake St. Francis, near Lake City, Ark. A concurrent resolution, directing the commission now codifying the criminal laws to prepare and submit a code of civil law and procedure for Alaska, was also approved. A number of private bills were passed and the House, in committee of the whole, passed a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to keep open during June and July this year such life-saving stations on the Atlantic and gulf coasts as he might deem advisable.

Wednesday's session of the House was given to the consideration and passage of a bill called up by Mr. Jenkins (Rep.) of Wisconsin to remove all political disabilities incurred by the third section of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution. The debate gave rise to notable speeches from Mr. Grosvenor (Rep.) of Ohio and Mr. Settle (Dem.) of Kentucky, upon the obliteration of all section feeling and the reality at last of a reunited country. Incidental to the debate several members reviewed the conclusion that a member of Congress could not hold simultaneously a military and civil office. Upon its passage the bill received a unanimous vote. Marked progress was made by the Senate toward the final disposition of the war revenue measure. The committee amendments on nearly sixty pages of the bill were passed upon. The interest of the session centered in the action taken upon the amendment of Mr. Gorman (Dem.) of Maryland, levying a tax of one-quarter of 1 per cent. upon the gross receipts of all corporations doing a business exceeding $250,000 a year. By a direct vote upon it the amendment was rejected—27 to 34. The Gorman amendment so modified that it levies a tax of one-quarter of one per cent. on all corporations engaged in the refining of sugar or petroleum was passed: Yeas, 33; nays, 26.

The Senate continued its consideration of the war revenue bill through its session of Friday, completing everything but the bond provision and the amendments proposed by the Democrats to take its place. The speech of the day was made by Mr. Butler (Populist) of North Carolina. The House, practically without debate, passed the urgency deficiency bill providing for emergency expenses of the army and navy departments incident to the war.

Two very important votes were taken Friday in the Senate. In lieu of the seigniorage amendment offered by the majority of the Finance Committee, Mr. Wolcott (Rep., Colo.) proposed an amendment directing the Secretary of the Treasury to coin the silver bullion in the treasury and to issue silver certificates against it. The amendment was agreed to, 48 to 31, several Republicans voting for it. Mr. Aldrich (Rep., R. I.) then pressed the amendment of the Finance Committee providing for the issue of $100,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness and $300,000,000 of bonds, to be used exclusively for the payment of the expenses of the war. After an extended debate the question was brought to an issue, and by the decisive vote of 45 to 31 the bond amendment was incorporated in the bill as a substitute for the amendment to issue legal tender notes.

Germany's Puzzling Law Systems.

No less than five systems of law are in use in Germany. In moving from one place to another tourists are often greatly puzzled when they find that an act perfectly allowable in one State is a crime in another. A still greater confusion often results when the right of property is considered.

The first life boat station in Great Britain was established in the year 1824.

Truffles will soon be cultivated on scientific principles and are likely to become cheaper.

It takes eight times the strength to go upstairs that is required to accomplish the same distance on a level.

In the People's Palace, in London, there is an Italian castle and battleship carved from a lump of common rock salt.

Among the Anglo-Saxons in the seventh century men wore gloves, while women covered their hands with their sleeves.

The Japanese foot has been praised for its strength and beauty. Japanese can walk incredible distances without feeling weary.

GREEN BANKS OF A RIVER

Green banks of a river, an' takin' of my ease—
Fur-off sounds of cattle-bells—honey-huntin' bees,
An' blossoms drappin' roun' you when the wind creeps through the trees
Green banks of a river, an' takin' of my ease.

Green banks of a river—do jest as you please—
Friend to all the singin'-birds, an' brother to the breeze.
No bullets whizzin' roun' me—no forts to shell an' seize—
Green banks of a river, an' takin' of my ease!

Green banks of a river; clover to your knees
In medders cool with shadders—the blossoms an' the bees—
The singin' of the mockin' birds—the "howdy" of the trees—
Green banks of a river, an' takin' of my ease!

Debbie's Wages.

"Can't have it," said Farmer Colt shaking his head solemnly. "There's no use a-talking, Deborah, you can't have it. Crops are all poor this year; the rain has nigh a'most spi'it the hay; that there cow died the other night; and help is not onl lazy and sassy, but charges more'n I ever heerd tell on before. Silk, indeed! Why, my mother never had a silk gown to her name. She had too much sense, and you'd orter tasted her butter."

It was a striped silk, black and blue, that had just arrived with the fall stock at the store and the recipient of the lecture was blue-eyed Debbie Colt, her father's only daughter, who certainly earned what her father called "her salt," with her two plump little hands. Morning, noon and evening she was busy, taking upon her shoulders all the work that her dead mother had done in her lifetime, and with no help to speak of in the kitchen or dairy. It was a hard life, and when winter came and there was a little amusement to be had, a few parties, a lecture or two, perhaps a sleigh-ride, is it any wonder that Debbie experienced the natural wish for a little finery that is common to all womankind? Can one blame her as the father did for wishing once in her life for a really nice dress?

"It's only a dollar and a half a yard, pa," she began again, "and I can make it myself. I—"

But this time the old man roared:

"Didn't I tel you to shut up?" And Deb. closed her lips and went away tearfully to set the table for supper.

Perhaps the dishes did come down on the table with little bangs. Perhaps the knives were not softly and tenderly laid down. At all events, pretty soon someone who had been standing outside the door burst into a low laugh and cried out:

"Well, I never, Debbie Colt! Anybody can see you're mad by the way you sot the table. What's happened?"

"Oh, come in, Mrs. Fish," said Debbie, too cross to smile. "Come in and sit down. There's nothing much the matter, only the old story. You know how close pa is, and you know how shabby I am, just as well as I can tell you. I shall just have to shut myself up all winter, for to go out in that horrible green merino, with half the color faded out, I won't; no, indeed. The very girls at the factory look better. Sally Parker fixes up as if she were a princess, every Sunday. Pa is rich and needn't be so mean."

"Old folks get near as they get on," said Mrs. Fish, "and men folks worst of all, I do believe; but I don't know but what there's a way for you to get your dress, after all, if you ain't too stuck up to earn it, and if your pa would let you. There ain't so much to do now, and old Marthy Grey would do up the chores for you. She is always glad to hire round for her keep."

"Oh, pa wouldn't mind," said Debbie, pausing in the act of putting down a dish of apple sauce. "What is it, Mrs. Fish?"

"Well," said that lady, rummaging in her pocket—"well, I'll tell you. Oh, here it is! Old Mrs. Doughty, up on the hill—first-class family, you know, and regular stylish house—she's lost her sight, you know—that is, pretty nigh. She can see to go about, but 'tain't safe to go alone; and she can't read, nor sew, nor nothin'. Well, today her son was speakin' to me, and he said he'd like to get a young lady to wait on his mother. Not a servant, says he, but a companion—one that can read well and would do everything a daughter could. It wouldn't be for long—only a couple of months—for they're going to Europe then; but meanwhile you'd earn your dress for quite a spell. Ih, here it is—his card I was lookin' for. He wrote down what he was willing to give, and all."

Debbie took the card and regarded it thoughtfully.

"It's September now," she said, "and at $40 a month I should have $80 by November. I never have had so much as $10 at a time in my life. I'll do it, Mrs. Fish—that is, if I should suit. I can read aloud nicely, I know; and perhaps I shall suit. Pa's consent I'm sure of."

And so, after an interview with old Mrs. Doughty, the matter was settled.

Debbie was a pleasant girl when she was not tormented by undeserved reproaches, and the life at the house on the hill was new and pleasant to her. The refinement of manners—the elegance of all arrangements—were new revelations to her, and she was adaptive by nature. Unconsciously she soon spoke in lower tones, moved more elegantly and lest those bad habits of speech which were the result of association with uneducated people; and she did her duty well and was kind and faithful.

The old lady needed her every hour of the day, but she did not weary; and, somehow, there was compensation for all fatigue in the pleasant evenings when Mr. Charles Doughty, coming home from the city, made himself as agreeable to the new inmate of the house as though she had been a guest.

"If I only had a brother like that," Debbie often thought; "if this were my home, how happy I should be!"

So the days glided by. Her first month's wages were paid, but Debbie had lost her desire for the striped silk. A heavy black silk, like those worn by Mrs. Doughty, had become her object now. Two month's salary would buy this. So she hoarded the crisp notes carefully. The dress should have a train and a little lace ruff, and it should fit her neatly and not be the shapeless bag that Miss Bones, the village dressmaker, believed to be a polonaise. Once, at least, she would let Charles Doughty see her in this—once, at least, she would prove that she could look like a lady. She hated the green merino now worse than ever, for, hide it beneath white aprons as she might, she could not hide its spottiness.

And yet Mr. Doughty was so polite, so courteous, so kind.

"What a happy woman his wife will be!" thought poor little Debbie.

Once indeed he had even taken her for a walk when she had a sick headache, and he had looked at her so sweetly. No one was so handsome, so grand. And then Debbie found tears in her eyes; she could not guess why. "Oh, to stay here forever!" she sighed.

But alas! the happiest days fly fastest. The two months were drawing to an end. There was talk about the European trip, and one day Mrs. Doughty put the last month's wages into poor Debbie's palm.

"I can't pay you for all you've done for me," she said. "But I know (Debbie had been confidential) that you want a black silk. I've made it a little more—and you can go down today and buy it, and let me feel it when you come home. I'm a good judge of silk by touch, even now."

And Debbie felt wonderfully rich, as, with a hundred dollars in her purse, she was hurried cityward by the flying train. But somehow she was not happy as she had hoped to be. She should have the dress—but her old life of thankless toil would begin again, and her friends were going to leave her. The sea would roll between her and the kind old lady and splendid Mr. Charles.

"I don't feel as if I could buy it," said Debbie to herself, as she walked up Broadway. "What do I care for the rest of the people in the place—for stupid Jack Brown and silly Bill Butters. Not a beau in the place worth having. No one interesting or pleasant. They can't be agreeable or polite; all they can do is to grin and try to kiss you. Oh, I detest them all. And the only man worth anything in the world I shal never see again."

Poor Debbie, her mind was far away, but her feet trod the city streets, and New York is not the place to go into dreamland in. Abstraction written on her face, and her reticule loosely held in her hand, the country girl was an object calculated to attract the attention of the first evil-disposed individual who met her. And very soon two young men in shabby clothes, with low, evil faces, stumbled up against her, reproved each other for "hitting against the lady," and while she, confused and alarmed, endeavored to get out of their way, snatched her reticule and fled.

The next moment, rid of her dreams for the time being, Debbie realized the fact that she was alone and penniless in a great, strange city.

"What shall I do?" she asked herself, as the tears filled her eyes. "The dress is gone, of course, but how am I to get home again? Will they take me on the cars without money."

Stories of passengers who had been set off in swamps or tumbled over bridges, for lack of tickets, rushed into her memory. She had not a friend in New York. It was such a wicked place. Robbed now, might she not be murdered next? People looked at her curiously. An impudent foreigner leered at her. A dingy man approached and clutched her arm. He only meant to beg, but the girl's nerves were quite unstrung by this time, and she gave a little scram and turned to run. This time some one caught her hand.

"Oh, please don't kill me," sobbed Debbie.

But the hand was clasped more tightly.

"What is the matter, Debbie? Don't you know me?" said a voice, and there was Mr. Charles Doughty.

"Oh, thank goodness!" sighed Debbie, and clung to him as though her life were in danger.

"Take my arm, little country girl," he said. "New York is enough to distract one unused to it. And what is it? Are you lost? Have you been frightened?"

"Not exactly," said Debbie, "but I've been robbed, and I began to think I should not get back home. Oh, how good you were to find me! But, I declare, I wonder you are not ashamed of me in this shabby dres, as if my father were a beggar, not the rich man he is—and so excited, and all. I think perhaps you'd better not let me take your arm. I shall disgrace you, Mr. Doughty; I shall indeed. I declare it's blue in some places and yellow in others."

"I'm not looking at your gown, Debbie," said Mr. Charles. "I don't think any one could if it were shabbier than it is."

"It's well for me, for I shan't have another soon," said Debbie, with a sigh for the lost purse. "Is this the way to the depot, Mr. Doughty?"

"No," said the gentleman. "We are going to lunch first. You must be starved. And so the money is gone, poor child?" and he patted the hand upon his arm, and Debbie's color rose.

Her soft little face with the flush upon it—her blue eyes shining through long lashes—the golden hair—kinking itself into little waves upon the temples, as it would, being naturally curly, not crimpled—made a pretty picture. Charles bent his head lower and looked at her.

"Little one," he said, tenderly, "have you been happy with us?"

"Happier than I ever have been before," said she, from her heart.

"And you like my mother?"

"I love her," said Debbie, looking up.

"Do you like me?" whispered Charles Doughty.

Debbie looked down; and for the first time she knew that she might have given him the same answer.

He knew it, too.

"Debbie, darling," he whispered, "if you like me enough to be my wife, we can all go to Europe together. I intended to ask you before I went, at all events, but I could not be sure some village beau was not before me. There is no one—is there, Debbie?"

"There is no one like you in all the world," said Debbie.

And then they went in and had lunch together; with which prosaic termination we leave the rest to the reader's imagination.—New York News.

LAWS OF ABYSSINIA

Are Based on the Theory of "An Eye for an Eye."

The laws of Abyssinia are primitive, and based on those of the Israelites, "An eye for an eye." There are neither law courts nor lawyers; both plaintiff and defendant plead their own cause. Formerly, prior to the appointment by King Theodore of executioners, the guilty person, in case of murder, was slain in exactly the same manner in which he had taken the life of his victim. For instance, if a man killed another with a sword, the avenger of blood had to use a similar weapon. If death had been caused by blows from a club, a club was used to take the life of the murderer. This law most unjustly operated even in cases of manslaughter; and the life of a man who unwittingly and unintentionally had caused the death of another could be demanded by the relatives of the deceased. Among many others, an instance of this kind was once related to me. Two men were cutting grass on the side of a precipice, and when they were about to descend one of them fastened the end of a rope round his companion's body to lower him down the cliff, and attached the other end to the trunk of a tree. Accidentally the man to be lowered slipped before all was ready, and a coil of the rope becoming entagled round his neck he was strangled. His comrade, on subsequently descending by slipping down the rope, was horrified to find him dead at the bottom, and hastened to the village to report the circumstance. The judge passed a sentence of manslaughter and ordered a fine of $150 to be paid to the widow. The widow, however, refused the compensation and demanded the literal carrying out of the law. After some deliberation it was agreed that she should carry her point, and the unfortunate and perfectly innocent man was sentenced to be hung with the same rope which had caused the fatal accident; the rope was, accordingly, fastened round his waist, and a coil of the same passed around his neck, and he was hauled up a few feet from the ground, suspended a few moments and then lowered again. The widow believing him from all appearances to be dead was satisfied; but the relatives of the victim hastened to him and applied restoratives, which were so effective that in course of time he got up and walked away. The widow was furious, and demanded that the sentence should be again enacted, adding: "Next time I will hold on to his feet until he is dead." The judge, however, declared that justice must be tempered with mercy, and her demand was not complied with.

Ancient Porto Rico's Charms.

San Juan del Porto Rico, with the exception of San Domingo, is the oldest city in America. The pious Spaniards by whom it was founded called it the Rich Port of John the Baptist, and to Spain it has been a source of great profit continually for 387 years. Ponce de Leon is the larger city, having about 35,000 inhabitants, and lying in the midst of the sugar district. San Juan has about 25,000 population, and its great advantage is a commodious and protected harbor. The city lies upon an island connected with the mainland by a bridge and a causeway. The streets are narrow, the houses are low, mostly of a single story, and are built in the old-fashioned Spanish style, with thick walls around the courtyard. The fronts are ugly and are painted all sorts of brilliant colors, pink, blue, purple and yellow. They wear heavy shutters in the windows for protection, but there is not a pane of glass or a chimney in the town. Behind the gloomy walls are glorious gardens and patios, with splashing fountains shaded by that most beautiful of all trees, the royal palm, whose plumes nod in the breeze like those of a bird of paradise. There is a cathedral, a theater, a city hall, the Governor General's palace, and several notable churches, and in the center is a park covering about the same area as one of our city squares, with concrete walks lined with seats and stately palms, but not a spear of turf.

Around this park the market women gather every morning, selling poultry, eggs, vegetables and flowers, and in the evening it is filled with the higher classes of the population, listening to the music of a military band. The young women are beautiful, particularly those of mixed blood, but they conceal their attractions so far as possible by the excessive use of face powder, which makes them look as if they plunged their heads into a flour barrel.—Chicago Record.

A Big Boiled Dinner.

Cooks in large hotels and boarding houses may think they get up meals on a large scale, but when it comes to wholesale cookery the little village of Liss, on the London and Southwestern Railway, discounts them all. At a barbecue held there not long since, an ox was boiled (not roasted, which at one time was quite common) whole, more as an experiment than anything else. This is how they did it: A large hole was dug in the ground and lined with brick. Inside this a tank large enough to hold the ox was built. The carcass was then lowered into this tank, having been first placed in a case formed by heavy cross bars to which chains were attached. Pulleys from a scaffolding above were used to raise and lower the ox. Many vegetables, such as carrots, onions, cabbage and potatoes, were boiled with the meat, thus making many gollons of rich, delicious soup. The boiling required seven hours.—Chicago Record.

The number of soldiers on duty in the Federal army during the Civil War is given as follows: July 1, 1861, 183,-588; January 1, 1862, 527,204; January 1, 1863, 698,802; January 1, 1864, 611,-250; January 1, 1865, 620,924; May 1, 1865, 797,807.

MR. GLADSTONE'S LAST PUBLIC ADDRESS.

Speaking in Liverpool two years ago, he denounced the Turkish crusade against the Armenians.

THE SIXTH MASSACHUSETTS.

Famous Regiment's Second March Through Baltimore.

Times change and men change with them. This truth is recalled by the reception accorded the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment in Baltimore while on its way to the encampment in Falls Church, Va., to aid in crushing Spain. This greeting was splendid in conception and carrying out and reflects great credit upon the Baltimoreans who left nothing undone that could contribute to the glorification of the Bay State soldiery while within the confines of Maryland's great city. In marked contrast to this was the reception given to the same regiment in the same city on April 19, 1861, while on its way to Washington. Then the command was set upon by a mob numbering thousands, and before the regiment cut its way through the infuriated multitude five soldiers were killed and twenty-four wounded. The number of dead and wounded in the assaulting column was never correctly ascertained, but from the most authentic sources at least thirty were killed and more than 100 wounded. The fight was desperate for more than a mile and the volleys of the soldiers were given with the muzzles of their guns within a few feet of those who disputed their passage. This assault made the regiment famous, as it was the first blood shed in the civil conflict.

The commander, Edward F. Jones, scented an uprising in January, 1861, and had his companies, chiefly from Boston, ready weeks before the firing on Fort Sumter. As soon as President Lincoln issued the call for 75,000 men Jones had the Sixth in motion and had the honor of leading the first regiment down Broadway, New York, for the seat of war. The New Yorkers gave the troops an uproarious welcome. As soon as it was learned they were to go through Baltimore the people of that city became very indignant and proposed to forcibly prevent it. At Philadelphia the frowning attitude of the Monumental City was communicated to the soldiers en route, whose good time was suddenly interrupted by the order to load their guns with ball cartridge. This meant an ugly reception.

The troops arrived in the hostile city in a crowded station filled with angry men who hurled execrations at the arriving soldiery. Finding this did not provoke a quarrel, as the Sixth emerged into the street a fusillade was begun, and soon the air was filled with flying missiles hurled at the invaders. Several were struck and then the regiment turned and faced its assailants. This did not deter the unorganized foe and the command was given to fire. When the smoke lifted several of the dead and dying rioters were stretched on the ground and a panic-stricken mob was hunting a place of safety. A running fight was kept up until the regiment reached the depot on the other side of the city, when it was found that five of the members had been shot to death and many wounded. The ride to Washington was without interruption. The bodies of the dead soldiers were conveyed to their homes and a great funeral procession took place in Boston. A noble monument to their memory is erected on one of the main streets in Worcester, where most of the killed were from.

The assault embittered the Baltimoreans and led to a general arming of the men and boys, who threatened to massacre any Northern troops that should attempt the march through their city. The public mind became so inflamed that the Mayor pleaded with President Lincoln to withhold his assent to having any more regiments pass through, as it might lead to the destruction of the city.

The order was secured and Washington, for some time after, was reached by Northern regiments going around by way of Annapolis and avoiding Baltimore. It was several weeks before Baltimore cooled down sufficiently to permit Union soldiers to march unmolested through her streets.

Long ago Boston and Baltimore made up for this scrimmage and have been the best friends since, and it was at the request of the Marylanders that the Sixth Regiment, equipped for service against a foreign foe, be invited to tread the streets where her march was so rudely disturbed thirty-seven years ago. The invitation was promptly accepted by Col. Woodward and his men. When the regiment arrived there it met with a magnificent welcome. For four hours thousands hung around the Mount Royal station awaiting the soldires. When they did arrive 20,000 people were massed in the square and a great shout went up as the Boston boys left the train. A delegation of 200 of the leading citizens headed by Mayor Malster met the troops. The Mayor in words touching and tender addressed the Sixth, and bade them God-speed on their journey, and then presented a floral shield in the shape of a large basket of choice flowers. Across the face of the floral shield was the inscription in violets: "Maryland and Massachusetts." On streamers extending from the basket were the inscriptions: "Baltimore welcomes the Sixth Massachusetts;" "Flowers, Not Bullets;" "God Bless You and Bring You Safely Home," "Maryland Honors Massachusetts, May 21, 1898." Col. Woodward made an eloquent address for the visitors, and as he concluded three cheers and a tiger were given for the Sixth which could have been heard a mile away.

SECOND MARCH OF 6TH MASSACHUSETTS THROUGH BALTIMORE.

MARRIAGE ON THE DECREASE.

Still There Were Nearly 40,000 Weddings in London Last Year.

A volume prepared by Dr. Shirley F. Murphy, medical officer of health for the administrative county of London, gives a timely reminder of the gigantic nature of the task which has to be discharged by the county council and the vestries in maintaining the health of the inhabitants of the metropolis. The population of London is approaching 4,500,000, and for purposes of sanitary supervision the area is divided into forty-three districts, each having its medical officer of health. Sanitation and medical science are grappling successfully with disease, and the illustrative diagrams by means of which Dr. Murphy reduces numerous bewildering battalions of statistics to a striking comprehensive impression of that contest tell on the whole a fairly satisfactory story.

Marriages are certainly found to be declining when we take a long survey, even if we are not able to say that the diminution is all under the head of improvident unions. The marriages during the forty-five years from 1851 to 1896 show a mean rate of 18.9 per 1,000. But from 1851 to 1876 the marriage rate each year was above that mean. There was indeed a brief period—it covered the '60s—when marrying in London burst forth with exceptional fervor, but the abnormal effort seems to have had the consequence of all abnormal efforts in a remarkable reaction, and since then making a "nuptial of two hearts" has gone steadily downward, though, we may add, to reassure the timorous, that in actual figures the diminution on the quarter of a century is from 19.5 to 18.0 per 1,000. Last year 39,689 marriages were made in London, and the number is probably ample.

The birth rate too is on the down grade, the turn in this department beginning about 1885, and continuing until now. Last year births were most numerous in the combined eastern districts and lowest in the western, and we notice, furthermore, that, although the fewest children were born in the western part of London, more infants died there than in any other group of districts. The fall in the London birth rate corresponds strangely with a fall over the whole of England and Wales.—London Mail.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

TAXING CORPORATIONS.

The House of Representatives, under the rule of Speaker Reed the Despot, no longer debates public questions. It has sunken into a dull and placid condition, such as might be expected to prevail in a Council of State held by a Sultan, or a Pasha, or some such Oriental lord and master, and it does what it is ordered to do with scarcely a grumble. The activity and verbosity of the Senate somewhat compensates for the vacuity of the House, and it is in the former chamber that the war revenue measure has had the only discussion preceding its enactment, and the only disclosure to the public of its purpose and nature.

There are still some Senators who really appear to desire to know what the people want and to do it. They find that their constituents are willing and glad to contribute to the expense of carrying on hostilities provided that fairness and equity are observed in exacting the necessary contributions. That the war should be energetically conducted, all agree, but that its cost should be borne by all equally is a reasonable demand. That those upon whom great favors have already been bestowed should contribute of their abundance is only just and right. The present generation has devoted itself to creating corporations and bestowing upon them exclusive privileges, and that these should now escape their share of dues in a time of public danger, would not be just nor wise. The debates in the Senate have taken a wide range. The advocates of incorporated capital have held the floor and uttered every excuse and every appeal in their power. They were met by the arguments of the champions of justice and honest dealing, and political divisions have been formed and lines drawn, which will survive the present financial exigency.

There is one class of corporations—and only one—in which the great mass of producers in this country have a deep interest. We refer to the savings banks—the depositaries of the savings of the industrious poor. They alone have a right to demand that their painfully earned hoards shall not be depredated upon. All other corporations belong to the class of well-to-do, and should pay their share.—New York News.

Bimetallism.

The gold standard is wrong. Why is it wrong? What was the occasion which brought us to experience its results? For two thousand years mankind has used both gold and silver as final money, ultimate money, foundation money, basic money.

These are some of the terms that are employed to designate that money which is final payment and never has to be redeemed; which, when it changes hands in consideration of service or property, ends the transaction. It is itself a payment, and upon it may be reared and is reared the structures of representative money, of paper money that has to be redeemed in it, and of credit, which, also, like representative money, is stated in dollars, and for which, in the last analysis, real dollars must respond.

That is ultimate money. And I say for over two thousand years the world so used both gold and silver. Why, the exigencies of the gold standard to-day have compelled its advocates to do what? They have invented a new morality, for one thing, the doctrine of which is that the creditor has a perfect moral right to take a 200-cent dollar from the debtor, but that the debtor is a most reprehensive villain and moral outcast if he objects to it. And they have also invented a new political economy.

Is there anything difficult about that? And yet your friends of the gold standard say that is not a sound principle; they say, in the New York newspapers, in effect, that there is no distinguishable relation between the amount of money and the course of prices—a most marvelous discovery, if true.

I say the instinct of mankind was always to the contrary; the experience of mankind was always to the contrary. Why, when gold and silver were coming in streams from the mines, mankind in all the past ages of its history found that it was a good thing for society; they found that it built up the waste places; they found that it extended civilization; that it encouraged every kind of investment; that it developed and strengthened the great producing classes.

They found that it was always coextensive and concomitant with increased prosperity; and that, on the contrary, when the production of the mines fell off, the opposite effects were realized.—Charles A. Towne.

Taxation Heresy.

Heresy in taxation is worrying the administration newspapers, and they are much exercised for fear corporations and plutocrats may be forced to help pay the expenses of the war. Whenever the Democrats in the Senate propose to make the Standard Oil Company pay a small per cent. of its unearned millions to aid the Government under which it thrives and thieves, the administration press shrieks a protest against this "heresy in taxation."

That the Democratic finance committee of the Senate is a bold, bad band of robbers is shown by an esteemed Chicago contemporary, which, with a fine display of sympathy for the oppressed and down-trodden trusts, exclaims: "They would fix upon the people an income tax, an inheritance tax and a tax on corporations."

Such propositions as this are, indeed, monstrous. Think of "fixing upon the people" that terrible injustice of an income tax! Reflect for a moment how Rockefeller and Vanderbilt and J. Pierpont Morgan would suffer if such an oppressive measure should be passed. The "people" who have incomes over $10,000 a year would really suffer for the necessities of life if an income tax should be levied.

By all means tax the laborer who earns a dollar a day. Tax his beer and his tobacco. Let him understand that this is a "Republican war," and he must pay for it. But tax Rockefeller and men of his class? Never! And then to tax inheritances! Isn't that dreadful? To make a man pay a small part of thousands or hundreds of thousands of dollars that he receives without labor as a gift? Never.

But corporations also are threatened by these heretical Democrats. The Standard Oil Company, the sugar trust, the nail trust—in a word, all the trusts with their combined capital of two thousand million dollars cannot afford to pay taxes, and the esteemed Chicago contemporary is quite right in crying out in horror against such a suggestion.

Sons of Senators.

Sons of Senators, sons of millionaires, sons of political bosses have been given commissions in the army until the matter has become a public scandal. These civilians know nothing about war, and many of them know little about anything except golf and pink teas, but President McKinley has chosen to slight experienced army officers and confer honor upon ignoramuses. Why? Politics.

That these young men are intensely ignorant of what they are expected to do is shown by the following story, told of one of them by a correspondent of the New York World: "One of these gilded youths went to an old officer in the regular army a few days since and begged for a consultation with reference to the duties of his office. He is reported to have said: "'Can I have five minutes of your time while you tell me how to perform all of the duties of my new office in a satisfactory manner?' A smile of amusement and derision curled around the officer's mouth when he replied: 'Young man, I have been in the United States army thirty-five years, and I don't know how to perform my own duties satisfactorily.'"

So far the members of the House have not been allowed to play in this little game of military appointments. It has been a friendly gambol for Senators, beginning with Vice President Hobart and running all along down the list. But now that more volunteers are called perhaps the Representatives may get a chance to chip in and saddle some of their "greenhorns" on the Government. Old soldiers have been thrust aside to make room for Senatorial favorites under the new call, and they will doubtless continue to be thrust aside as long as there are nephews and second cousins of Congressmen out of a job.

Again, "Monetary Reform."

Republican newspapers that are roaring about the partisan attitude of Democrats on the war revenue bill are also demanding that "monetary reform" be pushed in Congress. Stupidity and selfishness could not go further than this. The men who urge the currency measure know that it cannot pass the Senate. They know that such a bill would arouse bitter opposition in both houses. They know that nothing could more surely provoke political division, and yet they urge that this bill be taken up and passed by the House.

What is the object of such a proposition? Simply the desire of crazy fanatics to push the currency question into prominence. Good political sense on the part of administration newspapers would prompt them to keep the money question in the background. If the Republicans gain any sort of standing before the people it must be from a vigorous prosecution of the war. But the Republicans are not prosecuting the war with vigor, and it is alleged that they will not prosecute it vigorously until after Congress has voted to issue bonds. To sink political differences and to unite in a patriotic support of the President in the war against Spain means, from a Republican point of view, sacrifices by Democrats and a grab at every possible political advantage by Republicans. But that sort of thing won't work.—Chicago Dispatch.

Cost of War.

War is expensive. But it is only fair to say that the conquered nation will have to pay the bills. Spain has a dismal outlook. Fated to meet defeat, the dons will not only be forced to pay their own war debt but that of the United States as well. Down in Manila Bay lie the hulks of $5,000,000 worth of Spanish ships, and that's only the first installment of the debt which Spain will have to meet as a reprisal for the cowardly destruction of the battleship Maine.

For the first week in May the expenses of this Government were $3,-565,000, as against $865,000 for the corresponding week last year. Nearly $3,000,000 of this should be charged to the account of Spain. It makes little difference whether the dons can raise the money to pay the war indemnity to the United States or not. The Philippines and Porto Rico are good for it, and will be held by this country as security for the debt. People who are exercised over the amount of money which the war is costing this country should be comforted. If that were all the loss to be expected there would be little to worry over, but there are lives that will have to be offered, and for those there is no indemnity. Nothing but the gratitude of a nation for their brave sacrifice can be given to the dead.

Donkeys in Persia.

The facetiousness of calling Persia the Land of the Lion and the Sun becomes apparent as soon as one enters the country. Persia contains, maybe, 100 lions, while the jackasses number not less than 10,000,000. Within the boundaries of the Shah's dominion ears are trumps every time, and the universal music is the donkey's mellifluous bray. Almost every Persian owns a donkey, and many of them whole droves. The population of Persia is estimated at 10,000,000 souls. Current opinion at Teheran places the donkey population at about the same number. Reckoning each donkey's wealth of ear at two feet twelve inches each, the aural appendages of the Shah's musical toilers would, if laid end to end, reach 4,000 miles.

THE THREE TOWNSHIPS.

The joint graduation exercises of Grant, Wilmington and Union townships were held in Norris Chapel, Friday evening and were a success of which trustees Crooks, Eakright and Madden may well be proud.

The attendance was upwards of 600 of whom but part could find even standing room within the church. An hour before the time for beginning every seat was occupied but social talk filled the interlude till the arrival of an orchestra from Waterloo and a quartette from Auburn and the graduates, nine in number, led by respective trustees, took places upon the rostrum which was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting and a wealth of flowers in wreaths and bouquets. Supt. Coe presided, and promptly each performed his part. A feature of the exercises was the clear articulation of the graduates while their brief addresses were marked by plain, good sense, candidly and composedly expressed. The presentation of diplomas was awarded to W. H. McIntosh as a compliment to his former superintendency of schools, and Supt. Coe on behalf of Norris Chapel presented the two Misses Walsworth, each with a bible, as a gift fit for the occasion. The audience, compact and many standing, preserved a silence at once complimentary to the speakers, singers and musicians and most creditable to themselves.

Such occasions are pleasurable in enjoyment and an inspiration to the children. They have a powerful influence favorable to the district schools.

DEEDS OF DARING.

Of all the deeds of daring and desperate risks in the world's annals, few if any are to be compared to that of the half dozen heroes, who last Friday took the coal ship Merrimac into the narrow channel that leads from the open sea into the harbor of Santiago and sunk it. The object was to obstruct the passage, and so prevent the Spanish ships from escaping. It had been expected we would have several other old vessels there for that purpose and loaded with rock and scrap iron. But as they failed to reach there in time, Sampson concluded to send in the Merrimac with its load of coal. He called for volunteers, and it is said several thousand were willing to go. He chose Lieut. Hobson and seven men. Steam was got up and then the crew forty in all were sent to other ships,and the eight men were able to run her into the narrow channel, past a line of mines, and when she had reached a narrow place the anchor was dropped, the vessel rounded to and was lying across the channel when Hobson pressed the button of the wire that fired a heavy torpedo in the fore part of the vessel. She at once sank and the crew jumped into a small boat. Seeing they could not get back through the shot and shell that had rained on them from the start, they rowed to the nearest Spanish ship and surrendered. The Spaniards were amazed at their daring and sent a boat out to our fleet to assure us the prisoners would be well treated. As soon as our government at Washington was notified, measures were at once taken to secure an exchange for them. As the vessel is 330 feet long, it will be seen that the narrow channel is about choked. The Spaniards will try to have it blown to pieces to get it out of the way. It is a steel vessel and if we watch carefully, we may prevent its being broken up. No lives were lost, though two men were injured.

The Merrimac was purchased by the government from the Lone Star Steamship company. The transfer was made in Baltimore early in April. She was formerly the Norwegian steamer Solveig and was nearly destroyed by fire at Newport News in 1896. She was built at New Castle, England, in 1894, was 330 feet long, forty-four feet beam and had a net register of 2,193 tons. The Merrimac left Norfolk, where she was fitted for government purposes, about a month ago.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

As already announced, the democratic county convention of 1898 met Tuesday in Garrett. There were 359 delegates, and about a score of candidates for the several officers. Then, there are the friends of the candidates, and the party workers and the prominent voters, together with a large number of voters of both parties, who are always attracted by a gathering of this kind. Add to these the populists of the county, who also held their convention there Tuesday, and it will be seen that there was a good crowd in Garrett

At 10 a. m. the meeting was called to order in the Wagner Opera House, by C. C Walter, chairman of the democratic county committee. On motion C. C. Walter was made president of the convention, and W. W. Sharpless, secretary.

The first real business that came up, was the report of the committee on fusion. The chairman of that body C. C. Walter, reported that the committee had met a similar committee chosen by the populists and had agreed on a basis by which the two parties could unite. This was in the substance, to give the populists one commissioner and the recorder, and the democrats to take the rest, namely, one commissioner, representative, clerk, auditor, treasurer, sheriff, surveyor and coroner. After some discussion a motion was made that the report be adopted, which was done.

As noted in Tuesday's DAILY the work was only about half done. The delay had been caused partly by the great struggle made by friends of the various candidates, and partly by a desire on the part of several to make motions and do a little speaking. The first delay was in the forenoon, when the fusion arrangement was read. J. E. Dermott moved its adoption, in a neat little speech. Bill Moree got up and opposed it. From the noise his little following made, one would think everybody was with him. Dermott replied in a speech that cut like a blade, and the other side cheered. Moree made a reply or two when Mr. Moody took the floor a few minutes in a brief speech for harmony and favoring the fusion, Mr. Wagner also spke for it. When a vote was taken, it was found that about a dozen of the 359 delegates arose as voting against it. Comment is unnecessasy here. Among the first incidents was the presentation of a large bouquet of lovely roses, sent by Mrs A. J. Baxter, in memory of her late husband, whose presence at democratic conventions had never been missed, till the hand of Death touched him. Every democrat in the hall felt the appropriateness of this gift, and as cheers are the only means by which a convention can express itself, they were given—given as a tribute to a fallen leader and to his loyally democratic wife, who did not forget her party sympathies in the hour of her domestic sorrow. Secretary Sharpless made a motion that we accept the gift as a token of his loyalty to democratic principles, which was unaminously agreed to.

NAMING CANDIDATES

Candidates for the various officels were then named, but though some had only one name, no nominations by acclamation were made at that time.

AFTERNOON

As soon as order could be restored, the house tried to get down to business. Several persons felt called on to make motions of no consequence, or else to oppose such motions as if life or death depended on it. Editor Downey of the Herald was one of these, he seemed possessed of a disposition to take charge of the proceedings, and was the one man most frequently in evidence at the front of the stage, holding up his hand and trying to say something. He had to be hooted down half a dozen times. There were frequent inquiries as to who he was.

Several wanted to make flowery speeches when nominating candidates. They were finally choked off.

The name of C M. Brown for representative was announced.

The nomination for Clerk was then in order. The names of C. A. Jenkins, Wm. H, Leas and George L. Lanning were presentd.

COMMISSIONER.

Allen Shultz for the north district was nominated by acclamation.

JOINT CONVENTION.

Here the people's party convention which had completed its work came into the room. Ab Kelley was made chairman of the joint convention and Mr. Sharpless secretary. H. D. Boozer read the list of candidates already nominated and on motion the entire ticket was nominated by acclamation by the joint convention of both democrats and populists. The populists had nominated Daniel Herrick for recorder and Isaac Gunsenhouser for commissioner of the southeast district.

In the ballot for or against fusion the Populists stood:

For	61
Against	42

The convention on motion adjourned.

Further matter in connection with this will be given next week. We have not as yet received the report of the populist convention.

NEWS ABOUT THE WAR.

Monday's Daily.

A Chinaman out in California has volunteered in a company to go and fight the Spaniards. He has been accepted. And now we shall see whether a man of that race can possibly be a good soldier.

The governor of Missouri has offered W. J. Bryan the colonelcy of a new regiment he has raised. Mr. Bryan, however, prefers a regiment from his own state, and it looks now as if he would get it.

All the regulars are now gone from the camp at Mobile, and the grounds are deserted.

And still there is a doubt as to how many of the Spanish ships are cooped up in Santiago harbor and how many are still off at sea.

Capt. Charles Gridley is dead. He commanded the flagship Olympia on which Dewey was when the Spanish fleet at Manila was destroyed. It is supposed he was injured internally in the battle. He soon got sick and was ordered home. He died at a port of Japan. He was born at Logansport, Ind., but his parents moved to Hillsdale, Mich., and from there he was appointed to the Naval Academy by Congressman Henry Waldron in 1860.

Believed that a naval battle has been fought on the coast at Hayti.

And again the air is full of wild rumors, many of which are not reliable.

Spain is said to be anxious to stop war. This will be an easy thing to do. Give Cuba absolute freedom, give us Porto Rico, and there you have it.

Reported that we met and sunk a large torpedo boat.

The Merrimac made her daring trip before daylight. She was followed by a small boat from the New York to pick up her crew after she should be sunk. But the boat did not get there in time.

Tuesday's Daily.

Senator Carter, of Georgia, is raising a company of soldiers, each of whom must be six feet tall or over.

The Spaniards have met reverses in the Phillipines, having been defeated by the natives who are in rebellion.

Troops have been landed near Santiago, and it is supposed the rebels are closing in to help us. Bombardment also goes on more or less.

Saturday the fleet was suddenly called into battle line as it was thought the Spaniards were trying to remove the Merrimac, but as the enemy were not working at her the fleet withdrew. They are guarding the entrance day and night to see that the obstruction is not removed.

26,000 men in 46 Transports are being hurried to Santiago.

It is believed that Americans have sunk either the Pluton or Furor, Spanish Torpedo Boat Destroyers. The shell was not fired by the Oregon as rumor had it, but the Massachusetts hit the mark and sent the vessel to the bottom.

The whereabouts of Camara's fleet is not important to Americans.

FROM THE FRONT.

We present to our readers the two following letters from the boys at the front, they being from Melvin Olinger, to members of his family.

RINGGOLD, GA., June 1, 1898.

Miss Edyth Olinger,

DEAR SISTER:—As we are waiting on the train I will try and write a few lines. We broke camp this morning and marched to this place. It was an eleven mile march, and oh, what roads, up one hill and down another. Well, Edyth I guess we are going to Tampa, Florida and expect to go on to Cuba soon. This is quite a place. We are sitting in the court yard on the grass. This is a place about like Mount Ida, Kansas, and has a court house. It is a four story brick and looks as if it is about ready to fall down. Ask pa if he ever was here, it is right at the foot of the mountains. Well I will close for this time and will write again soon. I remain as ever,

Your True Brother,
MELVIN OLINGER.

This leaves me well. Good bye to all. Ringgold, Ga.

PORT TAMPA, FLA., June 3, 1898.

MY DEAR BROTHER AND ALL:—

I will try and write a few lines as I know you are all anxious to know where we are. We broke camp at Camp Thomas on the morning of June 1st and marched to Ringgold, Ga., an eleven mile march. There we boarded the train and rolled South and are now on the coast of Tampa Bay. We got here about 1 o'clock today and have not raised our tents yet. I am sitting on the sand writing and getting the benefit of the good sea breeze. It is not very warm here, not so warm as I expected it would be. Well, I wish I could tell you all about our trip south, and the country, but I have such a poor place to write, and have an awful headache. We did not get but very little to eat on our trip down, and nothing but water to drink until this morning about 10 o'clock we got a little coffee. I think we have a poor excuse of a Col. He has about as much respect for us as if we were dogs. Well I will close for this time, hoping to receive an early reply

From Your Loving Brother,
MELVIN OLINGER.

(Address, Port Tampa, Fla.)

Coin the Seigniorage

There is being an effort made in congress to have the silver seigniorage coined. This is the bullion that was left over, uncoined under the Sherman law and the Bland-Allison law. When silver was bought, only so much of it was coined, or laid aside to secure silver certificates, as the bullion had cost. The rest was simply put aside as "seigniorage" and had lain there ever since. It should have been coined long ago. But now, as we need it for war expenses, there should be no further delay.

CASTORIA.

Extraordinary R'y Accident.

While crossing the Wabash railroad a mile east of Auburn near the Ralston farm, Russell Loveland met with an accident of very peculiar results. His rig was struck by the engine of the Continental Limited due in Auburn at 9 58 this morning. His carriage was torn to pieces and he and his horse violently thrown down to one side of the track, uninjured. The horse was thrown down and Mr Loveland received but a slight scratch on the wrist. He says the train was going very rapidly and the engineer did not whistle for the crossing. This is the new train put on the Wabash for the first time yesterday, going east at 5:22 p. m. and returning this morning. Mr. Loveland works for Sheriff Siron, taking care of his stable and driving over the country. Later accounts from John Koons who was on the train shows that the horse and buggy must have been getting off the track, and missed the engine but a hind wheel was caught by the steps of a coach and the whole rig turned around and thrown into the ditch. The train jarred as it ran over the wheel, then stopped as soon as it could and went back. The man, horse and what was left of the buggy were in a pretty badly mixed up heap. The horse was tangled up, but soon was freed unhurt. Loveland had a slight bruise, but the buggy was about ruined. It was lucky it was no worse.

LET HIM SERVE

The Dispatch takes advantage of a natural mistake into which our correspondent in Co. K had fallen, to enter on a political tirade against Wm. J. Bryan. Our correspondent thought it was the Second Nebraska, that was to be Bryan's regiment, when it is the Third. This harmless error gave the Dispatch a chance to fling out some of its political venom. No other person, as far as we have seen, has injected any politics into the business of this war. McKinley appointed two ex-rebel soldiers and two ex-union soldiers to be major generals. This was proper. And when it comes to colonels, we believe any man has a right to occupy that place, no matter what ticket he votes. If Bryan should serve with the Third Nebraska, as it now appears he will, the Dispatch will be expected to withdraw further objections, and let him serve.

SUPPLEMENT TO

The Auburn Courier.

Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana, June 9, 1898.

CORUNNA.

Will Frank, of Garrett, was the guest of his parents Friday.

Mrs. Grose and daughter Gertrude, of Kendallville, were the guests of Mrs. Kemp one day last week.

Mrs. Wm Daily and daughters, Rose and Leurette spent Friday in Auburn.

A number from this place attended the Epworth League Convention, at Butler this week.

Miss Winnie Weimer who has been visiting friends in Waterloo for a few days returned home Friday.

Mrs. Ida Knauer was the guest of her mother at Avilla Sunday.

Archie Rice of Garrett visited relatives at this place a few days this week.

Miss Margaret Kemp, of South Bend, is the guest of her brother, Rev, G. H. Kemp.

Charles Borst, of Auburn, was the guest of friends here Friday.

H. Dawson is seriously ill at this writing, with but little hopes of his recovery.

Saturday evening at the home of the bride, occurred the marriage of Miss Ida Sullivan and Mr. Ed Rice. Rev. Kemp of the M. E. church performing the ceremony.

—Mrs. Nellie Sumwalt, of Topeka, Ind., is visiting her mother, Mrs. I. Reed.

The social held at the residence of James Finch, Saturday evening was a decided success, and was enjoyed by all present. Ice cream and cake were served, and a neat sum was realized for the League.

BUTLER.

The Epworth League convention this week proved a feast of good things for its hudreds of attendants.

Bishop Nine (not Wine as the typo made me say last week) delivered his discourse on Tuesday evening.

Rev. Frech's sermon last Sunday evening on "Better than Gold," was an effort rich in beautiful thoughts expressed in prose, and brightly illumninated with snatches of Poesy.

Abner J. Price, had an attack of some serious trouble last Sunday and is seriously indisposed.

The writer and son enjoyed a delightful visit last week with Uriah Davis and his excellent wife nee Mary Jennings. They live on a beautiful elevation west of Lake George on the Michigan line. They are mainly engaged in fruit culture and seem to be successful and have a promising show for fruit besides fifty acres of fine growing wheat. On our return we passed over the little mountains along the east side of Lake James and spent a few hours on its peaceful bosom in quest of some of its finny tribe. We were fairly successful. This lake is one of Steuben's long stretches of water varying in depth from two or three to fifteen or twenty feet, cover a gravely or stony bed which can be seen through its clear water almost as plain as if that element did not intervene. The shores are bold thickly wooded, and present a most beautiful appearance from the water. The pathway to the water on the east side is very precipitous, and almost impassable for a team. We are deeply indebted to Mr. Miller, living on the east side for courtesies shown us and for generous hospitality.

H. A. Mitton met with another serious disaster in destruction of Kenney & Sons Mill by fire last week—with no insurance.

Two fatal Wabash accidents occurred last week near Hamilton. In the first one the five year old son Clyde Sharps was injured by being run over by some cars, resultsng in his death in a few hours. The other one in the death of Ray Chapel and child, and very serious injure to his wife by being caught on the crossing east of Hamilton. The horse he was driving was killed and his buggy demolished. Mr. Chapel's wife is a sister to our townsman Martin Everetts.

OBITUARY.

Wm. McIntyre, son of William and Mary (Decher) McIntyre, was born in New York State, August 9th. 1829; died at his home in Auburn, Indiana, June 3rd, 1898. He was the youngest of a family of three: Nicholas, the eldest, who died two years ago, and Jane Bateman, the mother of County Commissioner Bateman. Mr. McIntyre's father died while he was a small boy. His mother being left with the care of three small children could not give them the education they desired, William's being limited to the common school, and at the age of fifteen he quit school to aid in the support of his mother. He learned the blacksmith trade with his brother, being a very proficient workman. At the time of the California gold fever he determined to try his fortune there, going via Cape Horn in a sailing vessel. The voyage lasted about six months. While there he did some mining, being fairly successful, also working at his trade, staying in California about three years. From there he returned to New York State, and after a short stay went to Illinois and Wisconsin. In the latter state he met Miss Mary Ann McTighe to whom he was married at Portage, March 17th, 1857. Their union was blessed with two sons; W. H. our honored citizen, president of the Kiblinger Company, and John C., a levee contractor, living at Memphis, Tenn. Mr. McIntyre located in Sedan (then Lawrence,) this county, 1857, where he worked at his trade with his brother. Soon after he was appointed station agent of that place. While agent he put new life in the town, by making it one of the best markets in the county at that time, for grains of all kinds. In 1866 he was elected Assessor of Richland township, followed by the election of county commissioner. It was during his term as commissioner that a great deal of important business was done for the benefit of the county. Giving such good satisfaction, he was nominated and elected county auditor in 1870. At the expiration of his term in 1874, he helped organize the First National Bank of this place. It was his energy and financial ability as cashier that brought the bank through the dark cloud placed upon it by its first cashier.

On account of failing health he resigned as cashier to be succeeded by his son. W. H. He has always been connected with the bank since, either as vice-president or director. His health failing so rapidly he traveled in the south to seek for strength, but without success. He united with the Catholic church in 1896 of which he has been a faithful member ever since. On March 7th he lost his eyesight by a stroke of paralysis, after which he was confined to his bed, being a great but patient sufferer. He was willing and anxious to go, and when his time came, died peaceful and happy. His life is worthy of emulation, and Auburn, for which he has done so much, always taking the deepest interest in her welfare and advancement, bids him a last farewell.

FROM CO. K.

We gladly give our readers the following letter from our young friend Roy McDowell.

CHICKAMAUGA, GA., May 31, 1898.

Dear Ma:—I thought I would write to you and tell you we will start for Tampa, Fla., at 9 o'clock tomorrow, and from there we expect to go to Porto Rico and drive out those people that say we can't, and I only hope Weyler is there, we will use him for target practice, just for fun. Inside of five days I will hear the booms of cannon, and now I can show that I am not afraid to help whip Spain. I would like to be at home tonight, but if I can ever come home I will be happier than if I would go now. I felt so good to think the people think of me, and now if I have to die in Cuba, I will never forget what I said, I will die in good will, and first think of my mother, brother and sisters, and I pray to see Grandma again, and next my friends of Auburn, whom I think the world of. It is 8:30, and I must get ready for bed. I don't expect to write very soon again, so ma you keep in good thoughts and I may get out all right. So tell Grandma, Minnie, Miles, Frank, Ed and Aunt Dessie and all around the store, and all my friends, Good By.

Your Son,

ROY.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Wednesday's Daily.

It is reported we have sunk a Spanish cruiser that was in the harbor of Santiago. The shelling of the forts has been continued, the Spanish reporting that we have sent in 1500 shell and killed a number of their men, both on ships and on land. We have probably about ruined their forts.

The native insurgents are getting the best of the fighting at Manila as the Spanish soldiers seem disheartened and do not fight well.

A late dispatch from Tampa speaks of the expedition now being put on ships. It is claimed to show a total of about 30,000 men of all branches of service. Among the volunteer regiments we notice our own 157th Ind. If this list is correct the boys are now on the ocean.

If the forts at Santiago are destroyed Sampson can blow up the Merrimac himself, and then sail into the harbor.

The news, both from Manila and Santiago are now more reliable and may be taken as substantially correct.

The next letters our boys write will probably be dated at sea or either Cuba or Porto Rico.

In destroying the forts at Santiago, we did not fire on the chief one, Morro, as Lieut. Hobson and his crew are prisoners in that one.

A Nice Vacation Trip.

Can be taken to Denver and return by taking advantage of the low rate excursions over the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway June 15, 16 and 17. The ticket agent will give you full particulars.

Low Rates to Denver and Return

On June 15, 16 and 17, 1898 the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern rail road will sell excursion tickets to Denver, Colorado and return at half rates plus $4. Tickets will be good for return to leave that city not later than July 17th. Call on ticket agents for full particulars.

COMMISSIONERS

The session Monday, was a busy one among other things that came up being the old matter about giving the collection of fees due from other countries, into the hands of foreign agents, when our own officers were in duty bound to do the work. It is time our commissioners stop giving contracts to outside parties. We do not know of mans kinds of work that cannot be done better and at less expense to the taxpayers by parties right at home.

Tuesday, was given to consideration of claims.

Today, Wednesday, it is work on granting liquor licenses.

BAD PLAN.

(Albion New Era.)

Heretofore the central committee of Kosciusko county has borne the expense of providing dinners for delegates, but this year the rule has been changed and candidates in person will meet the obligation. Already applicants for nomination are receiving bids and reasonable propositions to feed their friends One hostelry in Warsaw has made a proposition furnish dinner for a certain number or more, at 16⅔ cents per meal. At the above rate 1,179 dinners would cost about $227.

Steuben County Convention

Special to the Courier.

ANGOLA, IND., June 6, '98:—The republicans of Steuben county met in convention at the Croxton opera house in Angola, Saturday, June 4, and nominated the following ticket, with Emmet E. Bratton chairman, and Oscar F. Rakestraw secretery: Clerk, Fred Schneider of Orland; Auditor, D. A. Douglas of Fremont: Recorder, Walter Strayer of Clear Lake: Treasurer, A. W. Long of Angola, (renominated); Sheriff, Harry Snyder of Angola: Surveyor, Thos. P. French of Hamilton; Coroner, Jacob Stealey of Angola, (renominated); Commissioner, middle district, Frank Alcott of Orland; Commissioner, south district, Geo. H. Deller of Jackson township. The convention passed off harmoniously and at times much humor was manifested, especially when some of the delegations insisted on voting for Lape Stiefel for coroner. The ticket is a strong one, unisersally endorsed and as good as elected, as Steuben county has always gone republican ever since July 4 1776.

Very Low Rates to San Francisco

Via the North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western R'y). Excursion tickets will be sold at greatly reduced rates June 28 and 29, limited to return until Augest 31, inclusive, account of meeting of North American Turners' Union. For rates and other information ask your nearest Ticket Agent or write.

AT CEDAR CHAPEL.

Memorial exercises were held at Cedar Chapel, Butler township, Sunday afternoon. The attendance was large as is usual and remarkably quiet and attentive. An ideal spot had been chosen some distance west of the cemetery between the high bank of Cedar Creek and the road, in a pretty shady grove. Under lead of Jacob A. Miller who provided lumber from his mill, a roomy stage and extensive seating had been constructed, yet many of the people had to stand. Rev. Meese led in prayer, Miss Maggie Snyder presided at an organ and led a double choir and there were a number of recitations by youths, two of whom, Martin Miller and Baber gave promise of future excellence in oratory. The address by E. D. Hartman was historical, plainly expressed and forcibly delivered.

There were twenty-eight veterans in the line of march to the cemetery where fourteen graves were decorated and brief closing exercises held at the mound for the 'unknown dead.'

OLD SETTLERS

At a meeting of the "old settlers association" at the Court House in Auburn on the 28th day of May 1898, the following committees were appointed. Committee on Finance, Christopher C. Shaffer, Joseph Rainier; Committee on seating, John F. Aber, D. Z. Hoffman; Committee on Music, John M. Widney, Moses B. Willis; Committee on Speaking, James E. Rose; Committee on Registering names and badges, Isaac Hague; Executive Committee, M. B. Willis, M. F. Long, John C. Henry. O. C Clark was appointed to act as chairman in place of C. A. O. McClellan deceased.

—The young man who stole Geo. Boland's bicycle last year and had to serve a time in the jail for it, has now bought the wheel of George. He must have acquired a real affection for it. He has, since getting his freedom, been encouraged by our people, and now has employment, we believe, at the Eckhart carriage factory. It looks as if his good resolutions were genuine. The Origional Declaration of Independence.

The original Declaration of Independence is in so dilapidated a condition that nowadays it is rarely if ever exposed to public view. The Ladies' Home Journal was recently granted special permission by the Secretary of State to make a single exposure of the document to the camera, and will reproduce the photograph, which is a remarkablely clear one, in the July issue of that magazine. Exposure to light and the process of making a duplicate copy of the Declaration have faded the ink in the historic document, but it is still legible. Some of the signatures are nearly faded out. John Hankock, however, seems to have used an imperishable ink, for his name stands black and bold on the parchment, which is now kept in a steel safe, out of the sunlight and out of the public's view.

SOUTH END

The south end is by no means an unimportant business and social part of Auburn. Here is located a grocery store, meat market, shoe shop, two barbershops, hotel, blacksmith shop and a saloon. Some of our largest factories are in the south end and the waterworks plant is building. Agent Zent keeps tab on important events, or at least it is so assumed, his office being used as a bureau of information.

Well No. 3 at the waterworks plant is 125 feet deep in fine sand, with no prospect of water.

Mr. Wheelock is getting out bridge material at the foundry.

A NIGHT SESSION

It was an unusual thing for Justice Walter's court to grind at so late an hour, but it was after ten o'clock last night before the case of the State vs Charles Wolf was finished.

Several men had congregated in the creek bottom, well supplied with beer, some of which was thrown on Charles Wolf of Auburn. Ira Tuttle, who boards at the Hollister House, was lying on the ground when Wolf, as it was alleged, struck him. The fight and commotion brought Marshall Potter, who made an affidavit charging Wolf with assault and battery on the person of Tuttle. The case was tried in Deputy Prosecutor Pomeroy's office. Wolf plead guilty and was fined $1 and costs, amounting in all to $10.50.

SANTIAGO IS STORMED BY SCHLEY.

Fortifications of El Morro and Socapa Battered Down by the Yankee Fleet.

Americans Accomplish Their Task Without Loss of a Man or Damage to a Ship.

Washington special:

THE distinction falls upon Commodore Schley for striking the first hard blow in the Atlantic. The outer fortifications of Santiago de Cuba are in ruins, the formidable Morro fort being practically wrecked, and Admiral Cervera's flagship battered and her plates broken and her machinery injured is no longer the dangerous battle craft that crossed the Atlantic to lead the Spanish fleet against the American warships. The imported French and German gunners sent the projectiles from the Krupps close to our ships, but they did not land. Not one shell struck Schley's vessels.

According to advices received by way of Kingston, Jamaica, the Marblehead first made certain of the presence of the Spanish fleet at Santiago. The fight was a sequel to its discovery. The Marblehead, cruising close to the harbor entrance, found four Spanish cruisers, two torpedo-boat destroyers and the old Reina Mercedes skulking behind the batteries at the mouth of the harbor. Schley at once determined to draw the fire of the batteries. His object was to make the enemy reveal the location of the new masked batteries and to compel the Spanish fleet to come out and fight. When the American fleet advanced the Cristobal Colon lay across the entrance to the harbor, her port broadside, facing the assailants.

Schley wanted to be in the midst of whatever was going to happen, so he transferred his flag from the Brooklyn to the Massachusetts at noon. Two hours later the Massachusetts, New Orleans and Iowa, not more than a cable length apart, steamed up to the harbor mouth within 4,000 yards of Morro castle. Two miles further out to the sea the Brooklyn, Texas and other ships of the blockading fleet rode the waves with just headway enough for steering purposes. Six minutes' steaming would have brought them into the fight, but they got no invitation and lay there to the end.

The Massachusetts opened fire, taking the Spanish flagship for its first target. An eight-inch shell was thrown. It was not a good shot, quite as bad as the shot that answered it. Then the Massachusetts tried its thirteen-inch guns. The roar of these was a new voice. Even the ships near trembled with their shock and the water seemed to hum like an immense sounding board. The Cristobal Colon and four batteries, two on the east side, one on the west and one on an island in the middle of the channel, made fitting replies. Their ten and twelve-inch Krupps sent shot for shot for the American sixes, eights, twelves and thirteens. It was a noisy and spectacular scene, but not effective on either side at the outset.

Both sides appeared to be unable to get the range. The Americans steamed across in front of the batteries at full speed, circled and passed again. Both sides found the range on the second passage and began to shoot close. Several shots burst over the Iowa, three fell very near the New Orleans and one sprayed the bow of the Massachusetts. But the American fire ate into the forts steadily. When they got the range there were few shots wasted. The walls of Morro crumbled in many places and its fire slackened first.

Two men stood on the high parapets during the first part of the engagement watching our fleet with telescopes. They disappeared in an explosion of one of the HARBOR OF MATANZAS.

Massachusetts' thirteen-inch shells. It could not be seen whether they were blown up or not.

After half an hour's firing the two forts on the east and the one on the island were silenced. Five minutes later Schley's ships ceased firing. The western battery and the Spanish flagship continued the shooting for twenty minutes, but their fire was not effective. At one time the American sailors were cheering and shouting when they saw the Colon afire. This occurred after a shot from the Iowa had exploded on her, but the Spaniards soon had the blaze extinguished, for the ship kept on shooting and fired the last gun. Schley changed back to the Brooklyn and steamed out to sea. Every vessel reported "No casualties."

Key West special:

It was reported in Key West that the big Spanish troop ship Alfonso XIII. had been captured off the eastern coast of Cuba by the auxiliary cruiser St. Paul. The story told was that the troop ship tried her utmost to get away, but the speed of the St. Paul was too great and the Alfonso XIII. was compelled to surrender. The St. Paul, it is reported, fired seventeen shots before the Spanish flag was hauled down. The news of the capture was brought by a dispatch boat from Commodore Watson's fleet before Havana. It was reported that the Alfonso XIII. had but few Spanish troops aboard, but was full to overflowing of supplies and coal. It was believed in the blockading fleet that the Alfonso had but recently left Cienfuegos and was bound for Porto Rico. Another story was that she was endeavoring to steal into Santiago past Schley's fleet and break the blockade of that port. It is also reported that the Spanish ship also had trans-Atlantic mails aboard for Blanco and Cervera.

MATANZAS BLOCKHOUSE RAZED.

Tugs Uncas and Leyden Fire on the Fortifications.

It was discovered a few days ago that the Spaniards had built a new blockhouse at the entrance of Matanzas harbor, east of Pedro light. It was determined to destroy the fort, which was a small affair, mounting only one gun, and manned by a small company of Spaniards. The tugs Uncas and Leyden were ordered to do the work. At noon on Monday they steamed within a half-mile of the fort and opened fire with their six-pounders. The Spaniards replied with one shot, which went wild. Both boats continued pouring shells right at the fortifications, nearly every one of them hitting the mark. The hot fire completely demoralized the garrison. The shot riddled the fort and completely destroyed it. Twenty-eight shots were fired. The tugs then withdrew. The Spanish loss is believed to be ten or twenty dead.

SCOUTS SEEN OFF KEY WEST.

Spanish Auxiliary Cruisers Are in American Waters.

The reported presence in Key West waters of two Spanish auxiliary cruisers appears to be true. Tuesday night, while the Detroit was steaming along with all lights out, a steamer was made out outlined against the sky, and in the moonlight was made out to have a black hull and light colored smokestacks, the chief characteristics of the converted Spanish merchantman. The Detroit immediately, under full steam, set out in pursuit, but the suspicious steamer was fast and readily escaped. This is supposed to have been one of the two ships which have been cruising around in the neighborhood of Key West.

To Seize Hawaii.

There are indications that the administration intends to take possession of Hawaii whether Congress passes the annexation resolution or not. The President has the power to take possession of the islands as a war measure, and it is said that he already has assurance from the FORT DESTROYED BY SCHLEY.

Hawaiian government that this method of annexation will be acceptable as a way of getting under the protection of the American flag.

"Peace Union's" Sympathy.

The people of Philadelphia are indignant to the point of physical violence against a society of old fosilized Quakers known as the "Peace Union," which has occupied a room in the very cradle of liberty—Independence Hall—free of charge, for writing a letter of sympathy to the Queen Regent of Spain, treasonable in tone. The "Peace Union" has been compelled to vacate the cradle of liberty forthwith.

Some of the Costs of War.

An estimate for a deficiency appropriation of $11,400,000 in the expenditures of the quartermaster's department for the current year was sent to the House Thursday. Of this amount, $9,000,000 is required for transportation of troops, $1,000,000 for regular supplies, $1,000,000 for horses and mules, $200,000 for incidental expenses and $200,000 for barracks and quarters.

Austria Feels Resentful.

The refusal of the United States to accede to Austria's demand for the payment of an indemnity for the men who were killed by a sheriff's posse at Hazleton, Pa., has been unofficially discussed at Vienna in its bearing on the Spanish-American war. It is suggested that the Government may possibly adopt an unfriendly attitude.

Two Englishmen Stoned.

A mob of Spaniards, according to a dispatch from Gibraltar, assaulted and stoned Maj. Gen. J. B. Richardson, commander of the royal artillery at Gibraltar, and another Englishman while they were walking at San Rouque, seven miles northwest of Gibraltar.

More Help for Dewey.

It seems to be well understood at the Mare Island navy yard that the Monadnock has been ordered to go to Manila, and that the Government has purchased the British ship Whitgift to accompany her.

ON TO CUBA!

THE vanguard of the army of Cuba has moved at last. Many of the soldiers who have been grumbling at Tampa and Mobile over their unwelcome inactivity embarked on the transports which have been lying idle at these points so long. Gen. Miles has left Washington for the front. Soon stirring news will come of victories won over Spanish troops. The work of liberating Cuba, to which this country pledged itself more than a month ago, has been commenced in earnest. Decoration Day was made memorable not alone by the ceremonies attaching to its observance and by the reunion of the veterans, both of the blue and the gray, under the same flag, and of the volunteers also under the same flag in defense of a common cause, but by the good news which came from Commodore Schley that at last the Cape Verde fleet was definitely located in Santiago harbor. This officer asserts he has seen the vessels, and the evidence of one's eyes does not need further confirmation. The receipt at Washington of the news that Admiral Cervera's fleet was in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba with Commodore Schley at the entrance, ready and able to fall on it if it attempted to escape, dispelled those fears of the Spanish vessels which have kept the army on American shores so long. When it was learned authoritatively that Cervera was bottled up and could not interfere with the transports or with the landing of the troops, the forward movement began.

The military invasion of Cuba began Monday. Almost immediately following the receipt of definite information as to the presence of the Spanish fleet at Santiago, Gen. Miles went to the War Department and issued telegraphic orders putting the troops in motion and thus starting the forward movement of the military arm of the service. At an early hour the troops that have been gathered at the gulf ports began to break camp and march aboard transports waiting to carry them to the enemy's territory. About twenty-five of these ships, the biggest and fastest that could be obtained suitable for the purpose, had been gathered ready to receive the troops. They accommodate about 30,000 men, for in a short voyage like that from one of the gulf ports to Cuba, it is possible with safety and comfort to carry a much larger number of men aboard ship than would be admissible in the case for a cruise to the Philippines, for instance.

How many troops started and where they were bound were questions which the directing spirits of the campaign refused positively to answer. They had no desire that the Spanish should have opportunity afforded them to gather forces to attack our soldiers as they land. The start was made from Tampa and Mobile and in each case the fleets of transports converge at Key West to pass under the convoy of the warships which Admiral Sampson provided to insure the safety of the troops during the passage across the Florida straits and to guard them against attack at the hands of some stray Spanish cruiser or gunboat.

Arrangements have been made to utilize the services of the insurgents to the largest possible extent. The Government already sent expeditions to a number of points on the island and landed arms for the insurgents. Most of the parties succeeded perfectly in their object, and it was said at the War Department that a sufficient number of the insurgents have been armed to constitute an effective support for the troops as they land.

Although the officials will not state how many troops are available for active service, it is roughly estimated that there are about 20,000 regulars and 13,000 volunteers at Tampa. These include seventeen regiments of regular infantry and fourteen regiments of volunteer infantry, twelve battalions of artillery and five regiments of regular cavalry. The volunteer force, regular and volunteer, is about 28,000, the cavalry about 4,000, the artillery about 1,200. Back of this force are other available regiments at Mobile, New Orleans and other points easily accessible to Tampa. Still farther back is the large volunteer camp at Chickamauga, comprising about 40,000 infantry volunteers, 1,000 cavalry volunteers and three regiments of artillery volunteers.

It is understood to be the plan to have the troops at Chickamauga take the place of those at Florida ports as fast as the latter leave for active service, thus keeping a large force always ready for embarkation from Florida. Aside from the troops already specified, there are 18,000 men at Camp Alger, near Washington, and lesser bodies of troops on Long Island and in various States. The 75,000 volunteers under the recently issued second call constitute still another reserve, which, however, is yet to be organized and equipped.

Old Monitors Rebuilt.

The old monitors, which did such effective service in the civil war, have been practically rebuilt at the League Island navy yard, Philadelphia, and rendered far more formidable than they were originally. In addition to full equipment of modern appliances, they have been furnished with rapid-fire batteries to supplement their big old-style guns, which are tremendously effective at close range.

Spain Will Fight to the End.

Before leaving for Paris to again assume charge of the Spanish embassy Senor Castillo was notified by Sagasta that at present Spain could not consider any terms of peace which implied a loss of territory. Spain, it is said, will not seek the intervention of the powers until she is completely beaten.

Insurgents Capture a Town.

Insurgents under command of Gen. Carillo captured the town of Remedios, 300 rifles, 80,000 rounds of ammunition, and 10,000 rations. Later the Spaniards secured reinforcements and drove them out. The Spanish forces lost nearly 100 men killed and wounded; the Cubans four killed, three wounded.

PANIC IN SPAIN.

National Bank Is Subjected to a Heavy Run.

The condition of the Bank of Spain is considered in Madrid as more serious than any reverse of the war, as if it cannot help the Government the war cannot be continued. The financial outlook of Spain is dark. The Government has intrusted the Bank of Spain with the negotiations for a loan of 1,000,000,000 pesetas ($200,000,000) at 4 per cent, which sum is to be raised as and when required. The bank will endeavor to raise the loan at home and abroad. There was a long procession at the Bank of Spain during Wednesday. All classes of people were represented, and many women were in line waiting their turn to change notes into silver, fearing the notes would soon be subjected to a discount. There is danger of the bank's stock of silver becoming exhausted, which would compel the Government to resort to a forced currency, issuing notes of small denomination.

The statement from Madrid, in what seemed to be almost semi-official form, of the acuteness of the financial stringency there, and the plain intimation that the Bank of Spain, and consequently Spain, were nearing the end of their financial resources, was regarded at the State Department in Washington as of more real significance than many of the stories of battles on land and sea that have been coming over the cables for the past few weeks. The effect of this notice may be to hasten the operations against Porto Rico, lest the prize slip from our grasp through a sudden and unexpected termination of the war.

CUBAN ARMY A MYTH.

Messengers from Gomez Bring Discordant Reports.

Gen. Shafter has been given a startling demonstration on the amount of reliance that can be placed on the statements of Cubans with regard to their position on the island. Two commissioners, both of them in possession of credentials from Maximo Gomez, arrived in Tampa with "information" about the size of the chief's army and like matters. One of these commissioners, Maj. Smith, reported that Gomez had 10,000 men trained and disciplined and that he needed an equal number of rifles with the same number of saddles. Emile Cardela, the other messenger, informed Gen. Shafter that Gomez had instructed him to say that he had 2,000 men in hand and 3,000 horses suitable for cavalry. Well-informed and trustworthy people who have penetrated to Gomez' hiding place describe the old leader's camp as the temporary dwelling place of a guerilla leader with probably 200 men at call. They have been told that Gomez' army was stationed around the surrounding hills and valleys, to be summoned whenever it became necessary. But nobody on whose word anyone cares to rely has found a very easy way out of the perplexity caused by these conflicting reports. Gen. Shafter notified Washington that the great body of men supposed to be with Gomez is a myth, and that the couriers who have been arriving from Cuba are thoroughly untrustworthy.

GEN. MAXIMO GOMEZ.

SUNK BY A TORPEDO.

AMERICAN HULK BLOCKS SANTIAGO HARBOR.

Admiral Sampson Reported to Have Purposely Sent Collier Merrimac Into the Mined Channel—Bottle Now More Securely Corked.

Second Bombardment Reported.

Friday morning at 8 o'clock the American squadron began a second bombardment of the fortifications of Santiago de Cuba, and a lively cannonade ensued for two hours, which silenced the Spanish batteries. An American vessel, the Merrimac, described in the advices from Santiago de Cuba as an auxiliary cruiser, making a dash to force the entrance, succeeded in passing the first line of defenses, but was torpedoed about 500 feet up the channel. The torpedo broke a hole in her side and caused her to sink almost instantly, bow first. An officer, an engineer and six seamen were taken prisoners. The number of victims is unknown.

The news that the collier (not cruiser) Merrimac was sunk by a torpedo in trying to force her way through the narrow passage leading to Santiago harbor excited great interest in Washington. While without any information except that contained in press dispatches to the effect that the Merrimac was sunk, naval officers think it exceedingly probable that Sampson would assign a non-fighting ship to the duty of ascertaining the location of the torpedo fields or of clearing the channel of torpedoes, rather than risk the destruction of a regular war vessel, whose loss would weaken the effective strength of the American fleet. Admiral Sampson has apparently rammed a cork into the neck of the bottle at Santiago and imprisoned the Spanish fleet by purposely singing in the channel the big collier, which, it is said, was brought with the fleet for that express purpose.

The Merrimac was a large tramp steamship built of iron and with a displacement of 5,362 tons, and it was capable of carrying the enormous load of 5,000 tons of coal, so that if it was successfully sunk in the narrow entrance to Santiago bay it would prove an obstacle to the escape of the Spanish fleet which nothing but dynamite would remove, and the use of dynamite, of course, would explode every mine or torpedo in the vicinity of the wreck.

It was reported in Port au Prince that while the American fleet made the second attack the insurgents, led by Gen. Rabi, marched on the town and attacked. There was a bloody engagement, which resulted in a drawn battle, the insurgents finally encamping on the Holguin road, while the Spaniards massed in the Plaza d'Armas.

THE PRESS CENSOR.

Capt. Jones Allen, Who Has Been Promoted by the President.

Captain Jones Allen, who was recently nominated a lieutenant colonel by the President, is a sphinx and a terror to the correspondents now quartered at Key West. The new lieutenant colonel is the censor of the press dispatches at that point, and, although implacable in that capacity, he is a very good fellow otherwise. He was graduated from the military academy in 1872 and spent three years with the Third cavalry in Wyoming. After that he was detached for signal service and remained in that department of the army until 1878. He was sent to New Mexico for three years, and in 1881 returned to the signal service in Washington. In 1884 he rejoined the Third cavalry, then in the Indian territory. For two years—from 1887 to 1889—he was detailed as cavalry instructor at West Point, was detached again for signal service, and from 1892 to 1896 he was a member of Gen. Miles' staff at Chicago. Since 1894 Captain Allen has done staff duty, chiefly with Gen. Ruger and Gen. Merritt. He was promoted to the rank of captain ten years ago.

CAPT. JONES ALLEN.

The Secretary of War has sent to Congress a request for appropriations amounting to $53,879,358. These appropriations will be used for the equipment and maintenance until Jan. 1, 1899, of the 75,000 volunteers recently called for by the President. The several items are given as follows:

Pay of volunteers	$14,099,881
Subsistence of the army	5,147,477
Regular supplies of the quartermaster's department	2,500,000
Horses for cavalry and artillery	1,000,000
Barracks and quarters	1,500,000
Army transportation	14,000,000

Contingencies of the army	50,000
Equipment of engineer troops	25,000

Spends $1,000,000 for Hospitals.

The Government has paid more than $1,000,000 for the two hospital ships, the Solace and the Relief. The total expense of procuring and equipping the two vessels will not be far from $1,250,000. It is stated that if an expedition is sent to Porto Rico another hospital ship will be needed.

News of Minor Note.

Tampa, Fla., is now secure against hostile attacks.

The Government has expended $1,000,000 for army mules.

Beef is sold at $2.50 a pound in Manila and all other food in proportion.

Spanish steamers recently landed large cargoes of provisions at San Juan, Porto Rico.

The Government has accepted the offer of a battery by John Jacob Astor of New York. It will be equipped for mountain service.

The three Spanish spies who attempted to blow up Fort Taylor at Key West escaped to sea in a small boat.

Weyler is represented as being anxious to go to Cuba, and if sent he declares he will invade the United States.

At the suggestion of Gen. Wheeler, the cavalry which will invade Cuba will be provided with Gatling guns.

There is no truth in the report that an explosion occurred on the United States cruiser Baltimore at Manila.

The postal clerk force at Chickamauga Park has been increased and is now equal to that required by a community of 200,000 population in other places.

GOLD TAKEN FROM A MINE.

Digging in Australia Which Yields $250,000,000 in Thirty Years.

The richest gold mine in the world is located under the thriving town of Ballarat, Victoria, Australia. The town has about 25,000 inhabitants, nearly all of whom are employed in the mine. There are more than 100 miles of tunnels under the city, some of them being at a depth of 2,000 feet. The entrances to the mine, which is controlled by a corporation and is known as the Band, Barton and Albion councils, is outside the city. The region around Ballarat has been dug over several times by miners. It was formerly covered by a dense forest, but the trees have been chopped down, and the mark of the miner's shovel and pick is visible on all sides. Not one of the workers struck pay dirt, and the work was all done in vain.

The rock in which the gold is found beneath Ballarat is not rich in the yellow metal. It yields but half an ounce of standard gold to the ton, and yet the Band, Barton and Albion mine has yielded more than £50,000,000 in gold since it was opened thirty years ago. The work is done so systematically and so thoroughly that it is enormously profitable in spite of the low grade of the ore. The supply of paying quartz seems practically inexhaustible, and as the vein is extensive, being spread over much territory, the mine bids fair to last for centuries.

All of the paying veins of Australia run north and south, and have a dip of 25 degrees east and west. In working the mines a shaft is sunk until the vein is struck. Then the miners work upward, allowing the ore to fall backward and downward to the shaft, through which it is raised to the surface, where it is milled. The workmen in the Band, Barton and Albion are much more comfortable than the workers in a coal mine. There are no noxious gases and no danger from explosions. Pure air is forced in through various shafts, and thus into the drivers. The tunnels are drilled far apart, so that there will be no danger to the city above, where all is trade and bustle.—London Tid-Bits.

A REMARKABLE CASE.

The following case was printed originally in the Monitor, published at Meaford, Ontario. Doubts were raised as to its truthfulness, consequently a close watch was kept for two years and the original statement has now been completely verified. Mr. Petch had been a hopeless paralytic for five years. His case has had wide attention. He was confined to his bed, was bloated almost beyond recognition, and could not take solid food. Doctors called the disease spinal sclerosis, and all said he could not live. The Canadian Mutual Life Association, after a thorough examination, paid him his total disability claim of $1,650, regarding him incurable. For three years he lingered in this condition. After taking some of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People there was a slight change, a tendency to sweat freely. Next came a little feeling in his limbs. This extended, followed by a pricking sensation, until at last the blood began to course freely and vigorously through his body. Soon he was restored to his old-time health. A reporter for the Monitor recently called on Mr. Petch again and was told:

Paid His Claim.

"You may say there is no doubt as to my cure being permanent. I am in better health than when I gave you the first interview and certainly attribute my cure to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. "To these pills I owe my release from the living death, and I shall always bless the day I was induced to take them."

In the face of such testimony, can anyone say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not entitled to the careful consideration of every sufferer—man, woman or child? Is not the case, in truth, a miracle of modern medicine? These pills are sold by all druggists and considered by them to be one of the most valuable remedial agents known to science.

Aluminum Musical Instruments.

Aluminum continues to extend its province of conquests. The latest use to which this metal of the future has been adapted is in the manufacture of musical instruments. Mandolins, guitars, banjos, violins and drums are now being made with fittings of this light material. It is claimed that aluminum insures not only resistance to climatic influences, but also an actual superiority of tone.

JACKETS AND CAPES.

ARTISTIC TREATMENT APPARENT IN SUMMER WRAPS.

Jackets that Are Quite Mannish Are Relieved by Some Little Bit of Purely Feminine Adornment—Fashionable Capes Are Mostly Trimming.

Correctness in Wraps.

New York correspondence:

ARTISTIC treatment is apparent in the shops' current showings of summer wraps. Art can hardly go much further, for instance, than in the sort of tailor jacket that presents a suggestion of mannish trigness, and yet yields graciously to girlish outline and feminine fancy. What could be more misleading or more satisfactory than the first jacket of to-day's pictures? It was of unlined satin faced cloth, with severe high collar and jaunty revers to conciliate the manly taste. But a lot of dainty little pleats were set at the pinch of the waist to draw the coat into a perfect curve with the tapering figure. After that the sleeves daintily puckered at the shoulders, and a little show of dark red braiding came as another relief to what might have been "horridly gentlemanly." As sketched, this jacket was in the intense and stylish shade now called Yale blue, but much the same thing may be had in a variety of colors.

The jacket made to show a gentlemanly display of linen and a stunning waistcoat is one of the most swagger designs. Wearing it is to suggest that you can afford a change and so are able to have a second jacket that will fasten up snugly to the throat if necessary. One of this type is displayed at the left in the second illustration. It was of beige cloth, self-trimmed with bias folds, and had revers, collar and waistcoat of white pique. It is an entirely new idea, this supplying the street jacket with revers of pique or corded silk in white. The effect is dressy, and when wash pique is chosen it can be freshened as often as necessary without great trouble. Opposite this model in the same picture is a standby, the simple jacket, moderately gentlemanly in design and made to wear slightly open and display the gown and neck arrangement worn beneath. This year it appears in solid colors. Orange brown was the color of this one, and is a favorite shade. As a rule such a jacket is enlivened with a little braiding and possibly something in the way of a fancy clasp at the one fastening. In this instance the braiding was a darker brown than the goods, and the clasp was gilt.

The return of capes to stylishness is signalized by a high degree of elaborateness, and tailor capes are only occasional. Some of those offered are designed as accessories to traveling rigs, and it is one of these that holds the center of this picture. It was of dark gray ladies' cloth, was lined with the same shade of taffeta and was trimmed with rows of black satin ribbon. This type of cape is made just full enough to hang easily from the shoulders with no pleating above the bust line. It fastens with an under flap in front, may be made of double-faced material, and rows of braid or lines of small tucks may serve as trimming.

The typical dressy cape for summer is after the order of those put in today's second large picture. In it fullness and airiness or highly wrought effects, or all three, are at a premium, and the new fancy capes are quite as elaborate as they were when all women were last using capes as winter wraps. The very latest thing in these garments is the drop cape. This comes usually a little short of the waist, and is really a double cape, the under one being silk upon which is laid a pair of fluffy net or chiffon flounces one above the other. The silken portion of the cape shows in yoke-shape about the neck. At the top of the silk collar there is an upbuilding of frills to match the flounces. The right-hand one of the pictured three capes was orange silk covered with black lace and finished with two black net ruffles. The upper of these two ruffles had a heading of orange ribbons ornamented with ribbon rosettes. Simple as the general scheme of this garment is, the dressiest effects are produced by it.

Next to the cape just described is shown one that is almost as new and just as pretty. Its drop or under cape was black taffeta, and over this was a net cape on which were set three frills of grenadine, each frill closely pleated and finished at the edge with a puffing of chiffon. The edge of the drop cape was finished in the same way. The collar was a frill set up about the neck and spreading prettily to admit graded frills of chiffon-topped silk. The effect of this is better in black than in bright color.

Still another modification of the drop cape is made of all-over lace on silk, usually of a contrasting color. The lace may or may not be tacked down to the under cape, but in either case a fluting of silk, chiffon or lace finishes the under cape. One of this type completes the cape group. It was watermelon pink silk covered with heavy black lace that was not tacked down. Hem, fronts and collar were edged with black chiffon fluting. The richest lace may be used for the upper cape, and imported capes of this kind show that the cape has been woven in one piece. Still, skillful fingers can match the patterns in piece lace with very good results. A pretty variation is afforded by laying over the lace when it is not of the very heavy variety an applique design of silk to match the under cape, a spray of roses, a sweeping vine or something of the sort. As the display of the lace design is a feature of such a cape it is as a rule made little longer than the other sorts of capes, dipping just to the waist line, in front and lifting a little at the sides. The drop cape should set easily full, but the over cape, when of the variety just described, should set quite smooth.

Trees and Tides.

A very curious theory lately revived is that the sap of a living tree ebbs and flows in some way in sympathy with the tides of the ocean. The idea comes from Italy, where a grower of vines and other fruit trees, who is also a chemist, has been experimenting in this direction. He says that no tree should be lopped or pruned except during the hours of ebb tide. He has taken fourteen years to come to this conclusion, and now always acts upon it. The result is his trees and vines have developed beautiful foliage, bear splendid crops and are quite free from the attacks of the insects which devastate surrounding properties.

Simple Tests for Eggs.

A fresh egg is known by the dull appearance of its shell; a bad egg looks glossy. Drop an egg into water; if it sinks quickly and remains at the bottom it is probably fresh, but if it stands on end it is doubtful, and if it floats it is quite bad. The light test is applied by placing the egg in or in front of a paper tube and holding it up to a candle. If, on looking through it, the yolk appears round and the white surrounding it is clear, the chances are that the egg is fresh.

Three Women Relieved of Female Troubles by Mrs. Pinkham.

From Mrs. A. W. Smith, 59 Summer St., Biddeford, Me.:

"For several years I suffered with various diseases peculiar to my sex. Was troubled with a burning sensation across the small of my back, that all-gone feeling, was despondent, fretful and discouraged; the least exertion tired me. I tried several doctors but received little benefit. At last I decided to give your Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The effect of the first bottle was magical. Those symptoms of weakness that I was afflicted with, vanished like vapor before the sun. I cannot speak too highly of your valuable remedy. It is truly a boon to woman."

From Mrs. Melissa Phillips, Lexington, Ind., to Mrs. Pinkham:

"Before I began taking your medicine I had suffered for two years with that tired feeling, headache, backache, no appetite, and a run-down condition of the system. I could not walk across the room. I have taken four bottles of the Vegetable Compound, one box of Liver Pills and used one package of Sanative Wash, and now feel like a new woman, and am able to do my work."

From Mrs. Mollie E. Herbel, Powell Station, Tenn.:

"For three years I suffered with such a weakness of the back, I could not perform my household duties. I also had falling of the womb, terrible bearing-down pains and headache. I have taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel like a new woman. I recommend your medicine to every woman I know."

KILLED BY A TRAIN.

Hamilton's Ill-Luck Continued By a Week of Misfortunes.

Mrs. Thomas, wife of Frank Thomas of the Lackey store, came back from Hamilton this morning, and brought word of a terrible accident that occured there last evening. At about 8 o'clock the family of Ray Chappell, who had been in town that day started home in a two-seated rig. They were Chappell and his wife and a son and daughter. Just as they came to the crossing of the Wabash railroad about a mile east of town, the fast express came along. It is supposed they did not see the train, as it struck them on the crossing. Mr. Chappell and the boy were killed outright, and Mrs. Chappell and the girl, badly injured, just how seriously we are not informed. Mrs. Thomas says it was a terrible sight. The horse was killed. Mr. Chappell and the boy both had their necks broken, and one of Mr. Chappell's legs was also broken. They were not mangled. The wife may die, but it is believed the little girl will recover. While the train was stopped to help the injured people, a second section came near running into it.

The saw-mill of Kinney & Son was burned to the ground Wednesday, loss about $7,500.

A boy named Sharp was killed by a railroad ditcher this week.

Ransom Gates, a man well known in that district, was thrown from his buggy yesterday evening and seriously injured. He was picked up unconscious. Being an old gentleman it is feared his injuries may prove fatal.

These casualities, together with their $20,000 fire show Hamilton is having more than its share of bad luck.

Kicked By a Horse.

Frank Martin, a brother of Harry Martin, now on trial here, was seriously hurt by a kick this afternoon. He had got his horse shod and when leading it into Meyer's feed barn it kicked him just over the eye, cutting a bad gash and probably breaking the skull with one heel cork, while the other cut his lower lip. Dr. Nusbaum dressed his injuries and hopes he is not dangerously hurt. It is probable he had been drinking.

Without A Rival.

As a positive cure for sprains, bruises, and pains of all kinds, Salvation Oil has no equal. Mrs. Frank Juif, 518 Gratiot Ave., Detroit, Mich., writes: "I used Salvation Oil in my family and can say it has no rival as a liniment; it certainly cures pains. I sprained my ankle and it cured me and since then I have always used it for any pains and bruises." Salvation Oil is sold for only 25 cents. No other remedy will do the work as promptly.

COURT.

Thursday's Daily.

After the VanAuken case was over, the case against Harry Martin came up. Attorney Redmond of Kendallville assisted Prosecutor Rhodes for the state, Rose & Rose defended Martin.

Reed who had some time ago plead guilty and had been sent to the penitentiary one to three years and was now brought back to testify, was the first witness on the stand. He was a long time being examined and we give his story in brief, but all of value.

Has always lived in Kendallville or in this county. Is 29 years old. Went to California in '85 and worked four years as painter. Did not go because he had been accused of robbing a man named Kistler. After he came back, worked for different people. Got acquainted with Martin who was then at work in the foudry of the Flint, Walling & Co. plant. He said he had a shanty across the lake east of Kendallville in which he staid when he cut wood over there. Martin also cut wood there sometimes. Martin proposed to him that they go up into Fairfield some night and rob an old man who kept lots of money in the house. Decided they would need two or three more to help them. They found some men one day, who said they would. He said Martin got them some whisky, and then all got so drunk they could not go. So it fell through at that time Later on some tramps came to his shanty and after he and they and Harry Martin got well acquainted they made up a crowd to go up and do the job. They were himself, Harry Martin and three tramps. The tramps were: "Reddy," "Whitey," "Blacky" and "Frenchy." All went but Frenchy. Got to Hartman's about ten p. m. went to the house rattled around a little and tried the windows. Did this to "locate" the inmates. Asked what that meant he said they wanted to "locate" where the family slept. If disturbed people would move in bed and even get up. Then the thieves would know where they were, when it came time to break in. They then went to the barn and waited till near midnight. Then went to the house got a back window open and got in. He said Harry Martin did not go in but staid out in front to keep watch. Another man watched at the back. The three inside got the money. He did not know how much but they divided it and he got $13 and Martin $13. This was near the barn and while they divided the money, Martin got out one of Hartman's horses and a light rig and they all got in and rode back to a point near Kendallville when they all got out, turned the horse around and started it home alone. It appears that some of this story is true as young Berhalter, nephew of the Marshal, had been out to a party and coming home late, met the horse and rig. And much of his account of what happened at Hartman's house, agreed with what Hartman himself swore to later on]

It appears that soon after this, two of the tramps were arrested for breaking into Lake Shore cars and stealing goods. Two of the tramps who gave names of John Doe and Richard Roe, were tried at Albion and sent for a one to three year term in the Reformatory prison at Jeffersonville. Reed was brought over here charged with the Hartman robbery, and he had insisted that Harry Martin was with them and so Martin was arrested. Reed plead guilty and confessed, and Martin after some delay was let out on bail,

The next important witness was old Mr. Hartman himself. He is quite old and somewhat deaf, but told a plain, straight story. He and Mrs. Hartman had been roused by noises as of some one about the house, but as the sounds finally ceased, they went to sleep. At near twelve he woke up as two men came into the room. He called out, "What do you want boys?" They said they wanted something to eat. He told them he could have his wife get up and get them something. They answered it was his money they wanted. He tried to make them believe he had none. The two men in his room threatened him with revolvers. They had handkerchiefs tied over their faces so only the eyes could be seen. The third man remained in the other room but seemed to be urging the two men on. The money was found handy by in a box. They counted it and asked the old man how much it should be. He said "$97." They said this was correct and asked for more. He told them there was no more. Then they went for Mrs. Hartman, and ordered her to give up her money. She, too, insisted she had none. But the thieves said they would throw her onto the hot stove, if she did not tell, and roast her. They swore they would roast both of them. Mr. Hartman did not know his wife had any money, but told her if she had, she had better give it up. She agreed to this and told the men it was in the buttery. They soon found it, nearly $30. Then they tried the threat of roasting again. But both insisted there was no more money in the house and they might roast or burn them it would do no good. Then the thieves took some strong cords and tied the old man's hands and feet and tied him to the bedstead. Then they tied the old woman in the same way, and got ready to go. They begged the thieves not to leave them so, as they might die. But they said they would soon come back as they only wanted to go to another house, and then they would untie them. But they never came back. Soon after they had gone, the old lady, in trying the ropes, found there was one loop on one of the knots, that seemed loose, and she managed to get at that and finally loosened and untied it. Then she freed herself and then untied her husband. By this time it was one or two o'clock but fearing the robbers were still outside they waited till nearly daylight and then started out to give the alarm. He went to one of his sons and with him went to Kendallville. Mr. Hartman offered a reward of $100 and his son offered $50 more. The horse the thieves had turned loose came home, but looked as if is had been driven hard.

Here the attorneys read a deposition from "Richard Roe" now at Jeffersonville. He claimed he had met Martin and that the latter had asked him to help rob a wealthy old man up in the country. He spoke of meeting at the beer bottling plant at Kendallville.

There was the usual crossexamining etc., but work was done at good speed. Many unimportant points were brought out, that we do not copy, as they have but little or no bearing on the case.

AFTERNOON.

Joseph Berhalter, for many years marshal of Kendallville testified. He said he was the man who had workdd up the cases against those who robbed old Mr. Hartman. We arrested the men who had robbed the cars. Was present when Stroh arrested Martin Stroh had sent for him to come and help. He rode with Stroh and Martin to Auburn after the arrest. When arrested, Martin asked what he was arrested Stroh said Geo. Reed had been arrested and claims you are one of those who helped to rob old Mr Hartman, Martin swore about Reed's trying to disgrace him, and said he would kill him, for he had shown Reed many kindnesses Stroh and Berhalter had brought Reed from Angola. He had worked on the case, more or less from the date of the robbery. Thanksgiving night, in '96. In September of '97, became fully convinced that Reed had a hand in it, and telephoned to Stroh, and they arrested Reed.

It appears that Reed who has respectable relatives in Kendallville, has always been a tough citizen. November '97, a store in Kendallville was broken into and Tom Reed a confidant of Geo. Reed, went to Berhalter and told him that Geo. Reed had a hand in that burglary. So Reed was arrested, and later on Martin was arrested on Reed's word.

THE DEFENSE.

The line adopted by the defense was to show that Harry Martin was at home the night of the burglary, or at least at not Hartman's, and also, that Reed was not to be believed.

Mrs. Harry Martin testified, Reed had staid at their house some. Had been there after the burglary. Thinks the tramps "Doe" and "Roe" were arrested arrested at Reed's shack east of the lake..

Jacob Rowe sworn. He staid all night at Martin's either Thanksgiving night or the next night. Martin was at home all night.

Ben. Wiltrout sworn. Was at Kendallville Thanksgiving day day of '96, and the the day after, and remembered that on the latter day, Jacob Rowe rode home with him. (This was to Corroborate Rowe's statement about staying all night at Harry Martin's house. Harry then lived in Kendallville.)

Mrs. Wilthrout swore that Rowe came home with her, husband, the day after Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Martin, mother of Harry was sworn. Was at Brushy Prairie Thanksgiving, as her son Frank was sick.

Wm Hickman sworn. Lives in Kendallville. Reed was arrested at his place. Reed was taken up to Hartman's but on returning claimed Hartman did not identify him, But he admitted to witness that he was one of men who did the robbery. He said "Reddy," "Blacky" and "Whitey" helped him. They called him "Slickey." Did not say a word about Martin being in the gang. Witness said Reed was no good. Would work awhile then quit. To use the language of the witness, "Reed would bum his chuck whenever he could get any." Witness drove Reed away because he would not pay his board.

Mrs. Sarah Emerick, Mrs. A. J. Emerick and Mrs. Harry Martin, all gave testimony, but it threw but little light on the matter.

At 5:30 court adjourned till 8:30 Thursday morning.

THURSDAY'S COURT

At the morning session the first witness was Homer Martin, a brother to Henry. His testimony went to show that Harry was at home on the night of Thanksgiving, and that he saw Jacob Rowe next day, and was told by the latter that he had staid all night at Harry Martin's.

Chauncy Baker sworn. Live in Kendallville and work for Flint Walling & Co. He was asked if he was one of those who before Nov. 26, '96 combined to go to Hartman's. Objected. Never heard Reed and Martin and the others talk of going out there. Never saw Reed and Martin together. Have been arrested for being full. Have visited Reed's shack. (This witness is one of those arrested for starting the fire on Kendallville fair grounds.)

Mrs. Zonker sworn, is a daughter of Wiltrout. On the day after Thanksgiving day '96, I was at my father's. He came home from Kendallville and Jacob Rowe came with him.

(It should be noted that Mr. Pomeroy is one of the attorney for the state. We omitted his name yesterday.)

John Rowe sworn by the state. Martin married my step daughter, Jacob Rowe lives with me. Said Jacob staid at Kendallville night of 25th not the 26th, and that it was on Thanksgiving day, when he came home, and not the next day, as defense had claimed. Admited that last fall he said in Rose's office, he thought Harry should be sent to the penitentiary.

Mrs. John Rowe swopn. Is mother of Harry Martin, Jacob Rowe is my nephew and lives with us. She concided with her husband, that Jacob was at Harry Martin's in Kendallville the night before thanksgiving. Jacob had gone to a sale, then to Kendallville, staid over night and next day got home. They had turkey for dinner, but Jacob did not get home till about 4 p. m. Don't like Martin as well as I could like him if he was the right kind a man.

Oliver Rynearson sworn. Harry Martin had told him and Jake Rowe, that he would bet $200 he could put his hand on the man who got Hartman's money, and that if Jake Rowe did not swear he was at Harry's house on Thanksgiving night, he would consider him a liar.

Prummer Rynearson gave about same testimony as his brother, both going to show what Harry Martin said about Jake Rowe.

W. H. Thomas, of Kendallville swore that Martin and some man with came into his grocery on Thanksgiving evening.

Levi Hartman, son of the man robber went to Kendallville Thanksgiving day. Met Jake Row and Ben Wiltrout coming home. On cross examining admitted he did not remember meeting others. Here the testimony closed, at 10:30. At 11 Prosecutor Rhodes made his plea for the state, and at 11:30 James H. Rose began for the defense. When he had done, they adjourned to 1:30 p. m.

AFTERNOON.

J. E. Rose and Mr. Redmond made their arguments and then the case went to the jury.

Friday's Daily.

In giving our otherwise full and complete report of the Harry Martin case yesterday, we left out a very important part, which was Martin's own testimony. He was put on the stand by his attorneys and gave his side of the story. He denied about everything that Reed had said about him. He said he never proposed to go up to Hartman's for the purpose of robbery or anything else, never bought liquor for the men that Reed said were to help do the job, but got so drunk they could not go—never went over to Reed's shack to visit the hoboes. He admitted he had drank beer at the the bottling works, but not over at Reed's shack. He had been at Reed's at other times. He had cut wood over east of the lake, as other men who worked for Flint, Walling & Co. had done, for it seems they did not have steady work in the foundry. It will be remembered that old Mr. Hartman had in his testimony said Harry Martin and another man had come to his house to borrow money, but he had told them that he had none just then. Mr. Martin was examined on this point He said it was true that he and another man went there for that purpose. The man who went with him wanted the money, not Martin. The man was Mr. Shaffer, a man who was working with him in the foundry. It seems they worked only every other day in the foundry at that stime. As Martin flatly contradicted all the material parts of the story told by Convict Reed it is plain the jury would have to judge between the two as to which was telling the truth.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The Judge gave his charge to the jury yesterday at 3:30 and at 4, the jury retired.

JURY DISAGREE

The jury came in at 11:30 this forenoon and said they could not agree, and were discharged. They had stood 10 for acquittal and 2 for conviction and had been out since 4 p. m. yesterday, 19½ hours. They were discharged till June 20. The Lockhart case had to be put off, as one the parties was sick. Work before the Judge went right on. Martin will likely have to give bonds for another trial.

BURNED HIS FOOT.

Curtie Fell, son of Chris Fell who lives in the north end of town got his foot badly burned yesterday. He was playing the south end of town and happened to step into a pile of ashes, supposing they were cold. They proved to be live and hot and his foot was seriously burned. Wm. McIntyre Dead

After long suffering, Wm. McIntyre, breathed his last at about 11 o'clock this forenoon. For several days he has been low and his death looked for at almost any time. It is well known, how he has been growing worse, slowly, many years, his malady seeming to affect the brain and nervous system. Recently the nerves of sight suddenly gave way and he became blind. Since then his decline has been steady until he passed away. Further notice will be given tomorrow.

COMMENCEMENT

The commencement exercises of the Union, Grant and Wilmington schools, held at Norris Chapel last evening, was a decided success. The graduates handled their subjects in a manner that did them a great honor. One noticeable feature, was that no prompting was necessary. The music was furnished by the guitar and mandolin club of Waterloo, and a male quartet composed of Messrs. Warrick, Quince, Zimmerman and DeLapp of Auburn. Of course it is needless to say that this was first-class, for all are renowned artists. The diplomas were presented by ex-county superintendent, W. H. McIntosh of Auburn. The names of the graduates were as follows: From Wilmington, Bert Johnson, Walter Carper, William Hathaway and Cleo Boyle; From Grant, John W. Pepple; From Union, Isaac M. Cosper, Ona Walsworth, Ida B. Walsworth and Effa Wise.

THE POWER OF GOLD

Is Limited—The Power of Health is Unlimited—Both Rich and Poor May Have Health by Using

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

The rich need health to enjoy their riches. The poor doubly so to prevent greater poverty. Rich is he who has health, however poor in money. To be both poor and sickly is the extreme of poverty.

As all physical power, both mental and muscular, depends on the condition of the nerves, they should be strong and healthy. If strong, obey natures laws and keep them so. If weak and sickly, restore them to healthy action by using Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, which is a specific for sick nerves.

Don't treat your stomach, liver, kidneys or blood, but look well to your nerves and they will correct the troublesome symptoms of all the organs. Read what Wm. McCutchen, Bucyrus, Ohio, says:

"My trouble was sleeplessness, caused, probably, by too close application to my business. I could feel that lack of sleep was surely undermining my general health. I tried several kinds of medicine advertised to cure such troubles, but they did me no good. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer was recommended. I knew it would cure me after I had taken the first dose. Natural and refreshing sleep restored the activity of both brain and body, and I was soon well."

Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer does not stimulate the nerves to unusual action. It arrests the waste of nerve tissue and builds up the frame work of health.

FOR ALL WOMEN

Nine-tenths of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

FROM THE FRONT.

By the courtesy of Treasurer Hine, we publish the following letter from his son C. L. Hine, who is with Major Kuhlman as Sergeant Major and is seeing the south with the 157th.

Ringgold, Catoosa, Co. Ga. June 1, '98

Dear Father:—I have not heard from home for over a week, but I suppose everything is all right. We had a very hot march but the boys stood it very bravely.

We reached here about 2 p. m. and will leave sometime before morning. This "berg" is the county seat. I was just talking with the county clerk. He says the treasurer here gets about $400 a year and that he goes around and collects the tax once a year. The inhabitants of the county number about 5000 people, and their court lasts about two weeks out of a year. I am sitting in the judge's chair. The court room is about 20x30 feet. There is one old stove in the room, the only one in the building, the other rooms have fire places. There is one old candle holder on the desk, the only lighting apparatus in the room. The matting on the floor is the same that was put here when the court house was rebuilt after the war. There is sawdust where the matting is worn out and I don't believe it has been swept for ten years.

What our destination is, and how soon we will reach it, I do not know. It is either Jacksonville or Tampa.

From the reports I have lately received, the folks at Auburn get awful reports about the condition of the boys. Now I want to say that most of those reports are false, and those that have any foundation at all, start from small affairs. There has only been one serious case in our regiment and you could not pick out 1000 men and keep them at home, but what some one of the number would be sick during a month. Do not worry about your boys.

Your Son,
C. L. HINE.

NEAR DROWNING

Some little boys were at the creek fishing this forenoon, and among them a little son Charlie McDonald of the Dispatch. After getting tired of fishing the lad waded out into the stream, and stepped into a deep place that was over his head. He went down two or three times, when another lad, Wade Thomas got him out. Then Wade ran home and told his folks, and they went to McDonald's and told them Of course the latter were greatly frightened and hurried to the creek. There they found the little fellow looking as contented as you please, not realizing the great risk he had run nor the terrible scare it had given his parents. It is needless to say he was hustled home,

RHUBARB PUDDING.

An Exchange says: As rhubarb is plentiful just now, the following receipe for rhubard pudding is timely:—Cover the bottom of a buttered pudding dish with some fine bread crumbs and then with a thick layer of rhubarb cut into dice. Sugar is scattered thickly over the rhubarb, more bread crumbs added and the dish filled up in this way, bread crumbs being on top, with a few bits of butter and a slight grating of orange peal, if that flavor is liked. The pudding should be baked in a slow oven until the rhubarb is thoroughly cooked and the top of the pudding a tempting brown.

THE CANDIDATES

No convention ever named a list of cadidates that suited everybody. And no person ever went to a convention as a delegate or as otherwise interested who got all the candidates he wanted But after, one set of men may turn out to be a good as another. It will pay to give them a fair trial.

The men selected, are as far as we know them, good men. We nave but little acquaintance with Mr. Hathway, the candidate for sheriff, but are told by his neighbors, who have known him for years that he is a first-class citizen and all around good man. His home is at Garrett, and he is a liveryman.

Emlin V. Campbell, the candidate for coroner, is also a new man before the people. He is, however, what all coroners scould be, a practicing physician. He is a son of old-time frind and fellow teacher, John A. Campbell, who has also been more or less associated with us as a writer for many years. We have no doubt he will make a good man for the place.

C. M. Brown, candidate for the legislature, is well known over the county having already served in that body, to the satisfaction of his constitutents. He is a practicing attorney, a member of the firm of Baxter & Brown, in Auburn.

Our candidate for clerk is Charles A. Jenkins, of Concord township, a prosperous, well-to-do farmer, with a good education, and we have reason to believe, good business ability. We know of no reason why he will not do the work in that office, as well as it has been done recently.

Frank Seiler, the nominee for auditor, is a man about forty years old, of good habits good business education and training, and we will be sure the work of the office will be well and properly done.

Dr. F. M. Hines, for treasurer is a successful physician, a son of the late treasurer Henry Hines and a man thoroughly qualified to discharge the duties of the office himself. He is already to a certain extent familiar with its duties and details, as he was with his father a good deal and on the death of the latter, became manager of the estate and helped to settle with the county.

John Krontz, for surveyor is not a new man. He has already filled the office two years, and for a man who began without experience, has made a decided success of it. Now, with his experience and the care he has shown we think he deserves the endorsement of an increased vote.

Daniel Herrick for recorder has the very qualifications needed for that office, good education, good habits and principles, and is industrious and not afriaid to take hold and work. He will be an ideal recorder.

Allen Shultz for commissioner in the north district is one who was a candidate for the place in 1894, but went down with his ticket, though running ahead of his ticket. He has made a success of his own business and should make a success of the county's business. We have faith in his abililty to fill this difficult office well.

Isaac Gunsenhouser, for the southeast district is already serving in that capacity. He came to the office at a time, when difficult and disagreeable work had to be done, but he has done his duty as it was given him to see it, without fear or favor, and we believe the people are as nearly suited with him as can be in that office, for it is one of difficulty. We have no doubt he will have a larger majority than he had then.

Altogether, then, the ticket is a good one, made of good material and located nicely over the county. We look to see it get the full party vote and be triumphantly elected.

We can only speak with regret of the men who were defeated in the contest. They are, to our personal knowledge men of ability and sterling worth. We are sorry there could not be good fortune for all. But some must fail. It is no disparagement to the nominees to say that those who failed were as good men every way as as those who succeeded.

And finally, now is a good chance for us all to put our shoulders to the wheel and secure for a DeKalb county a set of officers, at once able, honest and cleun.

SEND THE BOYS MONEY.

Several of the soldiers at the front have written home to their friends over the state, not to send them delicacies, clothing, and other gifts, but send them money, instead and they can buy all sorts of delicacies fresh from the farms or markets, and get suitable clothing as cheap as here. And it will save express charges, and sometimes a loss. One loving mother sent her son a box of early strawberries while at Chickamauga. It was a delicacy that was highly prized up here in the north, for our own berries had not blossomed. They cost 30 cents a quart. But as they were raised in Georgia, where the boys were in Camp, it looked foolish to send them down there to their old home. And when they had got back to Georgia, they were not as nice as when they started north two weeks before. If the son had money he could have got nice fresh berries at half the price the mother paid, to say nothing of the big express charge. Hundreds of instances not as bad as this, howevea, could be cited. But anyone can see how easy it will be for the boys to get what they want if they have the money. Everything needed can be got in the south as well as here. Send the boys money and let them buy what they want. Of course when they are in Cuba, it will be difficult to get anything to them. But Uncle Sam will take care of his boys.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Thursday's Daily.

The governor of Manila writes home, that he cannot hold the city or country much longer.

Our fleet has been knocking to pieces the forts at Santiago, and some harbors near by, where we may want to land troops.

Food is scarce at both Havana and Manila.

The report of the sinking of a Spanish ship at Santiago reported by us yesterday the Spanish cruiser Mercedes, was destroyed at Santiago by our vessels.

The item that our boys were on the sea, also proved correct. The 157 was in the big expedition that started from Tampa yesterday. They did not get off at the hour expected, as they had been delayed in getting the big siege guns loaded. The weak docks, were nearly smashed by the enormous weight and the derrick was not powerful enough to handle them. It is believed they will reach Santiago Sunday. After reducing Santiago, they will probably, hurry on to Porto Rico.

Full report now as to the fight with three Spanish torpedo boats Friday night. The ships watching the channel at Santiago saw the three vessels stealing along out of the channel and then east in the darkness. Our blockading ships turned on their search lights, and fired on them. Soon one was seen to turn over and go down. The other two escaped. One of our ships had a big gun dismounted by a shot from a shore battery.

Friday's Daily.

It has been hard work to get transport ships enough to take troops to the Philippines. With what has already gone, it is expected to take 20,000 in all.

The Spanish government has at last permitted the common people to know that their fleet at Manila was utterly destroyed May 1, by Dewey. The news has caused a panic.

Reported and generally believed, that Santiago has been taken. It is certain that a great deal of bombardment has taken place, but no news seems to come over the cables

A train of Iowa soldiers going to San Francisco had a car take fire, and lost all the clothing of the men in that car. They were asleep, and so had to travel the rest of the way in their underclothes.

Two more cables have been cut, that lead out from Santiago or near there One goes to the British Island of Jamacia, and the other to the Independent island, Hayti. They are however, attached to a float, so our men can pick them up when needed to be spliced again.

It is rumored that three smaller Spanish cruisers have sneaked into Havana in spite of the blockade. If this is true they are probably bottled up like their ships at Santiago.

And now comes a rumor that the 157th did not sail with the expedition the other day, We'll soon know any way.

The Spaniards have kept saying that only a part of their fleet was cooped up in Santiago harbor. Now, we have it ptetty straight that they are all in there.

Saturday's Daily.

We have conflicting reports as usual. One account says we bombard Santiago about every day. Another says we have not fired at her for several days. Probably the truth is, we have shelled them now and then, enough to keep them on a strain day an night, so as to tire them out.

We are working to get a harbor near Santiago, where we can land. If we landed infantry only, they could be put ashore almost anywhere. But we want to land heavy cannon or siege guns to use against Santiago. So we must have a place where there is a strong pier We find a short distance east of Santiago, the little harbor and its pier, lately occupied by an American company that was mining iron at a mine about six miles in the interior. Since the rebellion began about three years ago, the mines stopped work. And now, we propose to use their piers, and the modern, improved derricks that are still there and in good condition It is just what we want, to help us to unload the big guns. A little railroad runs up to the mines, and we may use that to start out into the country. Once fairly landed we can move back towards Santiago, and take the enemy in the rear.

Again it is reported that Spanish warships have been seen sneaking along the coast of the United States. apparently looking for a chance to shell a defenseless city. It is not probable.

Spaniards now claim they are to get help from France. At least they are to have some skilled gunners from that country, as the Spanish gunners have proved no good.

AMERICAN FLAG DAY,

(Goshen Democrat.)

Tuesday June 14 will be flag day and the American colors should float from every flag staff in the city and from evey residence and business house as well. It was on June 14, 1777, that the Congress declared that the "flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white, on a blue field, representing a new constellation." Flag day will doubtless be more generally celebrated this year than ever before, owing to the fact that the nation is at war, and that victory has already added a new luster to the national colors. The sale of flags will be unusually large and merchants are already stocking up.

State Supt. Public Instruction.

W. B. Sinclair of Knox is a candidate for state superintendent of public instruction on the democratic ticket. He was on the ticket two years ago, but met defeat with the rest of his party. But he made a good race, and should, we believe, be given another chance this year. Just now, it looks as if it would be wisdom for DeKalb county delegates to Indianapolis to give him our support. He has had many years of experience in school work, which will fit him for this office.

FROM COMPANY K.

The Boys Are About to Bid Farewell to Uncle Sam's Big Farm.

PORT TAMPA, FLA. June 6, 1898. Co. K 157, Ind., Vol., Inft.

EDITOR DAILY COURIER:—Last Monday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock the 157th went wild with enthusiasm over the order to move to Tampa. Fla., as soon as transportation was secured. Monday night, Tuesday and Tuesday night was spent in rapid preparation to move, and Wednesday at 9:20 marched for Ringgold, Ga., an old town situated on the Western & Atlanta R. R., about eleven miles from our camping place at Chicksamauga Park, arriving there at 2 p. m.

Ringgold snugly nestles in the shadows of the Comberland mountains and was the site of several big battles and camping grounds during the civil war, at one time there being over one hundred and sixty thousand soldiers camped there among whom were Armstrong, Devans and Thomas' Divisions. Just south of Ringgold about one mile there is a large gap in the mountains and where during the war one of the most noted battles occurred. Our arrival at Ringgold was not expected and no such scene like it had been witnessed since 1861-65, and what excitement it created and what experiences and memories it brought back would be hard to relate. But the people were equal to the occasion and hospitality to a fault was shown by the citizens. The boys will never forget the kind reception the people gave, the old antique mansions, the lovely shade and good water. Here's luck to the people at Ringgold, Ga. May they live long and prosper. At 9:30 we boarded sleeping cars on the fourth section for Tampa, stopping at Atlanta, Macon and other cities enroute, arriving here at 1 o'clock p m., Friday, June 4th. We are camped in about one hundred yards of the sea, among a low growth of palmetto. We have a fine place to bathe and the boys spend most of their leisure time in swimming, gathering shells, star fish and crabs, of the latter there has been found several different species. The most formidable object frequently met while bathing is the "horse-shoe crab." While the crab is comparatively harmless, yet it is ugly enough to give you a good scare. The star fish are found out quite a distance in the bay after the tide recedes. Quite a number of the boys have gathered a nice collection which they intend sending home. There is a big feast of sights presented here for the boys. We are camping near the harf and docks where steamers and ships of every description can be seen. There are thirty-two large transport boats in the docks and harbor now, which are being loaded night and day for our embarkation. Among some of the largest of these are the Iroquois, Cherokee & Decatur H. Miller. There are four war vessels in harbor here-the Helena Warship and four small gun boats. The officers' horses were loaded today at noon and everything else but what was actually needed for a few days camping. The regiment will carry as little as possible. Each soldier will embark with only one blanket, haversack and canteen. The reason for not taking knapsack and other articles is that it would impede quick marching.

We heard a great deal about there being so much sickness at Tampa before we arrived but have found since we came that there is very little sickness here, not as much as at Chickamauga Park. We have had no new sickness in the regiment since we came and those who were sick at Chickamauga are now rapidly improving. So much for a good sea breeze. The water here is very inferior and the boys will go until they are very thirsty before drinking.

Quite a number of the boys had the pleasure of boarding some of the transport boats since they came. Worthy Keller, George Everett, Elmer Lane, Sam Anthony and J. C. Loveland visited the Iroquois and Cherokee transports. It will be remembered that these two vessels were formerly war ships of the old-style make which have recently been remodeled into transports

There is quite a sentiment of enmity existing on the part of the regular soldiers here. They cannot bear the idea of the volunteers being shown any preference, and do not think we are capable of being soldiers. Time will prove all things. The nearer we approach the conflict, the fewer "white feathers" are shown and you can see that every man has a set determination to do his best. As soon as we embark we take the first decisive steps in warfare. Col. Studebaker is exerting every effort to gain as many honors for the regiment as possible. We will be the first regiment mustered in, the first regiment to move to Chickamauga, the first to go to Tampa and the first to embark.

The people who write to the boys will address all mail to Port Tampa City, Fla., and must be sure and put the company and regiment on the address, as there has been a great deal of trouble caused to the postmaster by letters not being properly addressed.

This possibly will be the last letter the COURIER will receive from its correspondent for some time, but will grasp every opportunity after we leave to send in a letter. At this writing you find the boys enjoying good health and in excellent spirits. With best wishes to the Old Reliable COURIER and friends at home

A LETTER

Rev. W. L. Meese shows another of the interesting communications he receives from various sources since he has become so widely known through the matrimonial association. Here it is:

MIAMISBURG, AUG. 2, '97.

REV. WILLIAM L. MEESE,

SIR:—I saw your picture and a part of your biography in the Enquirer. My curiosity lead me to write to find out whether we both had the same name or not, as different families spell the name a little different. My father, Leuro Meese, came to Ohio in 1816, from Lebanon county, Penn. There were there brothers of us, one older and one younger than myself. My oldest brother died on the old home farm two years ago My younger brother was in the ministry in the Reform church 18 years in Cincinnati, afterward in Chicagy, and died in Nebraska. He was editor of the Chistian World 13 years. The original stock emigrated from Hesse to this country in Colonial times. Three brothers, one married. The other single one brought his sweet heart with him. The colony had to live in block houses for protection from Indiana. While out at work the Indians broke on them, killed several and scalped this young lady but she gained the block house and got well and died an old lady, a few years ago. I stood by the grave where it was said she was buried. Our relatives have become scattered, but the greater portion live in Pennsylvania. My older brother's widow is living and has one son and three daughters all married but one daughter at home. I have no family except my wife; we are living in Miamsburg 19 years. I was 73 years old last Newyear day. One of my nieces when, she saw the picture in the paper, said. That looks like grandpa Mease's picture.

Yours truly,
LEVI W. MEASE.

FROM LITTLE ROCK.

Office of Auditor of State

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., June 8, '98.

EDITOR COURIER:—The death of Mr. D. B. Gilbert a few days ago in this city having been reported as a case of suicide in the public press, I would like to give contradiction to said statement. I knew the deceased well, since he became a resident of this city several years ago, and I with many others know that there is no cause for such an act, and no intention upon his part to pass away to the great beyond.

His financial surroundings were most encouraging. He had entered into an industry for which he was well equipped the manufacture of tobacco use, and his extended experience in the great tobacco producing state of Kentucky in which he had been reared and educated, gave him advantages that were speeding him to the front when an attack of heart trouble, brought the sad ending of what promised a prosperous career.

Several brands put upon the market by his house had already grown popular and kept them busy with orders, and having an exclusive field in this territory where tobacco as an article of consumption has a rare sale, the future was most promising, while the past had responded with tangible results.

His domestic surrounding gave forth a full measure of peace, happiness and contentment that few are permitted to enjoy in this life. Loving and beloved he and his wife dwelt together in charming unison, the wish of one being the will of the other, so that their lives blended in perfect harmony. Loyal and devoted he never lost occasion to render his first true love due return for her loving faith and fidelity. They were inseparable in their companionship, and where one found enjoyment it was bliss for the other, and that he should want to sever by his own voluntary act a tie that held them in genial, warm, true-hearted love, is simply ridiculous. Instinctively polite and affable always kind and considerate, Mr. Gilbert held with hooks of steel those whom his judgment had approved, and his passing away in the blush of manhood brought more regret in their hearts than had he achieved honor and glory in more ambitious fields.

His wife being the oldest daughter of Mr. Cosper Altenburg formerly of your locality I feel like making this statement that public rumors may not work to the prejudice of a worthy man. The Coroner's jury, and the attending physician unhesitatingly pronounced it a case of paralysis of the heart.

A PAPER-HANGING MACHINE.

(Fort Wayne Journal.)

Paper hanging by machines is the latest achievement in mechanics. The arrangement used for this purpose is provided with a rod upon which the roll of paper is placed. A receptacle with a brushing arrangement is attached in such a manner that the paste is applied automatically on the back of the paper. The end of the wall paper is fixed at the bottom of the wall, and the implement rises on the wall and needs to be set by one workman only. As the wall paper unrolls and is provided with paste it is held against the walls by an elastic roller which follows on the outside and presses it firmly to the wall. When the wall paper has reached the top the workman pulls a cord whereby it is cut off from the remainder of the roll.

Thirteen Hours' Fight at Guantanamo.

Spanish Guerillas and Regulars to the Number of 3,500,

Fail to Dislodge Eight Hundred Marines.

American Loss Four Killed and One Wounded, Spanish Loss Heavy.

First Battle on Cuban Soil.

Hunington's marines were continuously engaged thirteen hours up to 8 o'clock Sunday afternoon, fighting the Spanish guerillas and regulars at the entrance of Guantanamo harbor. The Americans finally landed reinforcements. The Spanish loss is believed to be heavy. We lost four killed and one wounded. Our advance pickets are unaccounted for. Among our dead is Assistant Surgeon John Blair Gibbs. His home is in Richmond, but he has lately been practicing in New York City.

The others killed are Sergeant Charles H. Smith of Smallwood, Private William Dunphy of Gloucester, Mass., and Private James McColgan of Stoneham, Mass. Corporal Glass was accidentally wounded. The Spanish loss is unknown, but it was probably considerable. Splashes of blood were found at daylight at the position the Spaniards occupied, and indicate fatalities, but their comrades carried off the killed and wounded. The engagement began with a desultory firing at the pickets a thousand yards inland from the camp. Captain Spicer's company was doing guard duty and was driven in, finally rallying on the camp and repulsing the enemy at 5 o'clock. The bodies of Privates McColgan and Dunphy were found both shot in the head. Large cavities were caused by the bullets, which inside a range of 500 yards have rotary motion, and indicate that the victims were killed at close range. The bodies were stripped of shoes, hats and cartridge belts, and were horribly mutilated with machetes.

Japan Enters a Strong Protest.

Japan has entered a strong protest against the duty on tea provided for in the war revenue bill The protest was sent to the State Department and by it forwarded to the Conference Committee. The protest is based on the ground that a uniform duty of 10 cents a pound on teas, cheap or dear, will have the effect of ruining Japan's tea trade with the United States. Japan, it says, would not object to a duty graded according to value. The protest was submitted as a result of instructions from the Japanese Foreign Office.

Will Raise the Price of Beer.

The price of beer will be advanced $1 per barrel by all Milwaukee breweries as soon as the war revenue measure becomes a law. This statement was made by Eugene Westhoff, general manager of the Schlitz Brewing Company, who is Secretary of the Milwaukee Brewers' Association. The brewers say they fought the tax to their utmost, but their efforts proved futile, and they determined on the move in order to be reimbursed for the additional outlay in taxes.

A Tragedy.

At Kalamazoo, Mich., Charles Langley quarreled with his wife over the insurance which he carried in favor of his father, and he shot her twice, causing instant death. He then shot himself below the heart. Doctors say he cannot live. Langley is 29 years of age and married Mrs. Wilson, May 21. She was 45 and had been married twice. Her life was insured in favor of her husband.

Corn Exports.

The corn exports during the present fiscal year will be double those of any year in the history of the country except 1897. The exportation will exceed 210,000,000 bushels. In 1897 the exportation amounted to 178,718,837 bushels, and the previous high-water mark was 103,418,709 bushels in 1893.

TWO NEGROES LYNCHED.

Result of Murder of City Marshal at Clarksville, Mo.

An excursion boat from Quincy, Ill., and Hannibal, Mo., arrived at Clarksville, Mo., with about 300 negroes on board. After the boat had tied up, Curtis Young got into a fight with a colored woman named Lena Bryan of Hannibal. The row became general and City Marshal Meloan went on board to quell it. He put Curtis Young under arrest, when somebody in the crowd shot the marshal in the back and he died in fifteen minutes. There was great excitement through the town when the shooting became known, and the citizens began to patrol the streets armed with guns and revolvers. A posse of fifty men went on board the boat and arrested Sam Young, Curtis Young, Bob Taylor and Charley Taylor, all colored, and took them to the city jail, where they were all locked up pending the arrival of the prosecuting attorney. When that officer arrived he found that Curtis and Sam Young had been taken from the jail and hanged to a convenient tree.

FARMER SHOOTS RIOTERS.

Men Who Attack Harry P. Jacobs Are Greeted with Bullets.

Twenty unmasked men went to the home of Harry P. Jacobs, a farmer living two miles north of Washington Court House, Ohio, and ordered him out, telling him to move away immediately. He refused to comply, and kept the doors locked. They then battered down the doors. Jacobs stood inside with a shotgun in his hands, and he fired as the men rushed in. Dean Hidy, a wealthy farmer, was shot in the abdomen, and he lies in a critical condition. Jesse Everhardt's arm was broken and Ote Hidy was scalped. Jacobs was finally overpowered and threatened with death if he did not swear he would refuse to betray the rioters. He was brought by the mob to a hut in Washington Court House more dead than alive, and bound to a straw bed, where he was found by the sheriff. Five persons have been arrested.

HOLLAND BOAT SUCCESSFUL.

Makes a Trial Trip Near New York Which Is Satisfactory.

The first of a series of experiments with the Holland submarine boat prior to a final official trip and inspection of the craft by a Government board of inspectors, took place in the Bay Ridge yacht basin, New York. The craft was submerged to a depth of fourteen feet at the dock. During the afternoon a speed trial was made to determine the efficiency of the new motor batteries. The vessel was taken over a mile course in the open bay, with the tide, in five and one-half minutes, going at half speed. This was considered by Mr. Holland as a highly satisfactory record. The batteries are designed to propel the vessel for six hours at an eight-knot speed. Later the vessel will test her aerial and submarine torpedo apparatus.

ESCAPES FROM MEXICO.

Texan Reaches the Frontier After Long Imprisonment.

E. C. Congdon, at one time postmaster at Pearsall, Texas, has reached El Paso, after escaping from prison at Chihuahua, Mexico, and evading the soldiers sent in pursuit of him. Nine years ago Congdon was sentenced to be shot for killing a Mexican policeman, but on the day set for his execution the governor commuted his sentence to life imprisonment. In the filthy penitentiary he managed to win the confidence of his guards, and was recently made a "trusty." While so employed he found an opportunity to escape. He made his way to the northern frontier, crossed the border and arrived at El Paso completely worn out.

Clothing for Soldiers.

There is something of a muddle in Washington over army clothing for the men. It has been decided to award no more contracts for duck suits, which the experts in such matters find to be of too close a texture and too heavy in weight for the climatic condition in Cuba or Porto Rico. This has made it necessary to secure a large number of linen uniforms, of which but two articles for each man will be purchased, the coat and trousers. The clothing will be of approved color, a species of drab which is suggestive of comfort and offers the least target to the enemy's rifles. The quartermasters have found it is next to impossible to secure duck in this country, as the producers of this material have had unusual demands made upon them by the navy for clothing, bags, sails, etc., while the army itself has endeavored to place large orders for tentage. The Alaskan expeditions have also drawn liberally upon the domestic sources of supply. The quartermasters of the army state that complaints from Tampa of the non-arrival of uniforms and necessary equipage for camp and field is due not so much to the failure to award contracts and exact promptness in fulfilling them as to the lack of railroad facilities at Tampa. They point to the instance of clothing, urgently needed in the military expeditions, which have been in the freight cars at Tampa for two weeks. It was at the request of the quartermaster general that Gen. Shafter was selected to make use of the enlisted men to such an extent as might be necessary in handling supplies and aiding in the distribution of them.

General Jiminez Is Held.

Gen. Jiminez, the leader of the revolutionary expedition which recently landed in Monte Cristi, San Domingo, was arrested by the British authorities for a violation of the navigation laws in flying a Clyde line flag. The Fanita, the vessel in which the expedition sailed, was sold by the Clyde line company six months before. Chris Roberts, the pilot of the expedition, made a complaint on the foregoing grounds. The American consul also prosecuted Jiminez, alleging that the expedition was illegal, inasmuch as the Fanita's papers were ostensibly for service in Cuban waters. The Fanita has arrived at Key West, where her captain refused to make any statement regarding the trip. When Monte Cristi was reached and anchor cast the captain was surprised to see Gen. Jiminez come on deck in uniform and fully armed, followed by Gen. Morrillo and two officers, similarly equipped. They ordered rifles and ammunition to be put aboard the long boat that was to row them ashore, and then commanded their ten alleged laborers to take their seats in the boat. No sooner had they reached the wharf where Gen. Jiminez and his party landed than a volley of musketry was heard and three of the party fell wounded. The first to fall was Gen. Morrillo. Troops were seen advancing in large numbers and the sailors in the Fanita's boat were seized with terror and shoved off from the wharf amid a rain of bullets. Gen. Jiminez jumped into the boat just in time and, seeing an oar, joined the crew in pulling for the steamer, which promptly pulled out.

Affairs in the Orient.

The steamer Empress of Japan brings the following advices from the orient: Fifteen deaths occurred at Hong Kong from plague before the Empress left. Among the victims was a son of Mr. Lane of Lane, Crawford & Co., millionaire merchants. Coal is selling in Hong Kong at $30 (Mexican) per ton to arrive at $18 (Mexican). The secretary of the Japanese treasury, in a conversation in Yokohama, admitted that Japan's financial condition was straitened. The Wei-Hai-Wei indemnity will be expended in increasing her armament. The Chinese Government has agreed to the French claims that 30,000 yen be distributed among the families of murdered missionaries and that a church at Peh Hai port, Canton province, be erected. Li Ching Fong, late Chinese minister to Japan, is said to be going to Europe on a special mission to induce the powers to guarantee the independence of China. Late advices from Shashi, the scene of the recent anti-foreign riots, state that ten of the rioters have been arrested. Two hundred soldiers and two Chinese warships had arrived to preserve order. The feeling against foreigners was still very bitter. The report concerning the disturbance at Shashi has thrown the Chinese Government into a state of serious consternation, and the ministers are greatly troubled to know what measures ought properly to be taken at this juncture. The Chungai hears from certain Chinese at Yokohama that the rising of the mob at Shashi is supposed to be due to the institution of the Karokwai, a powerful secret society, which aims at overthrowing the present Chinese Government.

CAPTURE A FREIGHT TRAIN.

Men Looking for Work in Kansas Capture Santa Fe Cars.

Two hundred men, who claim they are not tramps, went through Newton, Kan., in absolute charge of a regular Santa Fe freight train. They had captured the cars east of there, and while they did not attempt to run or man the train they directed its movements. The men claimed to be seeking work in the western Kansas harvest fields. They declared they were in such a condition that they had to have work, and the only resource was to capture the train. They took it and forced the trainmen to do their bidding. The men say they are from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and were attracted by the reports in the East that there is a scarcity of harvest labor in Kansas. The crowd has a captain, W. B. Sterling of Kansas City, and H. A. Harding of the same place as lieutenant.

THIS CHILD A HEROINE.

Loses Her Life Trying to Save That of Her Baby Brother.

Three children met death by the explosion of a can of oil. Their clothing ignited and the children were burned so terribly they died in a short time. The victims were: Ella, Edith and Harville Watts, children of Charles Watts of Ferneva Hill, near Woods Run avenue, Allegheny, Pa., aged 11 and 7 years and 4 months, respectively. The eldest child proved herself a heroine, for with the flames roasting her body she tried to carry her baby brother to a place of safety. Mrs. Watts was also burned in trying to save her children.

Work of a Teutonic Ripper.

A veritable epidemic of woman murders afflicts Berlin, Germany, and what is more remarkable is that the majority of the victims belong to the unfortunate class. Another of these unfortunates, named Anna Singer, was found murdered in her apartments. Her throat was cut from ear to ear, and her body brutally cut and bruised. The description of the murderer in this case tallies with that of the suspected perpetrator of a dozen other crimes committed during the last four weeks in the lower quarters of the city. He is described as a modestly dressed young man, tall, and of muscular build, with light hair and a fine, carefully trimmed light mustache. This mysterious individual was seen entering and leaving the apartments of Anna Singer by a number of her companions, both before and after the crime is supposed to have been committed. The police are exhausting their energy and resources in trying to arrest the murderer, but beyond the clew furnished by the companions of the murdered woman nothing has been discovered.

Ohio Man Is Missing.

Relatives of Ernest L. Baker, son of the Mayor of Genevo, Ohio, have been searching for his supposed remains at the San Francisco morgue, as he is reported to have sent a letter to Miss Leona Spicer of Healdsburg to the effect that by the time her eyes fell upon it his life would be closed by an act of his own hand. Inquiry at the recruiting office shows that the supposed suicide enlisted in the naval service on May 20.

They are charged with aiding and abetting the defaulting teller, William N. Boggs, to misapply funds of the National Bank of Dover. The amount charged in the indictment against Senator Kenney is $23,461.91.

The war revenue measure was passed by the Senate Saturday evening at 7:05 o'clock. A score or more of attempts were made to amend it, but in only three or four instances were the attempts successful. The most notable amendment adopted was that offered by Mr. Tillman of South Carolina, placing a duty of 10 cents a pound on all tea imported into the United States. The amendment created no debate and was adopted by a vote of 38 to 32. As finally completed the bill was passed by a vote of 48 to 28. Mr. Allison moved that the Senate insist upon its amendments and that conferees be appointed. The motion was agreed to and Messrs. Allison, Aldrich and Jones of Arkansas were named as conferees. In the House Mr. Lacey of Iowa secured consideration of the Senate bill to protect homesteaders who may enlist and serve in the forces of the United States. After some delay it was passed.

The war revenue bill was advanced a step further. It was received in the House as amended in the Senate, and the lower branch of Congress accordingly became the center of legislative interest. Mr. Dalzell, from the Committee on Rules, presented a resolution introduced by Mr. Dingley providing for an immediate vote upon general non-concurrence and sending the bill to conference. After some debate the vote was taken upon the resolution. Mr. Bailey demanded the yeas and nays, the roll call resulting: Yeas, 137; nays, 106. It was a party vote. The House then voted to non-concur and agreed to the conference, and the Speaker named Messrs. Dingley, Payne and Bailey as conferees. Under suspension of the rules the Senate bill ratifying an agreement between the Dawes commission and the Seminole Indians providing for the allotment of the latter's lands, was passed. Beyond the passage of an urgent deficiency bill, made necessary by the war with Spain, the Senate accomplished little. The deficiency measure carries appropriations for ahe war and navy establishments aggregating $17,745,000.

The Senate on Tuesday passed the bill for the allotment in severalty of certain lands to the Indians of Indian Territory, the payment of interest claims to the Chickasaw Indians, and the ratification of the agreement effected with the Indians by the Dawes commission. Section 26, which provided for the segregation of 157,600 acres of land purchased by the Delawares from the Cherokees, 100 acres of the land to be allotted to each registered Delaware, and the remainder reserved to the descendants of deceased registered Delawares, was stricken from the bill. Consideration was resumed of the measure providing for the taking of the twelfth census. After disposing of the urgent war deficiency bill, as passed, with amendments by the Senate, the House considered the conference report upon the sundry civil bill. The report, so far as it embodies agreements, was adopted, and the House then began voting severally upon the Senate amendments, upon which no agreement had been reached in conference. Of these there are forty-five. The House considered eight of these, acting favorably upon three and rejecting the remainder. The House adjourned pending disposition of a measure to enable volunteer soldiers to vote at congressional elections during the war. It involved constitutional questions. The Senate resolution was passed authorizing the President to waive the one-year supension from promotion and order re-examination in the army in certain corps during the existing war.

A bill providing for the taking of the twelfth census was passed by the Senate on Wednesday after a debate which occupied the greater part of three days. The House disposed of the Senate amendments of the sundry civil bill and agreed to further conference. The conference report upon the postoffice appropriation bill was adopted without debate. A bill was passed authorizing the construction of a high bridge across Rock river on the Illinois and Mississippi Canal in Illinois.

After five hours devoted to the consideration of the bill to enable volunteer soldiers to vote in congressional elections, the conference report upon the war revenue bill was presented to the House on Thursday. Consideration was interrupted by a recess to 8 o'clock in the evening, when the report was taken up again, and after three hours' debate, involving a wide range of subjects and some sensational features, it was voted upon and adopted—154 to 107. The Senate passed without division a bill providing American registry for the steamers Olympia, Victoria, Tacoma, Columbia, Arizona and Argyle of the Northern Pacific Steamship Company. The "omnibus claim bill," carrying over $9,000,000, forty private-pension bills and several measures from the general calendar, were passed. Bills were passed as follows: Permitting Col. Anson Mills, Third United States cavalry, to accept and exercise the office of boundary commissioner between the United States and Mexico; to amend an act establishing a court of private land claims, requiring claims to be filed before March 3, 1901; to amend an act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota.

Shortly after 4 o'clock Friday afternoon the conference report on the war revenue bill was agreed to by the Senate, after a discussion lasting four hours. The debate upon the measure was without special incident and was entirely devoid of acrimonious features. It was a foregone conclusion that the report would be agreed to and the only question of interest involved was how soon a vote could be reached. The report was agreed to by the decisive vote of 43 to 22. The feature of the day's session of the house was the securing of an agreement to consider and vote upon the Newlands resolution to annex Hawaii.

WEATHER AND CROP BULLETIN.

Favorable Conditions Prevail in States of Central Valley.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued the following climate and crop bulletin for the week:

The favorable weather conditions of the previous week have continued in the States of the central valleys and on the middle Atlantic coast, while in the East Gulf and South Atlantic States, and Southwest Texas the drought has become more pronounced. The temperature conditions to the eastward of the Rocky Mountains have been generally highly favorable, but in the Rocky Mountain region and over the greater part of the Pacific coast it has been too cool, with freezing weather and frosts in portions of Idaho, Nevada, and Eastern Oregon. Corn planting is now practically completed in the more northerly sections and the crop has received its last cultivation in the Southern States, where it is suffering from drought.

In the principal corn States of the central valleys the week has been exceptionally favorable for growth and cultivation, and the crop is generally clean and in good condition. In Nebraska and portions of Missouri, however, cultivation has been delayed by rains, and in North Dakota it is backward and needs sunshine. Winter wheat harvest has been completed in the South Atlantic and Gulf States, except in Texas, where it continues. Harvesting has begun in North Carolina and Tennessee and will begin this week in Kentucky and in the southern portion of Illinois and Missouri. The crop is maturing rapidly and in excellent condition in the central and northern sections, although some complaints of rust are recorded from portions of New Jersey, Maryland, Tennessee, Missouri and Kansas. Thrashing is in progress with satisfactory results in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States.

The condition of the crop in Washington and Oregon continues most favorable, and in California there will be better yield than was expected. Spring wheat has made rapid growth and its condition is most promising generally throughout the spring-wheat region; in Southern Minnesota it is nearing the heading stage.

NEW MINISTER TO TURKEY.

Oscar Straus Held That Position Under President Cleveland.

Oscar Straus, who has been nominated as minister to Turkey, is a Democrat, and held the same position during President Cleveland's first administration, when, although a Jew, he was exceedingly popular among the Christian missionaries. They have placed on record at the State Department formal testimony of their appreciation of his services, and privately they assert that he was the best minister we have had at the sultan's court since Gen. Wallace's time. Mr. Straus, with his brothers, Nathan and Isadore, compose the firm of Macy & Co., and conduct the big department store in New York City. He is also a lawyer in active practice. Mr. Straus has been active in the International Jewish Historical Association, and is the author of a notable book reciting the achievements of his race in commerce, politics, literature, science, music and other branches of learning and industry.

OSCAR STRAUS.

WAR'S HEAVY COST.

Congress Told That for a Year It Will Be $600,000,000.

Practically without debate, the House Thursday passed the urgent deficiency bill providing for emergency expenses of the army and navy departments incident to the war. It was based upon estimates received recently from the departments and carries items aggregating $17,845,000 contemplated in the Philippine expedition and the early movements upon Cuba.

In explaining the bill during the brief discussion Mr. Cannon, replying to a question by Chairman Dingley of the Ways and Means Committee, said $600,000,000 would be a conservative estimate of the cost of the war for a year, if it lasted that long. Incidentally he estimated the appropriations already made on account of the war and likely to develop as essential, including the first six months of the coming fiscal year, at $350,000,000.

As reported by the Committee on Appropriations and passed by the House, the bill incorporates the more urgent of the war estimates submitted to the House Wednesday by Secretary Alger, whose explanation of which called forth the significant official letter transmitted therewith. It also includes an emergency appropriation of $10,000,000 for the navy. The items appropriated follow:

Contingent expenses of the army incident to the expedition to the Philippines, to be expended under the direction of the commanding general of the Philippine Islands, in his discretion, for such purposes as he may deem best in the execution of his duties under the orders of the President, and for such objects as are not now appropriated for, to be available until expended	$100,000
Expeditionary force to Cuba, machinery, equipment, etc.	350,000
Signal service of the army	195,000
Subsistence department	6,000,000
Medical department	50,000
Naval establishment, for emergency fund to meet any emergencies that cannot possibly be foreseen, but which constantly arise under existing conditions	10,000,000
Torpedo defense of Manila harbor	150,000
Bureau of naval supplies and accounts	1,000,000
Clothing and small stores for the navy	1,000,000

USE EXPLOSIVE BULLETS.

Twelve Men Killed in a Mountain Feud in Kentucky.

Clay County, Kentucky, is in terror over the Baker-Howard feud, which has become one of the most startling mountain wars in Kentucky's history. Men who are wounded are refused succor by citizens because they fear the wrath of the opposing factions. The Howard faction says the Bakers are using explosive bullets. Many re-enforcements have come in from Pineville and other places, bringing rifles and revolvers of heavy caliber. The factions are well armed and have large supplies of ammunition. The Bakers and Whites on one side are rich and influential, the White family having been chronic office holders for many years. Opposing them are the Howards, Gerrards and Philpots, all powerful families with large connections.

News of Minor Note.

Coffee will not be taxed in the war revenue bill.

Two men at Marblehead, Mass., died from drinking wood alcohol.

Mrs. Betsey Barker of North Grafton, Miss., recently celebrated her 100th birthday.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Bicknell Suffers Heavy Loss by Fire—Intelligent Dog Saves a Child's Life—Steel Plant for East Chicago—Young Criminal Fatally Shot.

Almost Wiped Out by Fire.

The town of Bicknell was almost completely destroyed by fire early the other morning. The fire started in Brocksmith's warehouse, and the flames soon spread to the business portion of the place. The town was without fire protection and a call for help was sent to Vincennes, but as that city had no fire engine no aid could be sent. Nearly every business house in Bicknell was destroyed, as well as many residences. Following are some of the heaviest losers: Albert Brocksmith, hardware; J. S. Wells & Co., jewelers; M. H. Barrows, drugs; Kixmiller Bros., boots and shoes; J. E. Prather, restaurant; Masonic Hall, Frank Hooper, confectionery, and Samuel Brashers, saloon.

Child Is Saved by a Dog.

The passenger train on the Indianapolis and Vincennes road was nearing Edwardsport when Engineer Dorsey saw a dog on the track acting in a strange manner. The engineer shut off the steam, and as he drew nearer noticed the dog jumping up and down, as if badly frightened. Just beyond the animal the trainman saw an object lying between the tracks, and the train was brought to a standstill within a few feet of it. The object proved to be an infant, less than 2 years old, and as the engineer picked it up the dog barked and jumped upon him as though in an ecstasy of joy. The child was the daughter of a farmer living a few hundred yards from the track.

Big Steel Plant.

Two thousand men will find employment in a new steel plant which will be built at East Chicago by H. C. Frick of the Carnegie company of Pittsburg, and other Eastern capitalists. Three hundred acres of land have been purchased on the shore of Lake Michigan for the site of the new plant. The price is said to have been $500 an acre. A harbor will be built on the waterway at the mouth of the Calumet river, which bounds the site on one side.

Young Desperado Killed.

Louis Harlan, a young man of Sharpsville, was fatally shot by Sheriff McCreary. Harlan had been a fugitive from justice, but returned and sent word to the sheriff to take him if he could. The officer forced the door, and was knocked down by Harlan. Without rising, he shot Harlan twice in the chest and stomach. Either wound would have been fatal.

Two Killed at a Crossing.

While driving Ray Chappel and family of Butler were struck by a Wabash passenger train. Chappel and his son were instantly killed and Mrs. Chappel was terribly mangled. The horse was instantly killed and the buggy demolished. A daughter had the greater portion of her clothing torn from her body, but was uninjured.

Within Our Borders.

A Clayton hen, having lost her chickens, has adopted a couple of kittens.

James Beck, aged 25, stabbed and fatally wounded George Thomas, aged 40, at Lena.

At Elwood, Elizabeth Erban was burned to death by her clothing catching fire from a gas flambeau.

The Heath-Morris Fruit Basket and Box Company at New Albany was burned out. The loss is $30,000.

There are 117 members in the graduating class of the State normal school at Terre Haute, the largest class in the history of that institution.

A new hotel, six stories high, and covering nearly a quarter of a block, and costing about $400,000, will be built at South Bend by James Oliver.

Spontaneous combustion started a fire in C. E. Nichols' grain elevator at Lowell, and before it was checked did $18,000 damage. Five buildings were burned.

The wedding of Jesse Overstreet of Indianapolis, Congressman from the Seventh Indiana district, and Miss Katheryne Kyle Crump, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Crump of Columbus, was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding was one of the largest and most elegant that have ever taken place in the city.

Fred Homeyer, living near Lebanon, shot and instantly killed Seth Nease, his stepson. The killing occurred at the supper table in the presence of the entire family. Homeyer had been drinking and was quarrelsome, when Nease admonished him to keep quiet. Homeyer went into an adjoining room, procured a shotgun and, returning to the door, he took deliberate aim and fired with fatal result. Homeyer claims to have acted in self-defense.

At Indianapolis, Federal Judge Baker fined the Wrought Iron Range Company of St. Louis $700 for disobeying his injunction order. The Economist Furnace Company of Marion and the St. Louis concern were rivals in the business of selling ranges and stoves to farmers in the northern part of the State and the Marion company obtained an injunction prohibiting the other from interfering with its business. This injunction was violated.

The Miami tribe of Indians, who own a reservation of 5,200 acres of land in the northwestern part of Grant County, refuse to pay tax on the land or to give it in to the assessors. The matter was referred to the State officials, and a reply from W. H. Hart, of Indianapolis, deputy auditor of the State and secretary of the State Board of Tax Commissioners, says that poll tax cannot be collected from the Indians, but that their land is taxable and that they must pay tax on personal property.

Mary, the 18-year-old daughter of Geo. Beatly, who lives near Morgantown, committed suicide. Her lover had called on her and they quarreled. A bottle containing arsenic told the story and a coroner's inquest confirmed it.

The big strike at the Pennsylvania plate glass works in Madison County has been settled. Five hundred men were out because of a 15 per cent reduction being posted. President Kahn arrived from Pittsburg and all the workers returned on an agreement for an adjustment of wages equal to the highest paid by other concerns.

The flouring mill at Warrington burned to the ground. It was a brick building, erected in the place of the one destroyed by fire about eighteen months ago, for the late Dr. Hanna. It was owned by the Warrington Milling Company. Loss $9,000; insurance, $5,000.

At Anderson, Coroner Sells returned a most peculiar verdict in a suicide case. He found that Cora Drake poisoned herself because her vanity was not appeased. It seems that she pined for better clothes and more luxuries and was not content with what she could afford. The distressful condition became so acute in her case that at last she was driven to take her own life.

BRILLIANT SPANISH OFFICER.

Captain Don Luis Cadarso, of the Reina Cristina, Killed at Manila.

Capt. Don Luis Cadarso, who commanded the cruiser Reina Cristina and was killed at Manila, was one of the most brilliant officers in the Spanish navy. The following description of his personality is given by the London Graphic:

In appearance he resembled rather an Englishman than a Spaniard. His hair was fair, and his eyes blue and piercing, which gave one the impression of restless energy. His activity was proverbial. He had been in command of the Reina Cristina for the past three years, and his ship was a model of order and of efficiency, his officers and crew practicing frequently. Still, he found time for reading a great deal and for writing much. His signature was well known in papers and reviews. He wrote chiefly on naval and colonial matters. A few years ago, when governor of the Caroline islands, he wrote to the Madrid paper, El Imparcial, some letters which greatly displeased the Minister of Marine, and which caused his recall. Capt. Cadarso's worth was, however, so well appreciated that he was soon appointed to another post. During the Philippine rising, a little more than a year ago, Capt. Cadarso was constantly engaged in supporting from the sea the operations of the Spanish army on land. The work was hard, yet every evening he would sit and write two columns descriptive of the doings of the squadron during the day for the editor of the leading Manila paper, El Commercio, who was his friend. Capt. Cadarso, who was about 50 years old, leaves a large family.

CAPT. DON LUIS CARDARSO.

SHOT BY A NEPHEW.

Prince Fuad Wounded in an Affray Resulting from a Family Quarrel.

Prince Ahmed Fuad, who was shot by his nephew, Prince Safeddin, in Cairo recently, is the youngest son of the Khedive Ismail and uncle of the present Khedive. A sister of Prince Safeddin is the wife of Prince Fuad. Prince Fuad was at the Khedivial Club when Prince Safeddin came in with a revolver in his hand. Before he could be seized by the servants, he managed to fire three shots at Prince Fuad, who fell badly wounded. The affray was the outcome of a family quarrel.

PRINCE AHMED FUAD.

Primitive House Lighting.

The first and most natural way of lighting the houses of the colonists was found in the fat pitch-pine, which, says the Chautauquan, was plentiful everywhere; but as soon as domestic animals increased candles were made, and the manufacture of the winter supply became the special autumnal duty of the thrifty housewife. Great kettles were hung over the kitchen fire and filled with hot water and melted tallow. At the cooler end of the kitchen two long poles were placed from chair back to chair back. Across these poles, like the rounds of a ladder, were placed shorter sticks, called candle rods. To each candle rod were tied about a dozen straight candle wicks. The wicks were dipped again and again, in regular order, in the melted tallow, the succession of dippings giving each candle time to cool. Each grew slowly in size till all were finished. Deer suet was used as well as beef tallow and mutton tallow. Wax candles were made by pressing bits of half-melted wax around a wick.

Evaporation of Bananas.

The American consul at Nicaragua reports that experiments are being made there to develop an industry of evaporating bananas, and that a trial shipment has been made to this country. If successfully established, this industry will be of the utmost importance to many Central American states. The men engaged in the experiment, according to consular reports, have no practical knowledge of the business of drying the fruit, but if it was taken up by men experienced in the manufacture of machinery and appliances adapted to the evaporation of fruits a modification to suit this case could easily be devised, and there would be an immense demand for such machines immediately. At present there are millions of bananas yearly thrown away or allowed to rot on the ground because they are too small or too ripe for shipment to the United States.

English Stamps.

Postage stamps may be reproduced once more in England in stamp albums and catalogues by a recent order of the British Board of Internal Revenue. They must be printed in black and not be like enough to the originals to cause deception.

BATTLESHIP AND TORPEDO BOAT.

Smooth and lean—they have stripped her clean
Down to her leering guns.
A-weather and lee she smashes the sea
With her weight of ten thousand tons,
From bow to stern her watches turn
The beams of her searching suns.

A-wash, half-drowned, we speed around
To beat the veering light,
For she must see ere her fangs are free
That she may begin to bite,
And we laugh where we lie, at the blundering eye
That misses us in the night.

They have freighted her with five hundred men;
She is fierce with rifled guns;
But she cannot mark as she rolls in the dark,
The death that comes and runs.
We flit as a mist wreath on the sea,
And ere her topmen leap
We have struck and fled and the riven dead
Are sucked in the whirling deep.

With the Price of Blood.

A Mexican Woman's Dark Deed.

Sola Vejar, simple child of a guileless race, believed in her very soul that wealth would outweigh in the heart of Antonio Mascavel the beauty of Refugio Garfias, great and renowned though that might be. Therefore, and for this only, did she sigh for riches and hate poverty with which Providence had seen fit to curse her. For Sola was not beautiful, save for the beauty that some find in a firm chin and a powerful mouth, a wide forehead and deep eyes overset with mighty brows—which may have their charm for the student of his kind, but not for a lover, and, least of all, for a Mexican lover.

Antonio Mascavel preferred the type of Refugio—small-featured, red-lipped, soft-eyed, graceful, and lovely as a dark venus. And his opinion was also that of the surrounding country, of the city of Los Angeles, and the mission of San Gabriel. The fame of the daughter of Garfias had spread even among the Americans, and when strangers asked to be shown a beautiful Mexican, they were taken to the home of Garfias, upon the outskirts of Sonora town. So it may be supposed that Refugio had lovers. They came from far and near, and from every rank of California life. There was an American whose fortune was vast and as generously spent as fortunes were in the early fifties; there was an Englishman with a determination to have her at any cost, even at that of a few lives—a tendency of character which accounted for his presence in the States and for his expatriation; there were innumerable Mexicans, ranchers, shop-keepers, desperadoes, and gamblers. All followed tamely and suppliantly in Refugio's train.

But she loved only Mascavel. She admitted it at last to Senor Garfias, when that wiry little creature demanded that she make a choice. The senor was aghast. The possibility of it had not occurred to him.

"Antonio Mascavel!" he said. "But you do not know him."

Refugio nodded her little head. "Yes, she said.

Of this Senor Garfias became gradually aware after he had protested for hours and days, and after finding that despite his prohibitions, despite close supervision, his fair daughter and Mascavel were in constant communication.

Then he hunted up Antonio himself, and he pleaded with him, courteously and respectfully, for Mascavel was a big man and a desperate one. But he, too, answered that he loved and when all was said and done, it had gone no farther than this, that they both loved, and that wisdom might stand aside.

Garfias went with his baffled hopes to Senor Vejar—the brother of Sola. The house of Vejar—a two-roomed adobe which had never been whitewashed—stood several hundred yards further north along the road than that of Garfias. It was the last one before the open country, and had no neighbors.

Senor Vejar was much younger than Garfias. He had the same mighty brow and powerful mouth that made his sister hideous to a race that loves all things gentle and gracious. He was one of those who pined for Refugio, but her father did not know this. So he told him the whole story of his twarted will and plans, and implored advice as he made a cigarette.

"If it were not for the cursed laws of the Gringoes; if things were as they were in my youth, I could force my own daughter to marry the man I pleased," he said.

Vejar shook his head. "You cannot do that," he answered.

"What, then, shall I do?" Garfias was moved to the point of tears. They hung on his long black lashes and dropped on his old blue overalls.

The situation was too complicated to be set straight in a moment. It was not simplified by Vejar's having his own suit and chances to consider. "I cannot advise you at once," he said; "I will think and will help you, if I can, in the morning." He took counsel with his sister when Garfias had ridden away.

"Oh!" snarled Sola, "the love of Antonio! A thousand dollars would bury it so deep that it would never rise again."

"Yet," said her brother, not understanding women, "you would be glad to have it."

The deep eyes shone. She shrugged her shoulders. "Yes, I would be glad to have it. And I could have it for a thousand dollars—perhaps less."

"At that cost you must be content to go without it. What advice shall I give to Don Garfias?"

"How should I know? Let him see to his own troubles, and be glad that your sister is not so beautiful that you have no peace because of her."

It was long after dark when a horse stopped at Vejar's adobe. Vejar had been asleep. He jumped up and went to the door. He had his finger on the trigger of his revolver. A man stood under the broken-down ramada. Before he spoke, the Mexican had seen by the moonlight that he was a Gringo. They talked together in low tones until Sola joined them, rubbing her eyes and moving noiselessly with her bare feet across the dirt floor.

"This man," said her brother, "is an American. He says he has ridden all day to get into Los Angeles before night, but his horse went lame. It is so bad now that he can go no further, and he wishes to stay here until morning."

"Let him stay," said Sola, not too graciously. "He can have my bed. I cannot sleep."

Vejar grunted in much contempt. "Mascavel does not lie awake for you," he said.

Sola made no answer. She accepted the fact. She put the American upon the blanket covered willow boughs that she called her bed. Her brother tied the horse beside his own in the roofless adobe workhouse, and fed it some day. He did nothing for its lame foot. The suffering of a dumb animal is a matter of pure indifference to a Mexican, when it is not cause for laughter.

The American was a mere youth. Sola saw that when the patch of moonlight finally worked around to where she sat upon the floor, leaning against the wall, and went near to see if he were breathing. It seemed that he slept very lightly, for he started up, with his left hand upon his belt and his right hand upon his revolver.

"You were so still I thought you might be dead," said Sola, in her deep, placid voice, full of the Indian sweetness of sound. He took his hand from the weapon and lay back shamefacedly. It was only a woman, a thick-set, lazy, good-hearted Mexican. He had not been able to see her face, and he did not know that the comfortless pallet was her bed. He turned on it and fell asleep again. But Sola sat thinking. Long after her brother was dreaming in the next room she crouched, looking into the darkness, with her great, wide eyes—seeing nothing. And in her brain ran the clink of the coins as the young Gringo had put his hand to his belt. There was a purpose in her unflinching mind. That she debated it therein was due only to her uncertainty as to how many coins had clinked, as to whether there were enough to buy Antonio Mascavel. Five hundred dollars would do it—for a time. After that he might kill her; or he might let her live and go away with Refugio—which would be worse. He was a gambler through and through, and none the less so because of being luckless. A few hundred dollars in actual cash would present to him unlimited possibilities of the wealth that it might win. And there is always the poor chance, in a woman's mind, that the man may learn to love as she loves. He might forget Refugio; or she might marry some one else.

She went slipping across the earthen floor and groped in a corner behind a string of chiles. Her hand came out from the shadow holding a knife that gleamed as she moved back through the strip of moonlight and toward the willow-bough pallet where the incautious youth lay, sleeping heavily now.

Fifteen minutes later she went into the room where her brother lay upon a bed like her own. She roused him with her bare foot. He turned with a sleepy grunt.

"Get up and come here," she said. She was not a capricious creature. It was her way to do little, but that in dogged earnest. So Vejar sprang up and went with her. She stopped beside the bed and pointed down to the body.

"I have killed him," she said.

Vejar made no answer. He did not understand.

"I have killed him," she repeated. "You take him away and bury him."

It flashed upon Vejar that what his sister said was true. He was frightened. He dropped down beside the body and dragged it into the streak of moonlight.

"Take care," Sola warned him; "if there is blood on the floor it can be seen. I can burn the blanket that is on the bed; and no one saw him come."

Vejar let the body fall, and stood up facing her. She could see the dreadful light in his eyes, but she did not care.

"You can turn his horse loose and it will never be known," she said indifferently. "He had money. There is eight hundred dollars. I have counted it. Antonio will marry me for that."

Vejar struck her down with a blow on the breast. She sat upon the floor as quietly as if she were basking in the sun, dreaming the eternal Mexican dreams.

"If you hit me again I shall say that you did it. They would believe me."

Vejar stood thinking, with the body and the woman at his feet. He knew that she was right. The Gringoes would believe a woman. It was the custom of the fools. She held his life in her hard, broad hands, and she would give it for the sake of the soft-eyed gambler as calmly, as relentlessly as she had given that of the boy between them.

He carried the body out and buried it before dawn, far from the adobe, and so skillfully that there were no traces of the spot. Then he turned the lame horse loose, and it wandered into the town.

For the sake of the forty gold pieces that were Sola Vejar's dowry that she had come by, he did not ask how—nor care—that conjured up visions of limitless wealth to be won, Antonio Mascavel consented to take her and let the ungilded beauty of Refugio Garfias go.

Many Americans disappeared in those days, and were never accounted for. It was so with the one who had started from the San Fernando district to Los Angeles, foolishly carrying a large amount of gold in his belt—some said more than a thousand dollars. The sheriff and a posse searched and did not find him; that was all.

Antonio lived with Sola for a year, and she was happy—though no fault of his. His luck turned, and he won, with her nest egg, the fortune he had dreamed of. Having done so, he went across the border.

For a long time Sola mourned, sullenly and deeply; then—Vejar having been killed at a round-up by an enraged steer—she took up her abode with Refugio, and became a devoted and patient nurse to her children.

For Refugio had married the rich American, and had long since forgiven the defection of Mascavel and the woman who had caused it.—Gwendolen Overton, in the Argonaut.

LIBERATORS OF SPANISH AMERICA.

A NEW name, that of Gomez, may be added to the list of brave Spanish-Americans who have liberated their country from the Spanish yoke. His name will be well worthy of a place beside those of Bolivar, O'Higgins, Sucre, Hidalgo and Toussaint, who preceded him by nearly a century in the resistance of Spanish oppression and the freeing of Americans from the burdensome yoke. It is nearly ninety years since the beginning of the series of revolutions that, when Cuba and Porto Rico are freed, will have resulted in the abolition of Spanish rule in the western hemisphere. The brave Argentinians under San Martin began the conflict in 1809, and the Mexicans followed a few months later. Both were unsuccessful at the beginning, but suddenly all South America broke out in one blaze of revolution that was not to be finally extinguished until Spain had been driven from the continent.

The natives welcomed the chance to secure their freedom. When once the torch of liberty had been lighted so great a fire was kindled that it could not be extinguished. These revolutions were popular uprisings. The rich had no sympathy with them. The land-owning and governing class, the army and navy, the few who profited by the sufferings of the many, had no sympathy with the uprisings. The insurgents were an undisciplined rabble, whose volunteer leaders were forced to create an army from poor material and with no arms or equipments. At first they were organized in scattered bands that attacked the fortifications of the Spanish army. Little by little they were welded into a compact army by the genius of their leaders.

These leaders revealed great ability, and to the people of South America their names are as dear as is that of Washington to us of North America. Some of them distinguished themselves so greatly as to make their fame world-wide. Such was O'Higgins in Chili, Bolivar in Venezuela and Central America, Sucre in Bolivia and Peru, Hidalgo in Mexico and San Martin in Argentina. They sacrificed much for the cause. Several were men of large private fortunes who gave all that they possessed as a sacrifice on the altar of liberty. Born rich, O'Higgins, Bolivar and Sucre died poor. They risked their lives as well as their money, and thousands of other men, now forgotten, died that their country might be free. Their republics were just as ungrateful as all republics are traditionally. Hidalgo was killed by the Spanish. The other great men had a worse fate, being traduced and vilified by their compatriots who, at first profusely grateful, afterward yielded to the jealousy of rival leaders. It was not until after their death that their compatriots appreciated their greatness. Probably the same fate is in store for Gomez.

INSECT FOES IN CUBA.

They Are Numerous and Many of Them Are Dangerous.

Soldiers in Cuba will have many pests to contend against. The mosquito is more frequent in Cuba than in New Jersey at the height of the season. It is also a more venomous insect. The nearer you go to the equator the more potent the mosquito becomes. The Cuban mosquito is to the New Jersey insect as a first-class fighting bull to a yearling calf. Those who have camped out in Texas will have a modified idea of what to expect in the Cuban mosquito.

The worst pest of all is the Cuban fly. This is a black insect, smaller than the common house fly and resembling the black fly of northern woods. It comes in myriads, buzzes about your eyes and bites savagely. In the neighborhood of woods it is present in such terrible swarms that it is impossible to sleep without some preparation smeared on hands and face. There is also the jejene, or Cuban flea, which is extremely unpleasant and even dangerous, because it seeks to enter the eyes during sleep. Horses and cattle suffer terribly from the attacks of the jejene on their eyelids.

Cuba also harbors the chigoe, or jiggar flea. The female of this insect has a habit of burrowing into human flesh and there laying an enormous mass of eggs. The wounds made by this insect, if neglected, will produce a dangerous ulceration. As they attack by preference the big toe, they are apt to cause lameness. The scorpion is another Cuban product. This reptile has twelve feet and is from five to six inches long. It terminates in a long tail, which contains the sting. This causes a severe wound, possibly a fatal one to a man in ill-health. He who entertains a scorpion unawares will know what it is to have a thankless child. The centipede also plies his numerous nimble feet on Cuban soil. When he walks across your flesh you feel as if many red-hot needles had been thrust into you and he leaves a trail of venom behind. There is a sufficiency of snakes in Cuba—rattlers, moccasins and others. The commonest snake is called the maja, is about ten feet long and venomous, but not ferocious.

The Head Claquer.

Jacob Schontag, for forty years head of the claque at the Vienna Opera House, is dead. He knew all the operas of the repertory by heart, knew the strong and weak points of all the artists, and held a rehearsal of his subordinates in the afternoon before the production of an opera, when he drilled them on the parts of a production where their work was to be put in.

WOMEN'S AID IN THE WAR.

Relief Association Furnishing Money for Various Purposes.

It only costs 25 cents to become a member of the Woman's National War Relief Association. For the amount named any woman may secure the privilege of signing this pledge:

"I, the undersigned, hereby declare my allegiance to the United States of America and my desire to contribute to the general welfare, health and comfort of the men engaged in the military and naval service of the republic in the present war."

The executive committee of the association includes a number of society leaders in New York, including Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Miss Helen Gould and Mrs. Daniel Lamont. Originally the plan was to outfit and man a hospital ship with nurses. On application to army and naval officials it was discovered that such a project was impracticable. Secretary Long, Surgeon General Sternberg of the army and Surgeon General Van Ruypen of the navy all advised that the relief association collect funds only, which the authorities would disburse for supplies and nurses as need demanded. General Wesley Merritt lent his influence to further the organization and the association promptly devoted itself to the collection of money. From time to time the surgeon generals will send a list of the objects for which the association's contributions are expended, so that the women may keep in actual touch with every dollar that goes to the relief of the wounded as well as if themselves applying it. Many auxiliaries are already formed.

A DARING ESCAPE.

Convict Rides to Freedom on the Belt of a Fly Wheel.

The most daring and remarkable prison escape on record was that of Frank Steadman from San Quentin, Cal. Steadman was a burglar by profession and a machinist by inclination. While in San Quentin prison he was put to work, with other convicts, in the engine-room. It was here that an idea came into his brain that for absolute daring and fearlessness was typical of the man.

STEADMAN'S DARING ESCAPE.

He had noticed that every evening at the time the men working in the engine room were lined up to be marched away the machinery was stopped at exactly the same moment. He had observed as well that a window leading to an adjacent roof was not far from the top of the big driving belt of the engine. From that roof it was possible to reach the outer wall of the prison. Beyond the wall was freedom. Apparently the window was beyond all possibility of being reached. No ladder was to be obtained. Had such a thing been even standing in place against the wall, to break from the line and scale it with catlike dexterity, although the work of but a few seconds, he well knew would be futile, possibly fatal. Bullets travel faster than legs, and the guards were not bad shots. But desperate deeds demand desperate means. Some minds may work with an ingenuity born of despair, but Steadman's was of a different caliber. His plans were the outgrowth of steadfast optimism. He never ceased to scheme, as he never ceased to hope for liberty.

One day there came to him, as if by inspiration, the thought that the big belt might be the means of carrying him to his goal. He found that it was impossible to count the revolutions of the driving wheel, but there were lacings in the broad belt, which he was able to distinguish as a sort of blur as it passed a given point. For days and days he counted, and in his cell at night he spent his time in calculations.

One evening when the line had been formed as usual at the close of the day's work, and as the big wheel began to lose its momentum, suddenly a convict sprang from the line, leaped to the belt, with outstretched arms grappling both edges of the broad leather. He had calculated well the strength that would be required, for the terrific wrench did not loosen his grasp. Outward and upward he swung until he reached the topmost point of the circumference. The nicety of his calculation had reaped its reward. The belt stopped. He leaped to his feet, sprang through the window, and was gone before convicts or guards had recovered from their astonishment. He caught up a guard's coat and hat, dropped from the wall, and got away in the dusk of the evening. His desperate escape did not profit him. He was recaptured and sent back to San Quentin.

After a man has dropped a few thousand dollars in stocks it is useless to tell him there is no money in them.

PURCHASING ARMY OFFICES.

The System that Prevailed in Great Britain Up to 1871.

Last among the survivals in conflict with the spirit of the age may be noted promotion by purchase in the army—which retarded indefinitely the advancement of efficient officers and conspired to drop all the honors of the service into the laps of wealthy individuals of no special talent, who could afford to pay for them, which only came to an end in 1871. Under the system merit and fitness went for nothing, and so difficult was it for a man without money to get on in the British army that a good officer without the wherewithal to purchase a company might remain a lieutenant for twenty years, to be soured in all probability by seeing brother officers of less standing raised above him by the power of money again and again, and even then only obtain his captaincy by some unlooked-for augmentation in the establishment. Strangely enough, in the navy brains and hard work were given scope to carve out advancement at the same time that in the sister service promotion had to be bought, and that at a price frequently double the official value of the post.

While traffic in commissions was largely affected by the district in which the particular regiment was likely to be quartered for some years ensuing, the price was almost invariably 60 per cent. or more above the nominal value of commissions as given in the Army List, which tariff in 1804 gave the price of commission as lieutenant colonel in the Life Guards or Horse Guards at £7,250, in the Foot Guards at £4,800, and in cavalry and infantry of the line £4,500; while a major in the two former corps had to fork out £5,350 for his commission, in comparison with £3,200 exacted for the same position in the line regiments. Captaincies cost £3,500 in the Life Guards and Horse Guards, £2,050 in the Foot Guards, and £1,800 in the cavalry and infantry of the line, and lieutenancies might be purchased for £1,785 in the Life Guards, £1,600 in the Horse Guards, £1,200 in the Foot Guards, and the trifle of £700 in the less considered cavalry and infantry of the line.—Gentleman's Magazine.

THEY GATHER PEAT.

Irish Peasants Have an Everlasting Supply of Good Fuel.

By the law of compensation, Ireland, which has not a single ton of coal in her soil, has the finest peat-beds in the British islands. One hardly knows what would have been the fate of the Irish peasants, thrifty and idle alike, were it not for the presence of the everlasting supply of fuel, lying on the surface of the ground and waiting only to be dug, dried and carted or carried to the poor man's fire. It is hard to understand why it should be only the poor man's fire; for the fragrant, cleanly fuel might be welcome on the hearth of the rich. Recently a company advertised high-class peat for sale in London, to be burnt in drawing rooms and smoking rooms; and the well-known scent was almost for the first time recognized in the "gilded halls" of Belgravia, bringing back memories of Highland cottages and lodges by Irish salmon rivers. The greatest contributor of all plants to the formation of peat is sphagnum moss. But all kinds of bog plants go to make up the ordinary Irish peat-beds.

Cutting peat shows work going on in one of the reservoirs of fuel. The depth of peat is eight feet and the cutters have as yet merely shaved the top. This is a nice, dry bed, some alteration in the level having drained off the soakage water elsewhere. The men do the cutting and the girls and women wheel the peats to a distance, where they are set up in pairs like an A tent to dry.

CUTTING PEAT.

Feeding Oatmeal to Chickens.

Theoretically, and judging by analysis, oats and oatmeal ought to be the best feed for hens or their chickens. But whole oats have too much chaff to be profitably fed to hens. Their crop is limited in size, and the chaff of the oat, besides being itself innutritious, is soft and interferes with crushing the grain. The same objections apply to feeding oatmeal, either dry or wet, to young chicks. Even if fed without the chaff, the oatmeal is liable to compact in the chick's gizzard. We believe that meal for chicks should always be cooked, and the harder the cakes made from it the better. Crush these cakes into small bits and fowl will eat them greedily.

THE MILITARY GIRL.

A New Type Brought About by Our War with Spain.

With a bound the military girl has sprang into fashion. One of her ways is the temporary abolition of the kiss—so far as other girls are concerned. Meeting her dearest friend, she salutes in a true army way. She does not grab her or remark, "You dear thing!" The arms of both girls are raised promptly to their hats, and then shoved out with a quick movement. Then they are dropped to their sides and stay there.

The walk of the military girl is marked by a firm step forward, a rather longer step than usual, and the shoulders are held well back, the head steadily up, with the eyes looking straight forward, and the chest is thrown well out. This new type of girl when she turns swings around cleanly on her heels, for all the world like a genuine army man.

THE MILITARY GIRL.

The new military conversation, or rather the host of military phrases, heard these days is exceedingly interesting. A girl returns from some shopping expedition. Before the war was started she would have said very simply: "I'll go up and tell mother about it." Now her phrase is, "I'll go and give the countersign to mother." Or, telling a sister to say such and such to her father, she will say, "Report to headquarters."

"Advance into the other room," is the proper way to put it now, and, instead of speaking of going up or down stairs you should say, if you would be really in form nowadays, "I'm going aloft," or "I'm going below."

Betaking one's self to one's downy couch is expressed by the words, "I'm going to turn in," and on the street, when two, or three or four girls are walking together, there are often to be heard these words of command, "Right about face!" and "Forward, march!"

MARS AND CUPID.

Gen. Wesley Merritt Has Won the Heart of a Handsome Chicago Girl.

Miss Laura Williams, of Chicago, whose betrothal to Gen. Wesley Merritt was announced recently, and whose marriage will take place on the General's return from the Philippines, is a handsome and attractive young woman of 20. Her hair and complexion are very light, and she is tall and slender. She is fond of horseback riding, bicycling, golf, and outdoor sports, and is very wealthy. Miss Williams is a granddaughter of the late John D. Caton, who left an immense fortune and made her one of his principal heirs. Her father, Norman Williams, founded the Chicago Telephone Company and the Eastern Electric Company. He drew up the papers forming the Pullman Palace Car Company, and was a delegate to the Paris Electrical Exposition in 1882. Despite the disparity in the ages of Gen. Merritt and his betrothed, he being over 60, it is a case of genuine love on both sides.

A Verbal Struggle.

Fifty long names have been invented and used for the apparatus by which photographs from a succession of pictures are thrown on a screen and made to appear as moving figures. "Biograph" and "motograph" are the simplest. "Panoramograph" and "chronophotographoscope" are among the longest. "Cinematograph" and "kinetoscope" are among the most common in use. "Phantoscope" and "vitagraph" are the most poetical sounding. "Theatograph" and "motorscope" are not bad. What "lofteroscope" and "corminograph" are derived from no one but the inventors know. Here is a fine chance for the struggle for existence among fifty words. May the best word win and the fittest survive.—Hartford Courant.

TRAIN ROBBED.

Saturday night a Lake Shore freight was found to be carrying about twenty tramps. They seized the brakeman who was walking back on the train and with revolvers compelled him and the conductor to get into the caboose. There the two men got revolvers and went back to the tramps, and finally drove them off the now moving train. They had frightened and robbed two boys who were stealing a ride.

A DESERTER

Henry Long of Millersburg, it appears deserted from Company C. of the 157th at Tampa and for some days was not heard from. It now appears he has reached home. He says he left the army because of poor food and cruel treatment. As the rest of the boys do not seem to complain, it must be that Henry was reared in too much luxury. When the provost officers get after him he may sigh in vain for the luxuries of the camp life he now runs away from.

Township Commencements

Supt. Coe is going to be a very busy man for a while now, driving to different parts of the county to attend commencement exercises of the various townships. He has three this week. The first is for Troy township and is held at the Center Chapel, Wednesday evening, June 15. The next is a joint meeting for Stafford and Newville, and is to held bed in the Christian church at Newville on Thursday evening. The joint commencement of Jackson and Concord will be held at the Lutheran church in Spencerville, on Saturday evening, June 18.

DEATH OF MRS. SHADE.

Uncle Henry Shull was in town Saturday and reported the death of Mrs. Shade, mother of Joseph A. Shade now at the Samoan Islands in the Pacific and of Henry Shade of Richland. When she died she was at Daniel Shull's at Friday Harbor on Puget Sound. She had wanted to come back and die in Indiana, but failed so fast, she could not undertake the journey. The funeral was held here, however, at the Sixteen school house in Richland on Sunday, June 12, the sermon being by Elder James Barton at 10 a. m.

A Battle With Snakes.

John Cupp on the old Cool farm three miles south of Auburn had an experience Monday morning that was anything but pleasant. While plowing on a side hill near a marsh he turned out a dun of eleven blue racers that measured from from three feet to six feet four inches in length. As all showed fight John had a lively time of it. There was no flag of truce to it, but fight to a finish, which lasted about a a minute. John proved to be master of the occasion, as was evident a few mintues after, he having killed all of them. John does not think you have to go to Cuba for adventures as we have them at home.

A Narrow Escape.

(The Waterloo Press)

Mrs. Jacob Bachtel and little boy with Eli Walker's little girl, met with an accident on Decoration day, that only a miracle could account for their lives being saved. Mr. W's girl was driving north from the Waterloo cemetery to take Mrs. B home, and when along by Mr. Henry Frick,s residence, the two horse team owned by Joel Hartman near Ashley, came dashing up behind the carriage without a driver, and with no warning crashed into the Walker carriage, totally destroying it and throwing the three occupants on the ground, with one of Hartman's horses that had fallen over the broken carriage. It was an exciting moment and to find none seriously injured, beyond a few bruises, is a marvel. The loss to the buggy is about forty-five dollars. It is very fortunate that no one was killed.

DISHONEST PRACTICES.

The Waterloo Press had a chance last week to do a very proper thing but failed to do it. It should have given the COURIER credit for its long account of the Harry Martin trial. People who take both papers should compare them. The article is ours, word for word, but put in as gotten up by the Press. People should know that the COURIER is the only paper in DeKalb county that reports the important court news in full. The Press took only a part of our article but what it did take was our property, beginning after the word "disagreed," in its 9th line.

Since writing the above we have looked over the Butler Herald. In that we find our account of the Bay VanAuken trial, word for word, as we had it in our weekly of June 2. There is not a word to show that it is taken entire from the COURIER. How easy it would be for these papers to say, "From the Auburn COURIER."

MRS. FISHER MARRIED

When Mrs. Celia M. Fisher started on her California trip a couple of weeks ago, only her most intimate friends could surmise the nature of her trip to the coast. None knew to a certainty. Mrs. R. Shull one of her nearest friends, has just received a copy of the Los Angeles Times, in which is a telegram from Phoenix, Arizona, announcing her arrival there June 5 and her wedding June 6. On reaching that place, she was met by her future husband, Dr. Wm. Dodge of Los Angeles, and next day, they were married by Rev. Preston McKinney of the First Presbyterian church at that place. The same evening, they started on their journey to Los Angeles, which city is to be their home. OBITUARY.

Scott Sherman Shoemaker was born May 24th 1862, died June 10th 1898, aged 36 years and 16 days.

He was born at the old Shoemaker homestead in Smithfield township and has lived there all his life. His parents Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Shoemaker are industrious and economical people; and reared their children to habits of frugality and hard labor. Hence Scott ever found his delight in active farming pursuits.

He was married to Miss Lizzie B. Brand Dec. 25th, 1893. They had born to them two daughters, Rhena May, aged four years and Maud Aileen aged 18 months. Their marriage relations were pleasant and hopeful until the dread disease which came Nov. 14, 1897, blighted their hopes and filled the long thirty-one weeks with anguish and despair. His ailment began with some intestinal estoppage which nearly took his life at the outset. This symptom however was overcome by persistent effort but it was found that permanent damage had resulted. Then began the long struggle in which no pains or expense was spared, no lagging of effort by wife, father, mother, sister or brother, but all efforts were futile.

Several weeks since they brought him to the Waterloo residence where death at last came to end the hopeless struggle

Cottage obseques were largely attended at town residence on last Sabbath, conducted by Rev. W. O. Butler. The discourse was delivered by Mrs. Walton of Jackson, Mich. and the remains were laid to rest in the Waterloo cemetery.

QUEER ACCIDENT

(Columbia City Post)

Friday afternoon Jonas Mettler, a heel factory employe, was engaged in running the leather splitting machine. He was running a large piece through, when he noticed it was about to catch in the fly wheel, and reached over to prevent it. Just then it caught and striking his hand threw it into a cog wheel, crushing the ring finger of his left hand to the first joint. It was not necessary to amputate the injured finger, but the end of the bone was badly shattered.

Accident Near Busco

(Commercial.)

William Ewing, who lives near Churubusco, was seriously injured Saturday. While young Ewing was climbing a tree trying to reach a crow's nest he lost his balance and fell to the ground, fracturing his skull and otherwise injured himself. The young man was alone when the accident occurred, but was soon after discovered by some neighbors in a delirious state. Dr. Squires was called and reports that the injured man will recover.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

Monday's Daily.

It turns out that it was last Friday when the first considerable body of troops were landed in Cuba. In all, about 700 men of the regular Marines were landed at a harbor east of Santiago. There was a small fort but this was silenced by our gunboats. Then the marines landed and ran up our flag over the fort, and there it is yet. This will probably be of one of the places at which a land force will be put ashore to operate against Santiago.

There is a report that Manila has surrendered to Dewey without waiting to be asked, as the Spaniards feared the native insurgents would capture the town.

The Charleston, which sailed a week or two ago, for the Phillipines, may go by way of the Laurone Islands and capture them them, as they belong to Spain.

It is said that all cables leading out from parts of Cuba yet in Spanish hands, have been cut. It certainly looks that way, as we hear no more news direct from Havana.

It appears that when the 157th went from Chickamauga to Tampa, the railroad had contracted to take them to Tampa only, whereas they were to go into camp at Port Tampa City, nine miles further on. It was a careless way to make a contract, and though the trains finally went on to Port Tampa City, it cost Uncle Sam, about $1000 extra.

It appears the main division of our army of invasion sailed yesterday Sunday, for Cuba, under a strong guard of cruisers. One account says the troops have been on board the ships and lying in Port Tampa harbor, since the date of the reported starting about a week ago.

The marines that took and held Guantanamo, the harbor east of Santiago ond raised the American flag, have had hard fighting to maintain that position. They lost several men, and suppose they killed a number of the Spaniards.

It is believed that troops have been on the sea several days, and are now landed on Cuba, but that government has been denying this so that news would not get to the Spaniards.

There were two fights at Guantanamo. The first night we had it, the marines were attacked. That was Friday night or rather Saturday morning. A Spanish force was discovered creeping on them in the darkness. But our men fired on them and they dispersed. A stronger force made an attack on us Saturday afternoon at about 5 and there was a scattering fight all night, ceasing at 6 Sunday morning, when the Spaniards retreated carrying their dead and wounded, if they had any. We had four men killed and one wounded.

Tuesday's Daily.

A new fleet of warships is now talked of to cross the ocean and threaten the shores of Spain. The only good this can do is to make the Spaniards see the necessity of peace.

At last government is willing to say that our troops have sailed from Tampa. They go first to Key West and then along the north shore of Cuba, around the east end and then turning south and west go to Santiago, or to Guantanamo, the harbor east of there that we now occupy. It is believed our men will be landed about Thursday.

A second expedition it is believed will leave Port Tampa in a few days and land at Porto Rico.

It was a grand spectacle when our troops left Tampa. There were a dozen or so big men of war and over thirty transport ships large and small carrying the 15,000 or so men, the horses, cannon, camp equipage, supplies, etc. etc. Such a spectacle has not been seen since the Spanish Armada in Queen Elizabeth's time, probably.

Spain is said to be willing to accept peace on almost any terms.

Recruiting has started up again all over the country. Indiana's quota will soon be raised and many more enlisted than can be used.

One of our cruisers, San Francisco, ran ashore in a fog not far from Boston early Monday morning. The bottom was mostly sand, and by throwing out a part of her coal and ballast she was got afloat with but little damage.

It is believed that we shall land at least 15,000 men and a great deal of artillery of various sizes at Guantanamo and that the Spaniards will mass their troops it that neighborhood and the decisive battle of the war be fought there.

The 157th was first reported at sea, then as being on ships and remaining in harbor, then as having gone ashore and next as having landed from the ships and returned to camp. But letters home to friends of Co. K in Auburn prove they are still at Tampa, and they don't know when they will get away.

It is said that a Spanish deserter has brought us valuable maps of the fortifications and harbors with location of torpedoes and mines.

Wednesday's Daily.

The soldiers at Camp Alger near Washington have been vaccinated for small pox, and most of them are too lame to use their arm at drill.

It now appears that the entire Spanish fleet is cooped up in Santiago, and not a part only, as was at first believed. A lieutenant of the navy, went ashore in disguise and went around the bay, 70 miles in all, and saw all that was within it.

New recruits are beginning to arrive at Chickamauga Park, from different states.

More complete accounts are reaching us, of the third fight at Guantanamo, The first, was the slight skirmish in the darkness of Saturday morning. Then came the irregular fight of Saturday evening till Sunday morning. This was also in the dark, and between a force of Spanish guerillas and regulars, and our own Marines Sunday night, lasting more or less through the night. The marines, by this time were assisted by the ships. The search lights from the ships helped as much as the shells they fired into the bushes.

A SMALL WRECK.

(Kendallville Sun.)

A freight wreck occured on the Lake Shore railroad at the Sherman crossing, east of the city, Sunday morning, demolishing eight empty freight cars and blockading traffic several hours. The train was east bound and running at a speed twelve miles an hour. Near the middle of the train an air hose bursted, setting the brakes on a large dongola flat car, causing the cars in rear to pile up in all imaginable shapes. None of the train crew were injured, but the conductor was compelled to run and jump to save his life. The car he was standing on was telescoped and piled on top of two other cars. The wreck train from Elkhart was soon upon the ground and the tracks were cleared, shortly after twelve o'clock.

OBITUARY

Hezekiah K. Dawson, was born in New York state, Wheaton county, Jan. 11, 1849, died June 6, 1898, age 49 yrs. 4 mo. and 25 days. His parents emigrated to Plymouth, Ohio, thence to Indiana, 37 years ago. He was first married to Miss Nancy Lehner, she having departed this life soon afterward. He was married to Jessie Dawson April 22, 1884. He leaves to mourn their loss which is his gain, an invalid widow, two sons, three sisters, five brothers and many friends.

Dearest Father thou hast left us,
And thy loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

There is no death! An angel form,
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away,
And then we call them "dead".

And over near us though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe,
Is life—there is no dead.

Sigsbee Sees Himself.

That heroes, like Capt. Sigsbee who was blown up with the Maine, can enjoy a joke, is well known. He is now in command of the St. Paul, says the New York Sun, but this week got time to go up to the Eden musee just to have a look at himself as exhibited there in wax.

"It's a right novel sensation," he remarked to a friend, "this meeting yourself face to face for the first time. I don't know that I quite like it.

"This wargraph is worse, though. In the moving pictures you see yourself walking toward yourself until you're quite beside yourself. At first sight it's most alarming. It gave me a cold chill.

"My own tailor made the coat for that wax doll, and I rather wanted to see how the uniforms he made must have been looking all these years. Either the doll is better built than I am, or else that tailor knows his business The coat fits like a glove. It would have been a Godsend down in Havana when I was wearing borrowed coats after my own were gone. The wax doll rather had the best of me."

THE L. L. C. TRIP

A merry party of ladies, members of the Ladies Literary Club drove to Waterloo yesterday afternoon. They went by invitation of the Minerva Club of that place and although all of these social meetings are enjoyable, those who went pronounce this the most delightful of all. The day was lovely, the ride cool and pleasant, and the welcome most cordial. The pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Willis was thrown open to the guests, and beautifully decorated with flowers and flags. We alighted, and were ushered up the front walk and steps between rows of flags, and the hall was also artistically draped with them.

Our coming was in the nature of a surprise to the majority of the members the Minerva Club, as the affair was arranged by the executive committee, composed of the retiring officers of the club: Mrs. F. N. Beidler, Chairman; Mrs. F. W. Willis, Mrs. Sinclair, Mrs. Day and Mrs. Waterman.

The program was varied and enjoyable. As it was flag day the hostess gave a short reading on the history and origin of our flag. A song "You Stay in Your House, "I' l Stay in Mine", by two "pickaninnies," little daughters of Mrs. Artie Sinclair was very nicely done and was heartily applauded. Then came the second surprise which was the calling out of different members of both clubs for impromptu speeches. But to the credit of both clubs, the ladies rose to the occasion and acquitted themselves nobly, showing the advantages of the drill they have received in their club work. A piano duet by the Misses Maxson, a vocal soloby Mrs. Sinclair, and a piano solo by Miss Mattie Maxson, were the musical numbers, all heartily enjoyed by members and guests. The closing exercises was the singing of America by the entire company led by the "pickannies." A social hour with games was enjoyed, renewing old acquaintances and making new ones. Punch was served from a tin pail, with dipper and tin cups, to remind us of the boys in blue. Ice cream cake and strawberries composed the delicious refreshements. It was with regret that the final "good bys" were said, and we turned our faces homeward, thanking the Minerva Club for one of the most delightful afternoons ever spent by the members of the L. L. C.

BUTLER.

Rev. Frech is seriously indisposed. He was unable to fill his pulpit last Sunday and Rev. Mason of Albion, Mich., filled it for him.

The Butler Lodge of K. of P's. held decoration services last Sunday. They were well attended. Rev. Smith delivered the address which was replete with good things. The exercises at cemetery were unceremoniously stopped with a shower and the people returned to town in much haste, and not a few summer fabrics were rendered unsightly and a hasty change of attire rendered very necessary.

A. J. Price has so far improved as to be able to come up town.

Columbus Chapman, a well known resident of Franklin township, a veteran of the Mexican war was buried from the M. E. church at Butler, last Friday Rev. Mason officiating. His remains were laid to rest in the Butler cemetery east of town. He leaves a wife and several grown up children to mourn his loss.

Sarah Warner, an aged lady living on east Green street is dangerously ill with meager hopes of recovery.

Kinney & Son who were burned out at Hamilton recently will move to Butler and erect a good mill and try their fortune again. Our people welcome them with outstretched hands filled with $500 of good money.

This is the way the typo made me spell "Hamilton" last week, "H. A. Mitton."

Cards are out for a big wedding this week. The contracting parties are Liston Harding and Dessie Knisely youngest daughter of T. J. Knisely. The writer joins their hosts of friends in wishing them long life and happiness.

MODERN GUNS.

Speaking of modern cannon such as used in this war. Harpers Weekly says:

"Cannon-balls" are now obsolete, all modern projectiles being long and pointed. Solid shot is rarely used, the common forms being shell and shrapnel. A shell has a bursting charge of powder inside of it, and so has shrapnel, but the latter also has in it a number of small shot, which scatter when it is exploded. Both are exploded by fuses, either on impact or at the expiration of a fixed time, according as a percussion or a time fuse, being exploded by the heat generated in passing through armor.

Guns are fired by means of primers, either percussion of electric. The recoil is taken up by means of hydraulic cylinders, in which a piston, moving with the gun, is checked by a liquid cushion.

The powder used in the larger guns is really not powder at all, but a collection of hexagonal prisms, about an inch in diameter, and brown in color. Smokeless powder comes in sticks resembling mouth-glue, or some kinds of taffy. The old-fashioned black powder is now used only for saluting proposes, or as bursting charges for shells, although some of the many higher explosives are now often used in the latter, in which cases their destructive power is greatly enhanced.

A HOBO STORY.

(Laporte Argus.)

Jake Gross, who claims to be the hobo mother of the chief of police of Rome, N. Y., was in a peck of trouble Sunday night. Jake arrived here on Friday night and the appearance of the place pleased him. The box cars were convenient to the center of the beautiful city and he found that there was easy communication between them and the beer base of supplies. He therefore decided to tarry in La-Porte so long as the citizens supplied him with money enough to buy a can now and then. The citizens were very good to him yesterday for he managed to get comfortably loaded. In this condition he sought his temporary domicile, a box car on the Lake Shore track, near Madison street. This was about 10 o'clock last night. He had after many attempts succeeded in lifting himself to the floor and his last leg was just about to be drawn through the door when it was siezed and the holder attempted to draw him back. Jake, by a violent effort, pulled himself free and then several other hoboes jumped in the car and opened an assault on him.

They battered him in approved fashion until one eye was closed and several abrasions were upon his face. They then stripped him of his shoes and pants, which unfortunately for him were both of good quality, and tumbled him out of the car. Gross then commenced his airy march to the city to look for sympathy and assistance. The Lake Shore employes saw him and sent word to Lieut. Bongerz who instructed Night Policeman Fred Clark to take the man in charge and give him lodging at the jail until his nakedness could be covered. Fred did so, and with the assistance of an Argus reported lodged him in jail. The beating he received sobered him somewhat but he was still in a very unsteady condition and his march from the depot to State street would have created a sensation had it been accomplished in daylight.

Chickamauga Stories.

Co. G. of the 160th, has a mascot, says the Columbia City Mail. It is known as "G" and is a water Spaniel. G is getting on excellent terms with the men. He seems to have been by nature a military dog. It took him a little time to get accustomed to routine but now, when the bugle calls for any formation, he runs from where he may be lying to take his place in the line of the file closers. At every dress parade the dog "dog marches out with the rest of the company." He remains in attention at the rear of the company until the parade is over, then trots back, in his proper place, to the company street where he breaks ranks without waiting for command. Company G, has a good mascot and is proud of him.

The Ohio boys stood the march to Ringgold poorly, the head of their regiment coming in as a company of stragglers, with the rear of the column four hours behind. All were exhausted, the wagons and ambulances being loaded to their utmost capacity. When the One-hundred-and-fifty-seventh-Indiana came up, it was with a full band at the head, playing "Oh, Ain't I Glad I'm a Hoosier." The ranks were even, the men fresh and ready for another ten miles and no stragglers.

The 157th Regt. Ind. Vols was transported from Ringgold to Tampa on a train that comprised three sections. Col. Studebaker was on the first section and Quartermaster Huteon brought up the year with the third section. During the trip, Lieut. Huston telegraphed Col. Studebaker to "order 25 coffees" (meaning 25 gallons of coffee,) for the third section. An astute telegraph operator made it read "25 coffins," which almost paralyzed Col. Studebaker, and he wired back, "Send me particulars of the accident." In due time the Colonel's consternation gave place to mirth, when the operator's blunder was explained.

DEFENSES IN RUINS.

SAMPSON SHELLS FORTIFICATIONS OF SANTIAGO.

American Warships Throw a Furious Torrent of Deadly Projectiles—Spaniards Admit Serious Damage and Loss—Landing of Troops Under Fire.

Spanish Guns Silenced.

Washington special:

The news from Santiago Tuesday was of a stirring character. The bombardment of the fortifications at the mouth of the harbor, which began on Saturday, was resumed Monday morning at 7:30 and continued until 11 o'clock. Evidently the attack was intended to cover the landing, probably of marines, from the fleet, whose purpose it was to establish a depot, land supplies and siege guns, communicate with the insurgents, and prepare the way for the invasion by the army.

The bottled-up Cervera, who would send as roseate a dispatch as possible, reported to the Spanish Government that six American vessels had bombarded the fortifications and Santiago, but that the damage was "unimportant," though he conceded that six men were killed and seventeen wounded on the Reina Mercedes, which would indicate that important damage was inflicted upon that cruiser and that three officers were killed and eighteen soldiers wounded, probably in the engagement with the marines. Admiral Sampson, on the other hand, notified the Navy Department that the forts were bombarded and "entirely silenced," which would not have been the case had the damage been unimportant, as asserted by the Spanish admiral. It is evident there were no casualties on our side or any damage to the fleet, or he would have been likely to mention them.

GENERAL DON ARSENIO LINARES.
Commander of the Spanish troops at Santiago.

Other and unofficial reports state that immense damage was inflicted upon the enemy, that the cruiser Reina Mercedes was badly crippled, and that the Morro, Socapa and Punta Gorda forts were substantially demolished. The havoc wrought by the fleet is further demonstrated by the successful landing of the marines, which appears to have been made at Aguadores, a little to the east of the entrance of the bay. The forts being silenced and the Spanish fleet bottled up, it will be possible to land the troops, which are already on the sea, and make a close attack upon Santiago itself.

Admiral Sampson does not seem to be happy unless he can give his men daily practice in gunnery at the expense of Spanish fortifications. Nothing gratifies him and his sailors more than to see masonry and earthworks melting away before the irresistible impact of huge shells. Having made dust heaps of the defenses of Santiago harbor Monday and sunk the cruiser Reina Mercedes, five of its sailors and twenty-nine of its marines being killed, as the Spaniards admit, he turned his attention Tuesday to the defenses of Guantanamo bay, the first important harbor to the east of Santiago de Cuba.

Five American vessels paid their respects to those defenses so energetically that they were annihilated. The demoralized Spaniards are reported to have evacuated hurriedly the positions held by them and to have given orders for the burning of the town of La Caimanera, which lies near the entrance to the bay, in case the Americans attempted to occupy it. The sole object of Tuesday's operations, however, was to cut the cable at Guantanamo and thus complete the isolation of Santiago.

Wednesday Admiral Sampson resumed operations at Santiago. After worrying the Spaniards by a heavy artillery fire he landed some of his marines, and they, acting in conjunction with the insurgents, [illegible] the Spanish at several points. They succeeded in capturing a fort which controls the bay of Aguadores and hoisted the Stars and Stripes there. Artillery was landed and the captured position strongly fortified. The Spanish troops fought in a half-hearted way, and if a few regiments of American soldiers had been on the ground they would have made short work of the enemy and of Santiago. The stories of heavy American losses are untrue. The insurgents under Gen. Garcia are doing good work. So will those under Gomez when American soldiers back them up.

REINA MERCEDES.

SUES SPANISH SPIES.

Carranza and Du Bosc Are Arrested in Montreal.

Senor Juan Du Bosc and Lieut. Ramon de Carranza, admittedly the heads of the Spanish spy system in America, were arrested at Montreal in the Spanish consulate. After three hours of hurrying messages bail was secured and the diplomats were again free. It is said that the manager of the Bank of Montreal signed the bonds. The immediate cause of the trouble is a representation made by Detective Kellert that the two diplomats had damaged his character to the extent of $25,000 each by having him arrested on the charge of stealing the famous document now in the hands of the Washington authorities.

Jumps a Trial.

The first deserter to be captured and who was to be first tried by court martial for desertion has made his escape. He is John Tate, the young man who went on the Lacret expedition to fight with the insurgents. He was detained aboard the Florida when it returned, after landing the other insurgents, and at night he took one of the Florida's boats and rowed ashore.

UNITED STATES TROOPS BOARDING TRANSPORTS AT TAMPA.

UNDER A HOT FIRE.

Every Spanish Gun at Santiago Was Trained on the Merrimac.

Commander Miller, who commanded the collier Merrimac before she was turned over to Lieut. Hobson to be sunk, and several officers of the vessel came aboard the Mayflower and told in detail the story of the sinking of the ship.

When the Merrimac started toward the harbor the flash of a single gun on the Morro was seen from the deck of the New York, though the report could not be heard. It was followed in a few moments by sheets of fire all along the shore. The Spaniards had evidently turned every gun on the ship. The Merrimac went straight on to a point where the channel was only 400 feet wide. Shot and shell were falling all about her, but none seemed to hit her. When this narrow point in the harbor was reached Lieut. Hobson headed her in shore, and dropped an anchor only a few feet from the shore.

Before starting the life raft of the Merrimac had been prepared, and torpedoes were ready along the deck. The Merrimac had seven transverse bulkheads. Torpedoes were arranged so that they could be quickly anchored over the side of the vessel ten feet below the water line, and in such a position that when they exploded they would tear out every bulkhead. This was to make it absolutely impossible ever to raise her again.

The moment the anchor was dropped Lieut. Hobson and her crew dropped these torpedoes over the side and then opened every seacock there was in the ship and all the port holes. Meantime the guns kept booming and the flash of the burning powder lit up the harbor, so rapid was the firing. The fleet was so far off shore that they did not hear the guns, but could tell by the flashes of the hotness of the fire.

The current was running out of the harbor and as the Merrimac lay at anchor she swung lazily around with it. Everything was open and she had begun to fill before she was broadside in the passage. Hobson and his men waited patiently until they could drop another anchor, this one from the stern, so that it would hold her directly across the passage. She was so long that there was only thirty-one feet of channel on each side that she did not occupy.

Hobson and his men launched the life raft and dropped down on board it, taking with them the wires with which the torpedoes were to be exploded. The thunder of the shore batteries and the rattle and clash of musketry continued. The water was foaming with the commotion made by the shells and bullets. Hobson and his men floated down stream 150 yards, dragging the wires out after them. This was the distance for the contact to be made and it was then done. The water about the Merrimac was lifted up by the explosion and when it had settled again the ship was at the bottom of the passage.

ON TO PORTO RICO.

An Invasion of the Island Has Been Determined Upon.

The campaign against Porto Rico has been determined upon. The expedition which started from Tampa goes in two sections, one to land on the north coast, not far from San Juan, and the other on the south coast at Ponce, which has a fine harbor and a military road connecting it with San Juan. Ponce is about seventy-five miles from San Juan, but this military road runs through the best portion of the Island, and troops marching that way could clean out all Spanish garrisons found in the towns in the interior. They could also gather up many insurgents to swell the army into formidable proportions by the time it reached San Juan. It is expected that such a campaign will destroy Spain's hold on Porto Rico completely by the time San Juan is bombarded by Sampson and compelled to surrender.

The Sunken Reina Mercedes.

The Reina Mercedes, admitted by the authorities in Madrid to have been sunk by the American fleet in Santiago bay, was a cruiser that had been dismantled and which was used as a defense vessel. Her cruising armament had been greatly strengthened. The Mercedes was raked by a 13-inch shell from one of Uncle Sam's battleships, and the Madrid reports describe the shell as doing terrible destruction. It disabled her machinery and killed sixty of her crew and one of her officers.

SMASHED BY OREGON'S SHELL.

Sinking of the Spanish Destroyer Terror Off Santiago.

The Spanish torpedo boat destroyer Terror and her crew of sixty men lie at the bottom of the sea, sent there by a single shell from a thirteen-inch gun of the battleship Oregon. Not a sign of the vessel has been seen since she tried to run into Santiago Monday night. That she was destroyed with all hands there is no practical doubt. That the destroyed vessel was the Terror, left behind at Martinique, since reported at Porto Rico, and trying to rejoin Admiral Cervera, is probable.

She was first detected by the New Orleans, which was on guard at the eastern end of the blockading fleet. The New Orleans threw her searchlight on the stranger, but the latter slipped from under its beams. The New York and the Marblehead, which were next in line, were signaled, and the alarm was passed to all the fleet. The flanking vessels were ordered to close in and the New York, Brooklyn and Oregon steamed toward the shore in pursuit. The Spaniard was still crowding on all speed and hugging the shore, and was now only a mile from the Cuban entrance. But the New York lay full across her path, and escape was impossible. Then the Oregon got the range after several efforts. A 13-inch shell from the Oregon struck the plucky Spanish craft full amidships. The chase was ended, and the Spanish vessel was only a tangled mass of steel on the sea bottom. The searchlights showed only black water where the native had been. The guns which had waked the echoes of the cliffs for nearly an hour, were silent. The midnight tragedy of which some three score Spanish sailors were victims was ended, and the American warships moved out to sea. The Maine had been remembered.

MANILA WILL FALL.

Philippine Captain General Notifies Spanish Government.

The Spanish Government received a dispatch from the captain general of the Philippine Islands in which he said that the situation was very serious, almost desperate. Aguinaldo, the rebel leader, has succeeded in raising the whole country. The completeness of his plans is such that on a given day last week the entire province of Cavite was suddenly placed under arms and all the chief villages were occupied by the rebels, fighting preceding the occupation in many instances. A Spanish column is guarding the Zapote river for the purpose of preventing an invasion of Manila province, but it is not thought probable that it will be able to keep back the insurgents, who are pressing in from all sides, coming from Bulucan, Morong and Laguna.

Captain General Augusti concludes his dispatch thus: "The capital will be besieged by land and sea. I shall try to resist to the last, but I have no confidence in the result. Numbers of volunteers and native soldiers are deserting to the rebels." Captain General Augusti confirms the statement that the rebels have captured Bacor and Imus. It is stated that Gen. Augusti has taken refuge in the walled part of Manila, where he intends to make a last stand in the event of attack.

More Money in Circulation.

The amount of gold and silver coins and certificates and United States and national bank notes in circulation June 1 was $1,839,898,256, an increase of $180,164,361 over that of June 1 last year. The increase for the month of May is $33,136,814. Based on an estimated population of 74,389,000, the circulation per capita is $24.73. The amount of national bank notes in circulation May 31 was $227,612,845, a decrease compared with the similar date last year of $4,177,306, and an increase for the month of May of $1,582,709.

BIG LOSS OF LIFE.

Belief that Scores of Spaniards Perished at Santiago.

There is scarcely any doubt that much greater damage than was at first supposed was inflicted upon the Spaniards in Santiago harbor during Sampson's bombardment. Many shells are believed to have fallen into the city itself, and when all the facts are known after the port has fallen into Admiral Sampson's hands it will probably be found that the loss of life was very great.

Even with the meager facts at hand it can be stated that this is the result of the bombardment: The formidable Estrella and Cavo batteries were completely wrecked. The Spanish cruiser Mercedes was sunk. United States forces were landed at Daiquiri, a short distance east of Aquadores, where they are now intrenched. These forces have formed a junction with the insurgents under Gen. Garcia. Several Spanish military and naval officers were killed and wounded. The Spanish loss of soldiers and marines was heavy. The city itself is at the mercy of Admiral Sampson.

The bombarding vessels formed in two divisions, the one under Rear Admiral Sampson being led by the flagship New York. This division turned eastward in front of the harbor, the flagship being followed by the battleships Oregon and Iowa, the cruiser New Orleans, the Dolphin and the Yankee. The other division, under Commodore Schley on the Brooklyn, turned eastward with the battleships Massachusetts and Texas, the cruiser Marblehead, the Vixen and the Suwanee following in the order named.

From all these vessels there was a terrific fire for nearly three hours. The batteries on the western entrance to the harbor are on a crest 180 feet above the water. This high elevation made them difficult to hit, but the entire hill was plowed up by the heavy shells. In many cases the shells are known to have passed over the hill and undoubtedly struck the city itself, as well as the shipping in the harbor. Thirty-four shells were fired from the Iowa's 12-inch guns and thirty-eight shells from her 8-inch guns. There were a few shots from her secondary battery. Other vessels engaged in the bombardment fired a proportionate number of shots, and as every one was well aimed the damage done must have been tremendous.

VAST ARMY MOVING.

Twenty-six Thousand Men Under Gen. Shafter Hurried to Santiago.

The last of the first expedition to Cuba left Tampa Monday night, forty-six transports carrying 26,000 men with horses, wagons, artillery, siege guns and all necessary equipments and supplies for a campaign of six months. Gen. Shafter is in command. Twenty thousand troops went from Mobile. Assuming that forty-six transports can take 26,000 men to Cuba in seven days, and giving them three days to unload and four days to get back to Tampa, which is a very short time, two weeks will be used up in the round trip. It will require another week for them to take on the second load and seven days more to land it in Cuba, or ten days if they are going to Porto Rico. The present fleet of transports will therefore require at least fifteen weeks, or until the middle of September, to transfer 100,000 men, or one-third of our army, across the gulf stream.

McKINLEY'S TERMS OF PEACE.

Will Demand Possession of Puerto Rico, Manila and Cavite.

The terms upon which the President is now reported to be willing to negotiate peace with Spain, and which are said to be generally acceptable to the Senators who must ratify the treaty before it can have effect, include, aside from the establishment of a stable and independent government in Cuba, the possession of Porto Rico as a war indemnity and full payment for all claims for damages by American citizens against Spain, a naval base in the Ladrone islands and one in the Caroline islands.

The determination to secure a naval base and port in the Philippines means that Cavite and Manila are to become American possessions. Cavite is the only naval base worth having in the islands and Manila is the only port. It is considered to mean the control and possession of the entire island of Luzon, for the control of the surrounding country is regarded by the administration as essential to the protection of Manila.

SPANIARDS BEATEN AT MANILA.

They have captured and are holding as prisoners the governors of the provinces of Cavite and Batangas. A spy, who is in the employ of the Americans, says that Captain General Augusti wanted to surrender to Admiral Dewey, but his officers opposed such action, and persuaded him to make a further resistance. One Spanish regiment has mutinied, and shot some of the officers.

Moccasins for His Dogs.

A gentleman who has been engaged in freighting in the interior of Alaska for a number of years with dog teams, informs the Nanaimo Review that it is absolutely necessary to have moccasins for the feet of the canines to protect them from the snow and ice. The gentleman referred to is preparing to run a freighting outfit through to Fort McKinney in a short time, and besides moccasins for the feet of his dogs he has large fur robes for them to sleep in. The gentleman treats his canine friends and servants as if they were human beings, and they show their appreciation of such treatment.—Spokane (Wash.) Review.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS.

From the Free Press, Detroit, Mich.

A prominent business man recently expressed the opinion that there is one thing will prevent women from completely filling man's place in the business world—they can't be depended upon because they are sick too often. This is refuted by Mrs. C. W. Mansfield, a business woman of 58 Farrar street, Detroit, Mich., who says: "A complication of female ailments kept me awake nights and wore me out. I could get no relief from medicine and hope was slipping away from me. A young lady in my employ gave me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I took them and was able to rest at night for the first time in months. I bought more and took them, and they cured me as they also cured several other people to my knowledge. I think that if you should ask any of the druggists of Detroit who are the best buyers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, they would say the young women. These pills certainly build up the nervous system and many a young woman owes her life to them. "As a business woman I am pleased to recommend them as they did more for me than any physician, and I can give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People credit for my general good health to-day." No discovery of modern times has done so much to enable women to take their proper place in life by safeguarding their health as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions, they restore the strength and health to the exhausted woman when every effort of the physician proves unavailing.

For paralysis, locomotor ataxia, and other diseases long supposed incurable, these pills have proved their efficacy in thousands of cases.

SHERMAN IN RETIREMENT.

How the Famous Old Statesman Is Spending His Declining Days.

Every evening after dinner an old man sits at the library window in his handsome white stone house, in K street, Washington, and watches the people as they pass along the street or gazes abstractedly at the beautiful park across the way, says a correspondent. He holds a cigar in his hand, but he seems to smoke little. He sits there quietly till the man comes in to turn on the lights. Then he gets up and seats himself by the table covered with the papers of the day and his favorite books, or goes upstairs to join his family in the sitting-room. This is John Sherman, the statesman who has been a conspicuous figure in the affairs of the nation for more than two score years, and is now entering upon a period of well-earned rest.

An old neighbor or a distant relative can always find the way through the cold formality of Sherman's manner to his kindly heart. Although he will probably make occasional visits to his old home in Ohio, Mr. Sherman will continue to live in Washington. He has established his home there, and has made large investments in real estate and other Washington properties.

EX-SECRETARY OF STATE SHERMAN.

THE MOSQUITO'S SONG.

A Madrigal, Not a War Cry—How to Catch the Finger.

You can best observe the mosquito in action by letting one settle undisturbed on the back of your hand, and waiting while she fills herself with your blood; you can easily watch her doing so with a pocket lens. Like the old lady in "Pickwick," she is soon "swelling visibly." She gorges herself with blood, indeed, which she straightway digests, assimilates, and converts into 300 eggs. But if, while she is sucking, you gently and unobtrusively tighten the skin of your hand by clenching your fist hard, you will find that she cannot any longer withdraw her mandibles; they are caught fast in your flesh by their own harpoon-like teeth, and there she must stop accordingly till you choose to release her. If you then kill her in the usual manner, by a smart slap of the hand, you will see that she is literally full of blood, having sucked a good drop of it.

The humming sound itself by which the mosquito announces her approaching visit is produced in two distinct manners. The deeper notes which go to make up her droning song are due to the rapid vibration of the female insect's wings as she flies; and these vibrations are found by means of a siren (an instrument which measures the frequency of the waves in notes) to amount to about 3,000 in a minute. The mosquito's wings must therefore move with this extraordinary rapidity, which sufficiently accounts for the difficulty we have in catching one. But the higher and shriller notes of the complex melody are due to special stridulating organs situated like little drums on the openings of the air tubes; for the adult mosquito breathes no longer by one or two air entrances on the tail or back, like the larva, but by a number of spiracles, as they are called, arranged in rows along the sides of the body and communicating with the network of internal air chambers.

The curious mosquito music thus generated by the little drums serves almost beyond a doubt as a means of attracting male mosquitoes, for it is known that the long hairs on the antennae of the males vibrate sympathetically in unison with the notes of a tuning-fork, within the range of the sounds emitted by the female. In other words, hair and drums just answer to one another. We may, therefore, reasonably conclude that the female sings in order to please and attract her wandering mate, and that the antennae of the male are organs of hearing which catch and respond to the buzzing music she pours forth for her lover's ears. A whole swarm of gnats can be brought down, indeed, by uttering the appropriate note of the race; you can call them somewhat as you can call male glowworms by showing a light which they mistake for the female.—Strand Magazine.

SCYTHES IN A CHURCH.

Cromwell's Men Used Them with Terrible Effect in a Battle at Winceby.

In the seventeenth century, when Oliver Cromwell was a power in England, agricultural implements were turned into swords, and did a great deal of damage. Cromwell fought a great many battles, but one of the bloodiest of them was the battle of Winceby. It was at this contest between the Puritans and Royalists that scythes were used, and some of the implements that were wielded with such terrible effect are now to be seen in the church of St. Mary, Horncastle, as depicted in the illustration.

It appears that the scythes were collected after the battle. Local history records that a narrow road near Winceby is still known as "Slash Lane," owing to the numbers which fell on this memorable occasion. Over 500 were slaughtered in one place, owing to a gate being closed through which they were attempting to pass. These scythes and hay knives, some of which yet remain in the shafts to which they were affixed in order to render them the more formidable as weapons of defense, are placed against the wall, over the north entrance, inside St. Mary's Church, and are in a fair state of preservation.

A queer story comes from Springfield, Mass. A minister of that city, it is said, received his bicycle as a present from the company on condition that it should be advertised by him from the pulpit. AN OPERATION AVOIDED.

Mrs. Rosa Gaum Writes to Mrs. Pinkham About it. She Says:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I take pleasure in writing you a few lines to inform you of the good your Vegetable Compound has done me. I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me; it has, indeed, helped me wonderfully. For years I was troubled with an ovarian tumor, each year growing worse, until at last I was compelled to consult with a physician. He said nothing could be done for me but to go under an operation.

In speaking with a friend of mine about it, she recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, saying she knew it would cure me. I then sent for your medicine, and after taking three bottles of it, the tumor disappeared. Oh! you do not know how much good your medicine has done me. I shall recommend it to all suffering women.—Mrs. ROSA GAUM, 720 Wall St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Soap Sharing

isn't pleasant to think of. It's slovenly and unclean. But how are you going to be sure that your soap is used only by yourself? Particular people use Pyle's Pearline. That solves the problem. They fill a salt shaker or sifter with Pearline. Then they use that instead of soap, for the toilet or the bath, with no fear of using it after anybody else. A Pearline bath is like a Turkish bath in freshening you and bracing you up. 553

AN ERROR

Some of the members of Co. K. who failed to pass the physical examination are not suited to see Tom Stoy reported in the list with those who drew full pay for all the time from the date of leaving Auburn, to the day of examination, because Stoy had come home voluntarily, and so should have lost the time from the date of his leaving camp, to the date of his re-enlistment. But this is just what he did lose. But as he re-enlisted he got pay for the time then till he was examined in addition to his original three days allowed to those who did not enlist at all. In the report we published his name appeared among those who were examined and failed to pass, as that was the proper place for him after he had re-enlisted. But he did not get the same amount the others in his list got, as nothing was allowed for the time that elapsed after the three days allowed on the first enlistment had expiree, till he reenlisted. In putting him into his proper list we made the mistake of crediting him with more pay than he got.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

There was a meeting here yesterday of the republican county committee to fix a date for holding their county convention. It was decided to hold it on Thursday Sept. 1, at Butler. This ridiculous idea of moving the conventions about, to parts of the county remote from the center and where many inconveniences must be suffered, seems to have caught the republicans as well as the democrats. Committeemen should remember that 300 to 400 delegates are interested in the matter of location, some of whom will have to travel twenty miles to reach Butler or Garrett. Waterloo is more convenient and has a better hall, but no place suits as well as does Auburn. Let us stop this foolishness and settle these important meetings down where the people at large want them.

PATRIOTIC CARRIAGE.

The Kiblinger Company are now getting out the most elaborate and attractive carriage they have ever turned out. It might be styled a "patriotic carriage," as it will show on its sides, lovely and unique designs in which are united the Cuban and American flags arranged with fine artistic taste and the entire outfit will be a thing of beauty and patriotic sentiment. We did not learn who would get this fine turnout.

WORTHY TRIBUTE

To Dr. Wheeler and the Product of His Life's Labor and Research.

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

If you seek for a reason for the unquestionable popularity of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, you learn that it is due wholly to the merit of the preparation in making sick nerves strong and vigorous and through them the organs active and healthy.

It has reached the pinnacle of success in the science of medicine and is without a rival. This fact is proven by the thousands who have regained health by it after thorough tests, and failures of other Nervines, Compounds and Sarsaparillas.

No claim is made for Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer that is not accompanied by convincing evidence. In this case Geo. S. Beck, River Styx, O., furnishes the proof. He says: "Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is certainly a wonderful remedy. Less than one bottle cured my wife of sleeplessness and nervousness of a very serious nature. I, myself, had a very uncomfortable time from the effect of LaGripp, which was an aggravating nervous trouble. Sometimes I felt as if I would rather be dead than alive to endure it. One bottle of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer cured me and I gained twenty-five pounds in a very short time. I could add several pages to this stating the merits of the remedy from my own observation. I would not be without it in my house if possible to get it."

It is a specific for sick nerves.

FROM THE BOYS.

PORT TAMPA, FLA., June 3, '98.
MRS. ROY C. GARRETT,
Cedarville, Indiana.

DEAR WIFE:—We left Chickamauga Park Wednesday morning at 9 a. m., marched ten miles to a small place by the name of Ringgold, Ga., where we waited until 11 p. m., for our train which was made up of Pullman Palace car sleepers. When I struck a thing that looked like a bed I thought I had the nightmare, nevertheless we were thankful and pleased to think we were so fortunate. The engines that pulled us down here were fired with pine wood, and had to stop every hour and load up with wood. We were on the way from 11 p. m. Wednesday until today (Friday) 11:45 a. m.

We are camped within thirty rods of the Gulf of Mexico. I was bathing in the Gulf about five minutes after we got here and it was the finest bath I have had for some time.

We have not yet put up our tents for the reason that our wagons have not been unloaded, our tents are loaded in the wagons and the wagon loaded on flat cars.

I saw three Cubans here about noon, they carry knives about two feet and a half long. They are taking a party of New Yorkers to join Gen. Gomezs in Cuba.

I do not think we will be here more than ten days or two weeks at the most and probably not that long. We will go to Porto Rico or Cuba but do not know which yet. From where we are camped we can see them loading boats for Cuba and Porto Rico, and the troops all over the camp here are preparing to start, they say there is one hundred thousand camped here now and they are still coming in by the train load; so I do not think you will have to worry, for Uncle Sam is going to put enough soldiers in Cuba to eat up all the Spaniards, and I know we will all get back o. k. and very soon I think.

Well dear, I will have to close as I see the wagon, that carry the tents are here now and we will have to put up our tents. I will write you soon again. Our address now is, Co. K 157 Ind. Vol. U. S. A. Port Tampa, Fla.

From your husband,
ROY GARRETT.

SCOTT SHOEMAKER

After long and almost unparalled suffering, Scott Shoemaker. died this morning at about 5:15. Our readers will remember his sickness, dating back to some time last summer or fall. In spite of care and medical skill, he grew slowly worse, and at times was at the point of deat. He was finally brought from his home on the old farm in Smithfield, to that of his father, Commissioner Shoemaker, in Waterloo as he had become so helpless. Later he was taken to Fort, under the hope that an operation for appendicitis would relieve him, for that appears to have been his disease. But he continued so weak that it was not considered advisable, and two or three weeks later, he was taken back to Waterloo. Since then, his condition has been somewhat variable. At times he would seem considerably better only to fall back a few days later, each time appearing to get weaker. His great vitality and courage, seem to have kept him alive so long.
